TORONTO YOUTH SERIOUSLY WOUNDS SWEETHEART'S FRIEND

Because Ester Hazel Had Advised Alma Tucker to Have Nothing to do With Him, George Neilson Fires Three Shots at Miss Hazel on the Street.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—In a jealous rage because she had sought to estrange his sweetheart from him, George Neilson, 19 years, an employe of the Massey-Harris Co., living at 737 West King street, opened fire upon Esther Hazel, 19 years, 15 Henderson street, with a revolver in the full glare of an electric light at Clinton and Henderson streets at 9.45 last night.

The girl is in Grace Hospital suffering from three or possibly four bullet wounds, but will live.

Neilson was arrested at the home of his sweetheart, Alma Tucker, 19 years, 826 West Queen street, who was present when he did the shooting.

Last evening Miss Tucker had tea at the Hazel house and later in the evening Richard Howarth, butcher boy, a friend of Miss Hazel, called there.

The three went out for a walk and just as they stepped into the street, they met Neilson, who joined the party. He asked Howarth and the Hazel girl to walk in front and they walked on a few paces in advance of Neilson, who was with Miss Tucker.

At Clinton street Miss Hazel with Howarth started to cross diagonally to the northwest and just as she stepped into the roadway, Neilson drew the revolver and opened fire. Miss Tucker said later that she heard three shots and that the wounded girl started to run and would have fallen but was caught by Howarth.

The girl was assisted home by the doctors, and later removed to Grace Hospital.

Meanwhile the police had been scouring the city to locate Neilson and finally Detectives Moffatt and Tipton found him at the home of Miss Tucker. The girl had also returned to her room. He was taken to the Esther street police station, where he is held without bail, charged with shooting with intent to kill.

Miss Tucker explained the motive by saying that Neilson and Miss Hazel were at variance because of her friendship for him. The man had been telling her for a long time that she should have nothing to do with Esther Hazel, and Miss Hazel was equally emphatic in her importunities to have her throw over the young man. Immediately after the shooting she said to Miss Tucker: "There I told you he was not the sort of man for you to have anything to do with."

RED WIDOW UNSHAKEN

Mme. Steinheil Holds Her Own in Hard Day on Stand.

Paris, Nov. 5.—Dramatic situations followed fast one upon another yesterday in the Assize Court, where the trial of Mme. Marguerite Steinheil, who is accused of having murdered her husband and her stepmother, Mme. Jappy, was continued.

In the midst of her inquisition by the presiding judge, her attorney, M. Aubin, with melodramatic effect, suddenly pushed to the forefront a man who said he wished to confess that he had taken part in the murders of which Mme. Steinheil was charged.

On further examination before a magistrate, Lefebvre said that his name is Rene Collard, and that he is an actor. He admitted that he had not the slightest connection with the crime, merely acted on a chivalrous impulse to save Mme. Steinheil, of whose innocence he was convinced. He was detained pending specifications of his identity.

As on the opening day of this sensational case, all Paris was wrought to a high tension over the promised disclosures and, although it was known that but few could pass within the precincts of the court, hundreds remained outside to watch and discuss in excited tones the progress of the case as it came to them through the newspaper extras that flooded the streets.

She refused point blank to mention the name of the late President of France, Felix Faure, the mystery of whose fatal attack of illness in her home eight years ago is the feature of international interest in the present trial.

"I had one dear, good friend," said Mme. Steinheil, softly. "But I will not mention his name."

"Tell his name! Tell all the names!" fairly shouted the Viscount de Valle, president of the court.

A summary of the day's evidence shows that the judge failed to shake Mme. Steinheil's original version of the crime. She admitted intrigue but heartily denied that she sent her mother to solicit money from her lovers; and she insisted that her husband had never profited by her own immoral life. Admitting she had done wrong, in a tearful voice she beseeched the jury to pardon her faults. She defended herself by saying that since she did not live with her husband as his wife she longed for sympathy and love.

MUST NOT SMOKE ON THE ELEVATED

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Following initial failure to abolish smoking on the Chicago and Oak Park Elevated Railroad by polite persuasion, more vigorous methods were put in practice yesterday and with success. Men who insisted on smoking as usual in spite of the guard's order to the contrary received repayment of their fares with a request that they leave the train. If still obdurate, private detectives on each train ejected the offenders.

A small riot, in which two men were injured, accompanied the ejectment of one passenger.

The matter probably will go to the courts.

MODERN SCIENCE IN ARTILLERY WARFARE

Quebec, Nov. 5.—The inauguration of modern science in artillery warfare will shortly be organized at the Quebec Citadel under the direction of Lieut.-Col. English, assisted by Capt. Mills of the Imperial army, who will shortly enter upon their duties. In the meantime a large fine building is in course of erection in the citadel, which is intended to serve as a lecture hall. This hall will be fitted with miniature forts and cannonery, and will in itself be a regular military museum. Lectures will be delivered on the science of artillery and defence of forts in case of war.

McBRIDE MAJORITY APPEARS CERTAIN

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 5—Chatting over political probabilities yesterday, J. H. Hawthornthwaite, the provincial Socialist party leader, who has continuously represented Nanaimo in the Legislature since 1900, said that the Socialists stood a good chance to secure five seats in the coming contest to be decided on the 25th.

"As for the Liberals," he added, "I can't for the life of me, see where they can get more than ten seats, conceding them every possibility as well as probability."

The maximum of success for all opposing elements would therefore still give Premier McBride a clear majority over all combinations of 12 seats in a House of 42.

PELLAGRA ALSO DUE TO BOOZE

Columbia, S.C., Nov. 5.—Not alone corn and the ordinary products of food made of that cereal but the distilled spirits of the grain, corn "licker" plays an important part in causing the dread disease pellagra.

This declaration was made at the second day's session of the National Conference on pellagra yesterday by more than one of the distinguished physicians in atendance. Among these professional men, who are here investigating what in this country is considered a "new" disease, there is a growing conviction, according to several of the speakers that pellagra already is ravaging horses, cows, hogs, etc., as well as human beings.

Last night a permanent organization entitled the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Pellagra was perfected.

TO MAKE MONEY FROM WASTE MICA

Kingston, Nov. 5.—A new industry is on the point of beginning operations at Cape Vincent, N.Y., across the St. Lawrence from here. A syndicate of Watertown men have taken hold of the business of grinding the mica waste or broken mica of the Canadian mines. The reason of the establishment of the mills is the excessive tariff laid on the finished product, $100 per ton, when sent over, where it must be sold for $40 per ton or even less.

On the mine waste and by-products unmanufactured there is no duty.

MINTO'S COUSIN TO SING IN OPERA

New York, Nov. 5.—Miss Christina Hellane, whose father is a cousin of Lord Minto, Viceroy of India, arrived here on board the Carmania of the Cunard Line, to begin a season with the Metropolitan Opera Co. She is a lyric soprano, and sang recently in Covent Garden. A contract to sing in the Royal Opera House in St. Petersburg had been offered her, she said, but she preferred to come to this country, not having been here before.

Miss Hellane, who in private life is Miss Ella Elliott, began her musical career as a violinist.

Ship's Safe Robbed.

New York, Nov. 5.—Robbers boarded the Hamburg-American liner Prince Joachim lying at her pier here two days ago, jimmied open the safe in the purser's office and got away with $7,000 in gold, consigned to the Jamaica correspondent of the Bank of Nova Scotia. It was to have been taken by the liner on her trip to the West Indies, starting Saturday.

Policeman Accidentally Shot.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—Frank L. Robinson, a Dominion policeman doing duty at the Royal Mint, was accidentally shot yesterday morning. The revolver of Constable Carroll, who was on duty with him, fell out of his belt, and went off on striking the ground. The bullet glanced, hitting Robinson in the face, near the nose.

SUFFRAGISTS GATHERED IN NEW YORK

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT ADDRESSING THE MEETING.

MRS. CLARENCE H. MACKAY

New York, Nov. 3.—Three thousand Suffragists gathered in Carnegie Hall and held the first woman's political convention this country ever has seen.

The "votes for women" representatives came from every sphere in life. The fashionable and unfashionable sat side by side, but these women were there for the purpose of finding a way not only to win the ballot but in the meantime procure certain concessions from the municipal officials, and they were deciding upon the best way of going about it.

Carnegie Hall never looked barer as to decorations, but Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the interborough Suffrage Association, which originated the convention, and carried it through, announced that it was a "plain, practical affair, without any sensational features and not even music."

TWO WITNESSES TESTIFY AT UXBRIDGE INQUEST

Witnesses at Inquiry Into Death of Mrs. McLaughlin and Children, Say That Husband Behaved in a Peculiar Manner—Leading Gay Life.

Uxbridge, Nov. 5.—The McLaughlin inquest was resumed in the fire hall last night at 7.30, before Dr. Bascom, coroner. With the exception of the jurymen, reporters, and about thirty witnesses, no one was admitted.

Mrs. Norman Beal, the first witness, stated that her husband and she were on their way home between 11 and 12 o'clock on Friday night, when they noticed McLaughlin's house on fire. They gave the alarm and ran to the house, met McLaughlin at his own door coming out of the kitchen with his little girl in a baby carriage. They immediately questioned him regarding the safety of the rest of his family, but could get no satisfactory reply. He did not appear to know what part of the house his wife was in, or whether she was in the house at all, but he thought she might be. Ladders were carried to the house by Mr. Beal, aided by Mrs. Chinn, while McLaughlin sauntered about in an apparently dazed condition. When the windows were at last broken in it was found to be too late to save the unfortunate victims. Mrs. McLaughlin and her two little boys, about two and four years of age, were taken out of the burning building at 2 o'clock, dead. It was the opinion of the witness that all three might have been got out by 12 o'clock had their location been definitely known to Messrs. Beal and Lee, as there was found to be in easy way of access to Mrs. McLaughlin's room, over a back kitchen roof. This information was at last obtained from the little daughter, Monta, in the baby carriage. The evidence of Mrs. Beal was fully corroborated by Mrs. Chinn, Mr. Lee, and others. The firemen found the body of Mrs. McLaughlin lying, as asleep, with the hands folded over her breast, and the bed clothing unruffled. The poor little babes were lying under the bed.

James Alexander, merchant, testified that McLaughlin had been dismissed from his service as bookkeeper owing to abuse of confidence.

Several other witnesses gave evidence to the effect that McLaughlin had been for some time paying his attentions to other young women, to the neglect of his wife and family.

The inquest adjourned at midnight.

MONTREAL FAMILY'S AWFUL DESTITUTION

Montreal, Nov. 5.—In a lane off Richmond street yesterday a family was found, the mother ill and terribly emaciated, a nine-months-old infant dead beside her on the bed, and six other children all far gone from starvation. IS BROTHER OF A QUEBEC MAN

Quebec, Nov. 5.—Col. Talbot, M.P., has received news which shows that Alfred E Talbot, dangerously wounded by his wife in Reno, Nevada, is his brother.

Alfred Talbot is a miser and bookmaker, a well-known sporting man, and quite well-to-do. He recently had trouble with his wife, who sued him for divorce. The two were in a lawyer's office a day or two ago arranging about the divorce case, when a disagreement occurred over the financial arrangements. In the heat of the dispute, Mrs. Talbot drew a revolver and shot her husband twice, one ball passing through one of his lungs. It is believed he will die.

Mrs. Talbot is an actress and a very beautiful woman, and sang in Ottawa once last winter.

C.P.R. ENGINEER KILLED IN WOODS

North Bay, Nov. 5.—Robert William Dickie, C.P.R engineer of Chapleau, was accidentally shot while deer hunting near Potamasing on the C.P.R., 135 miles west of North Bay. The accident resulted from the gun of a companion being trailed on the ground. A twig catching the trigger and the contents entered Dickie's back, causing almost instant death. The deceased was thirty-five years of age, and leaves a wife and four children.

MARTIN KAUFMAN IS UNDER ARREST

Berlin, Nov. 5.—Martin Kaufman of New York was arrested last night by former U. S. Postoffice Inspector Hill, on a charge of fraud amounting to $107,000, in connection with the Cotton Goods Converters' Co. of New York. The case has many ramifications. Kaufman for a long time was considered one of the most trustworthy business men of New York. His partner, M. A. Isaacs, had such implicit confidence in Kaufman's integrity that, according to Hill, he induced a number of his friends to take shares in the business. One of these friends was named Blum, a Cincinnati merchant, who put in $27,000. Others invested smaller sums.

TEN YEARS FOR HORSE THEFT

Cornwall, Nov. 5.—Ten years in the Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence handed Cyrus E. Seymour, here by Judge O'Reilly for stealing a horse and rig from Albert Fulton, of Chesterville on Oct. 18. Seymour drove the horse to Aiver Beaudette by way of Cornwall, and under the name of R. B. Foster, consigned the outfit to R. B. Hamilton, Montreal, under which name he again took possession and endeavored to dispose of the horse and rig at a sales stable. The horse had been driven so hard that it died.

He was advanced to the peerage, with the title of Lord Pentland, a couple of years ago. He is a son-in-law of Lord Aberdeen.

NEW GOLD DIGGINGS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 5.—Rich placer diggings, not fifty miles from Victoria—diggings from which coarse gold, in grains like wheat, with occasional little nuggets—is being taken, are reported.

The mining field will be shipping its clean-up to Victoria banks in the course of the next six months, reports Railway Contractor M. B. Carlin.

The camp is at Sombrio River, a mysterious stream midway between the Jordan and the San Juan, which debouches into an unexplored cavern of Titanic magnitude. The gold is found in magnetic iron sand. The "pans" run up to 40 cents each.

ROBBERS GET AWAY WITH BIG HAUL AT NIAGARA FALLS, ONT.

Stranger Asks Cashier Dobson About a Trunk and While Latter is Bent Over Knocks Him Insensible With Gaspipe—Robbers Walk Leisurely Away.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 5.—On the pretext of looking for a trunk, a man went into the Canadian Express office at five o'clock last night, and while the cashier was looking up the records, struck him over the head with a loaded pipe, knocking him out, and disappeared with a parcel of money containing $14,165. The money came from the banks in this city, and consisted of old bills which were being sent to headquarters for cancellation.

William Dobson, the cashier, was alone in the little brick office situated a few feet west of the G.T. station, making up the parcel of money for the 4.55 p.m. Grand Trunk train, when the man entered and asked if a trunk was there for him. A companion stood on guard at the door.

Dobson had just come out of the money cage with the money, intending to take it to the express car on train 25, which was just about ready to leave. He placed the packages on a back counter in the office and asked the stranger his name.

He could not make out the name as the man did not enunciate clearly.

He asked the name a second time, and still being unable to make it out, he stooped down behind the public counter to get the record book in the hope that it would assist him. This was the opportunity the stranger sought. The ruse had worked perfectly. With a movement like lightning he drew from his overcoat a piece of inch steel pipe about a foot and a half long, bound with insulating tape, and loaded at the top, and struck Cashier Dobson a terrific blow over the head. The cashier sank to the floor without a groan and the stranger jumped over the counter, picked up the package of money and walked leisurely out of the office. Dobson's scalp was split open, and he was rendered unconscious.

The pair strolled nonchalently up the tracks and disappeared. Outside the office were a number of railroad men and attaches of the express office, but the robbers were so cool and deliberate in their behavior that they did not attract any attention.

The train outside was awaiting to depart and several seconds later the express messenger asked one of the clerks to see if Dobson had the money ready. R. Bruce Brown, the agent, and the clerk went into the office to tell the cashier to hurry and on getting there found a pitiful sight. With the blood flowing from the gash, Dobson lay unconscious on the floor, with instrument beside him. Clerks and police tried to get Dobson to describe the men.

"Two men," were the only words which came from his lips and he lapsed back into unconsciousness. At eight o'clock last night he was sufficiently recovered to give a description of his two assailants. The man who struck him, he describes as a short stout man of about 28 with dark complexion and black moustache. He was dressed in a black overcoat. The other man was taller and wore a black derby hat. Both looked like foreigners.

Two men who answer the description of the robbers were arrested on the arrival of the train at Hamilton. Another man, W. Gilmore, was arrested at Merritton, but all three give a good account of their movements and are not supposed to be the authors of the assault.

Gilmore is detained here, however. The police theory is that the men got away to the American side. They do not suppose the robbers would have the boldness to travel on the G.T.R. train west. Dobson is in pretty bad shape, but his doctor says he will recover.

ALEXANDER URE AFTER BALFOUR

London, Nov. 5.—The House of Commons Wednesday night had the unusual experience of hearing Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate of Scotland, defend his honor from the recent onslaught of ex-Prime Minister Balfour.

Mr. Ure lengthily set forth his reasons to disprove the guilt conveyed in Mr. Balfour's charges as to what Mr. Ure intended his audiences to believe regarding the old age pensions in the hands of the Unionists.

Mr. Ure concluded by saying the shabby charges which Mr. Balfour had stooped to level at him were unparalleled in the history of Great Britain since the days when it was open to a man to defend his honor with his own right arm.

But Mr. Balfour would not withdraw a word of the attack. When Mr. Ure tried to make his audiences believe that certain obligations were not held as sacred by his present opponents (the Unionists), Mr. Balfour thought it absolutely inexcusable.

ANOTHER APPEAL MADE TO DENMARK

Washington, Nov 5.—"Let scientific American examine Dr. Cook's records," is in substance the message which the State Department was yesterday asked to transmit to Copenhagen.

One of the matters which the National Geographical Society's committee pressed upon the Department was a request that an official cablegram be sent to U. S. Minister Egan at Copenhagen asking that he pave the way with the Copenhagen Geographical authorities so that the committee which will soon be appointed by the society may be given the privilege of examining Dr Cook's records.

THE BUDGET IS PASSED

Commons Sends it on to Lords With 230 Majority.

London, Nov. 5.—The House of Commons passed the third reading of the budget bill last night by a majority of 230, the vote showing 379 to 149.

As the Irish Nationalists had decided not to take part in the division, 528 members of Parliament thus attended out of a possible 587. Allowing for pairs, there was thus a very full attendance. The present standing of parties is: Liberals 374, Unionists, 159, Labor and Socialist 54, Nationalists 83. In all 630.

The scene in the House was a memorable one. Seldom has there been a larger attendance of members and peers, and the diplomatic galleries were crowded to their utmost capacity.

Chancellor Lloyd-George, Premier Asquith and Mr. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, all spoke during the evening, and there was tense excitement throughout the session, all present appearing to be imbued with the historic character of the occasion.

Mr. Asquith, in a brief speech closing the debate, said that it was incumbent upon those who objected to the Government taxes to provide some alternative scheme to meet the nation's necessities. Where was this scheme? asked Mr. Asquith.

Sooner or later Mr. Balfour must show his hand, and it would have to be a hand that would suit the game of tariff reformers.

The Government, continued the Premier, might well be content to rest themselves in patience. There were only two issues before the Houses—the taxes proposed by the budget or tariff reform.

The division was then taken and the announcement of the vote, showing the Government's majority to be larger than expected, was greeted with prolonged Ministerial cheering.

JURY UPHOLDS UNWRITTEN LAW

Gallatin, Mo., Nov. 5.—Believing Otis Claycomb, a young farmer, was justified in killing the man who wrecked his home, a grand jury refused yesterday to indict him for killing John Ward, a wealthy land owner, and Claycomb was given his liberty. Claycomb killed Ward, who was 60 years old, for taking Mrs Claycomb from her home and six children.

Publicity to Help Police.

Cleveland, Nov. 5.—Secretiveness and press censorship, two policies, which in the past have hampered the police department in the work of solving mysteries, are to be done away with, according to an order issued by Chief Kohler.

All reports of thefts, robberies, assaults, burglaries and other crimes are to be placed on file for the inspection of the public. The only exception made to this is in the case of complaints that may be false and might disgrace some innocent person.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION

The Examiner, in its issue of yesterday, Johnstonizes the Globe for its attitude on the Liquor question. The Globe advocated closer government control by the Whitney Government of the whiskey traffic in Northern Ontario, amounting, if a reader wished to take it so, to a government sale of liquors. After ruminating upon the arguments of the Globe, the Examiner proceeds to say: "The question seems to lead up to the conclusion that the only effective way is to bring to bear sufficient moral force to make abstinence from strong drink a matter of general conviction. Then how to bring this condition about is in another problem." From this we may conclude that the Examiner sees two problems between strong drink and its enemies. It is interesting to have these questions as viewed from all sides. But we venture to say that if the day comes when this "general conviction" the Examiner speaks of arrives, the problem will be solved there and then without the interposition of any other "problem." And how is the fact of the "general conviction" to be ascertained, except at the polls, as proposed in January. Even the Examiner's subtle argument is fully met in this respect.

THE CATHOLIC COUNCIL

The Catholic Register.

The great Catholic National Council of Canada is over. For seven long weeks the bishops, religious superiors, prelates and theologians of the country have been down in the Mother See of Quebec, busied with the legislation which will henceforward be known as the "Acts and Decrees of the First Plenary Council of Quebec." Just what these Acts and Decrees are we will not know definitely until they have run the gauntlet of Rome and secured its approval. We may be pardoned for venturing the opinion, garnered from no official or authoritative source, it is true, but nevertheless reliable, that they will be found to resemble very closely those of Baltimore and South American Councils when they reach the public in authentic form. This form of legislation has the approval of Rome; it is suited to the genius of the Church in these regions; it would be temerarious to depart from it without good cause. "I hope you Canadians will stick to the form already approved by the Holy See for the United States and Latin America," said a great American Archbishop to us once. "If you do, there is excellent prospect of a solid and permanent system of legislation which will furnish a convenient and effective form for the Western Catholic world." ...

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Baptists are a sort of religious itch which is so mildly contagious that no one pays any attention to it.—The Catholic Register.

Some people like to show how broadminded they are by applauding the "improper" in theatricals. They show it all right and also a lot more.

The professors of the new Biblical institute (at Rome) are named. The Jesuites have levied on their order throughout the world for them.—The Catholic Register.

There are scores of good works in which Catholics and non-Catholics may join for the betterment of the entire community. True religion does not produce hate, but love.—Union and Times.

The question is, How to make the industry pay? At the present time, with $3,000,000 worth of foreign wool coming into Canada practically duty-free, there is no incentive for the farmer to grow wool. The differences between conditions in this country and the United States are not far to seek. But here again we may quote our feeming contempory: "Our Canadian sheep industry is going to everlasting bow-wows as fast as it can. Trade in pure-bred rams and ewes is unsatisfactory, to say the least."—Canadian Textile Journal.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Nov. 2.—At the annual meeting of the Medicine Hat Conservative Association, C. A. Magrath, M.P. for Medicine Hat, and John Herron, M.P. for South Alberta, came out in strong denunciation of Canada's "toy navy," and vigorously supported the principle of giving practical assistance to Great Britain. Mr. Herron declared the proposed Canadian navy would be nothing more than an expensive luxury and of little utility to either Canada or the Empire.

The Review congratulates Messrs. Magrath and Herron on their sentiments.

Cardinal Gibbons, in expressing his opposition to woman suffrage, says if realized it would be the death blow of domestic life and happiness. Ecclesiastical authorities are naturally conservative, while the suffragists are very advanced. It was hardly to be expected that the forces could be agreed on one of the most radical of changes affecting the basis of government that has come to the fore since the people's right to say how they shall be ruled was acknowledged.—Montreal Gazette.

President Falconer, of Toronto University, has at last "come out" on the student-hoodlum question. He calls their latest folly "childish and cowardly." He addressed an immense assemblage of the student body in plain terms. Had he done so sooner instead of smiling at the so-called humor of the students he would have saved the Varsity much adverse comment. It is so in all such cases. Some of the acts were so contemptible that it is impossible to call their perpetrators "men." They are "hopeless."

It is strange how the Church and the Vatican disturbs the souls of these French infidels. We do not hear of their attacking the Baptists the Presbyterians or even the Methodists. It is more than probable that they have never heard of these good people, and never read of them except in an encyclopedia. They fear the Catholic Church, however, and spend wakeful nights plotting its downfall. What is the reason? The Church stands for a fixed code of moral principles. These people have no morals, and the Church's teaching is a constant reproach. The Church proclaims there is a future life and a God who will reward the good and punish the wicked.—The Catholic Register.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture is to be congratulated on its timely step in endeavoring to raise the status of the sheep industry. Aided by the Ontario Sheep Breeders Association, it is establishing eight "illustration stations" for the raising of sheep in Muskoka and in the counties of York, Leeds, Simcoe, Huron, Middlesex, Brant and Victoria. The work will be carried on under the special supervision of Mr. A. P. Westervelt. The stations will be in charge of farmers, who will provide small flocks of grade ewes, and who will keep strict account of the cost, time spent, revenue, etc., being remunerated by a small sum for their extra trouble. These will be inspected from time to time by experts, who will give information for the benefit of the farmers in the district. The stations will be kept in operation until, and the results of the experiments made known in, the spring of 1912, so as to allow of records being taken for two full years.—Canadian Textile Journal.

OF INTEREST

The Religion of Europe

Turning to the countries of the Reformation, we find that in Germany, while Rome is not making any headway towards restoring the unity Luther broke up, she seems to be fairly holding her own, considering the present attitude of the world towards religion. In England there has been an increase of Roman Catholics, about which there has been much boast, but Mr. McCabe shows that this increase has been caused by a vast immigration of Roman Catholics, especially from Ireland. In almost every large town in England the Irish vote is important, while in one division in Liverpool it is absolutely dominant. However, Mr. McCabe noted that the immigration has not had its due effect in swelling the number of the Roman Catholic community. A considerable number falls away from the Church, at least in practice, and it is idle to speak of 'bad Catholics'; the Catholic who fails in his Easter duties is, ipso facto, excluded from his Church." If the immigration had had its full effect, the Church of Rome in England would be able to claim not less than two millions and a half of adherents, whereas she holds not more than half that number. Mr. McCabe finds proof of this in the fact that there are 1,736 chapels and stations, with the generous allowance of 720 to each, which gives a total of 1,215,000. Where Rome has gained an undoubted victory in England is in the attitude of the Church of England towards her. Her clergy has hundreds of able recruits from among Anglican ministers, whereas only about a dozen of the Anglican clergy received Roman ordination. "It would be rash to predict the end, which, in any case, cannot be followed or accompanied by a great accession; but it is safe to say that if the movement be at the same rate and in the same direction during the next fifty years, as it has been in those now past, the Anglican Church will be thoroughly Romanised. Anyone who takes 'probability as the guide of life,' believes at the same time the necessity of the Apostolic Succession, is bound to come to this conclusion. 'We admit Roman orders; Rome does not admit ours. By common consent, Rome has got the right thing, and in the opinion of nine-tenths of Christendom Canterbury has not.'"

The conclusion is, while the number of Roman Catholics is decreasing the world over, no anti-Roman controversialist can find satisfaction in the fact, for the Old Catholic Movement, once seemingly formidable under the leadership of Dollinger, has failed, and the Protestant Missions in Spain and Italy have but scanty success. Who has "gained the millions which Rome has lost?" is asked, and "to answer this question with anything like satisfaction must require an optimistic temper." Have all those who have left the Church of Rome become non-Christians? Many of them think they have because they know nothing better of Christianity than an uncompromising demand on their faith, which they cannot concede. Their moral ideals, however, still are Christian ideals, and there is a field white to harvest, not so much for Protestant doctrine as for any who shall enter it with the life and practice of Jesus Christ. Everywhere, "not the earth only, but also heaven," are being shaken "that those things which cannot be shaken may remain"; and no one can note the co-operative solicitude of the good of all races and beliefs which today prevails in all countries for the uplift of mankind without realizing that out of it all is coming "a new earth wherein dwelleth a new righteousness."

Tunnel Not Ready Yet.

Detroit, Nov. 5.—For another season at least the Michigan Central car ferries will battle with the ice in the Detroit River. It was expected that the tunnel would be ready for use this winter, but it is now authoritatively announced that no cars will be running through the big tubes until next spring at earliest. On the Canadian side especially there is still a lot of work to be done.

There is a general belief in Windsor that the Wabash and Canadian Pacific roads will use the tunnel.

Inside Selling of B.C. Electrics.

QUEER JAPANESE FISH.

One That Uses Its Fin as a Sail—How the Dorado Is Caught.

One of the most interesting of fish of Japanese waters is the oriental sail fish (Histiophorus orientalis). The generic name, given by Dr. Guenther, means the sail bearer and refers to the huge dorsal fin possessed by the species.

The fin stands higher than the body above it and is used as a sail before the wind. It is a large fish, ten feet in length and weighing 160 pounds. They swim about usually in pairs in rough and windy weather, with the huge fins above the water.

It is a favorite food fish, and the annual catch is nearly 2,000,000 pounds. The sail fish is caught by means of a harpoon.

Another food fish, known as a dolphin or dorado, is sometimes caught in a curious way. The fishes congregate under a decoy bush and raft made of bamboos and are then caught by hooks baited with squids, or the decoy bush is surrounded by a seine net, and the dolphins are driven by beating the surface of the water with sticks. This fish is eaten both fresh and salt and is as great a favorite in western Japan as the salmon is in the northeast.—Zoologist.

Scotch Sabbath.

For traveling, trading and all the things one must not do on the Sabbath, Scotland, of course, must ever hold the palm. Not in the seventeenth century alone, but through all the ages and even unto the present day the Scotch Sunday has a law unto itself. There is the experience of James Payn, for instance, in the Edinburgh of only the seventies. "In the street where I first resided," he wrote, "it struck me that to judge by the drawn down blinds the people spent a good deal of their time upon the seventh day in bed. On my second Sunday, however, I was undeceived, for my landlady came up and informed me that, though she had not spoken of it last Sunday, she must now draw my attention to the fact that it was not usual in Edinburgh to draw up the window blinds on the Sabbath and that the neighbors had begun to remark upon the 'unlawful appearance' of her establishment, which had heretofore been a God fearing house."

A Justifiable Protest.

"What's that?" cried the convicted incendiary. "Five years? Well, if you people ain't the worst I ever ran up against! Here I goes out in the evenin' an' sets fire to the tallest buildin' in town—sets fire to it so that in less 'n a minute the thing's a shootin' blaze a hundred feet up into the sky. The whole poppylation is there quicker'n scat, all of you tickled to death at the sight! For four an' five hours you stood there watchin' the fire—hours of solid enjoyment, too—an' it not costin' you a cent! Why, a circus or the theater or a scandal trial wouldn't have given you half as much fun, an' you know it! An' yet you sit there an' bring in a verdic' givin' me five years in the penitentiary—me that's shown you all a good time an' ought to be considered as a benefactor if there was any gratitude in the human boosum!"—Exchange.

Heat as a Healer.

Heat is one of the most important of stimulants to living cells. The hot bath is the commonest means of applying heat as a therapeutic agent and is useful in a great number of conditions, especially to plethoric individuals and in advanced tuberculosis. The usefulness of local applications of hot water is well known. The general hot douche is a remarkable means to bring blood to the surface of the body, to accelerate the circulation, etc.—Exchange.

Losing Your Temper.

"Losin' yoh temper don' pay," said Uncle Eben. "In a heap o' cases it don' do no mo' dan put you to de expense of hirin' a lawyer to show you whah you's wrong."—Washington Star.

JOSS PAPER.

The Way This Popular Chinese Material Is Manufactured.

The principle districts in the Yangtze valley in China in which the manufacture of joss paper is carried on, Soashing, Ningpo, Hangtschau and Futschau, lie to the south of Shanghai. Young bamboo trunks are placed in ditches in layers with a covering of lime between them. The ditches are sometimes as large as thirty feet wide and ninety feet long. Water is poured over the mass and the contents allowed to remain until the trunks have rotted, which sometimes takes as long as three months.

After the limewater has been drawn off the mass is placed in a ditch provided with stirrers, where it is washed. The reduction to fibers takes place in mills drawn by buffaloes. After a second washing the material is ready for the mold of the papermaker. In China as well as in Japan the mold consists of fine bamboo sticks. For this reason the paper is always ribbed.

The product is squeezed in wedge presses, dried on a board and then covered with tin. The pulverized metal is strewn over the sheets and hammered between the fibers with hammers of soft wood. The chief difficulty lies in this hammering, and in spite of the thinness of the paper the Chinese attain a shining surface of tin. The paper is packed in bales of 3,000 or 3,200 sheets.

BREAKFAST.

It Should Be a Substantial Meal, Says a Physician.

It is customary to make the first meal of the day slightly the lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before or to insufficient exercise the preceding day and is no indication that the body really requires less food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any other meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

Another popular delusion in regard to the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that widespread subterfuge, the "continental breakfast," consisting of a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single roll. This is a very pretty breakfast as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far, and the sole basis for its adoption on the continent is that it is only intended as a temporary tideover until the real breakfast of meat, eggs, fish, etc., which is taken at about 10 or 11 o'clock, like a very early luncheon. If you haven't got a good appetite for breakfast make it your business to go and get one instead of allowing yourself to be blinded in this morbid state of affairs and deciding that all you really need is a cup of coffee and a roll or an orange.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Woman's Home Companion.

Mistaken.

"He says he's your friend for life; says you lent him $50."

"So I did. But he's not my friend for life. I propose to ask him for it next pay day."

His Role.

"That man made an immense fortune out of a simple little invention."

"Indeed! What did he invent?"

"Invent? Nothing, you dub! He was the promoter!"—Cleveland Leader.

Doubtful Compliments.

The colonel who, taking his leave at a garden party, inquires, "Have I had the pleasure of saying goodby to you, Miss Mary?" the hostess sweetly assuring a distinguished pianist who has risen abruptly from the instrument with a sarcastic protest lest he should disturb the conversation that he does not do so at all; the young man who, on being told that a possible rival had taken the lady who is speaking in to dinner the previous evening, declares that "that's all he's fit for"—these are decided instances of this class of bad compliment, while for a well meant but lukewarm one poor Newman Noggs' reply to the collector's query respecting the Kenwigs' new baby, that it wasn't a very nasty one, may be cited.—London Academy.

Well Off.

Counsel—You speak of Mr. Smith being well off. Is he worth $10,000? Witness—No, sir. Counsel—Two thousand? Witness—No, sir; he isn't worth a shilling. Counsel—Then how is he well off? Witness—Got a wife, sir, who supports him, sir.—New York Journal.

To have a respect for ourselves guides our morals, and to have a deference for others guides our manners.—Sterne.

CONTROL THE EMOTIONS.

One of the Essential Conditions of Nervous Balance.

Now, then, can the nervous sufferer help himself? To begin with, he should ask himself: "What is there in my physical life which may account for my nervous weakness? Is my diet sufficient in quantity and nutritious in quality? Do I get enough sleep? Is my work congenial? Is my environment in any degree suited to my tastes and aptitude?" These are simple questions, and yet upon their answer often depends the possibility of nervous health or nervous disease. If the sufferer discovers that any of the physical causes of a nervous breakdown are in operation it is obvious that it is his first duty to fight against these causes, to lessen them and if possible to remove them altogether. In the next place—and this is especially to be noted by nervous women—one of the essential conditions of nervous balance is the control of the emotions. The tendency on the slightest provocation to give way to a paroxysm of tears is dangerous, because it leads to weakness, bodily and mental. No doubt there are moments of poignant agony when tears are nature's beneficial provision for some relief to an overstrained nervous and mental organism, but these moments come at rare intervals in our lives, and, as a rule, so far from weakening our mental or moral life, they uplift and purify it. What nervous people must be warned against is the tendency to let themselves go because of some petty worry or some slight domestic difference or through some morbid impulse to self pity.—Rev. S. S. McComb in Harper's Bazar.

DUTCH SPORTS.

Holland the Land of Sleighing, Sledging and Skating.

Probably no other boys and girls had better times than the Dutch boys and girls in old and new Netherland. Holland, says W. E. Griffis in his book, "The Story of New Netherland," is the land of skates and sleighs. Children and young people hardly learn to skate; they begin it naturally and keep it up all their lives. Whether for fun or in parties or to go to the market, to church, to weddings or funerals, they move by rapid transit on steel. A pair of skates is a passport to comradeship.

Every habit and each trick known on Holland canals or ponds was reproduced on the Mohawk and Hudson. There was the iceboat or sailboat on runners, sometimes reduced for swiftness to a long plank with crosspieces for seats and with skate irons. Equipped with mast, canvas and some courage, it seemed to race with the wind itself.

As for coasting, wherever flat Holland could show a hill or slope or Friesland furnished a torp or artificial mound there were the boys and girls at fun. On the ice lady or lass sat in a hand sleigh, while husband or swain pushed as he skated.

All this shows the reason why Newburg-on-the-Hudson and Albany and the hills of Dorp are so famous for coasting and the North river for ice yachts and why from the first generation of settlers the Dutch-American towns were noted for sledding, sleighing and skating.

A Fishing Story.

Angling has some very marvelous "incidents" among its many records. Hampshire has its true tale of a duck which became entangled in a trout line and, breaking off the gut, trailed the fly behind her and actually hooked a fair sized fish. The struggle between the two must have been as extraordinary as that of the Dumfries gander which became similarly attached to a line and hook baited with dead frog.

In this case a voracious pike was hooked, and a veritable tug of war ensued, in which the astonished bird performed sundry somersaults on the surface of the water until victory at last rewarded the feathered angler, which towed to shore one of the largest fish ever caught in that particular loch. And that the tale is true makes it all the more interesting.—London Black and White.

Girls With Boys' Names.

Girls with boys' names and boys with girls' have received them in many instances no doubt by accident. It was so in the case of George Anne Bellamy, the famous eighteenth century actress, who played Juliet to Garrick's Romeo. Born on St. George day, she was to be called Georgiana, but somebody's blunder at the time of her christening split this into George Anne. The "corn law rhymer," Ebenezer Elliott, had a daughter named Noah, whose passport is said to have given her much trouble abroad. But here, as in the case of other girl Noahs, it was only other people's Biblical ignorance that was at fault, for turn up Numbers xxxvi, 11, and you will find that Mahlah, Tirzah, Hoglah, Milcah and Noah were the daughters of Zelophehad.—London Graphic.

The Thirst For Gore.

Unsophisticated Onlooker—I think this is a first rate place. See what a fine view we have of this car coming. Seasoned Spectator—Fine view fiddlesticks! Nothing ever happens on these straight stretches, not even a broken leg. Come on down to the turn and wait for the fun.—Puck.

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended.

It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of these mills did much to develop the sheep-raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and continue to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted.

The value of this discovery—made by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $750,000.00 and employs over 300 operatives.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear is made in 3 standard weights, Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and in 17 other weights and qualities to suit the requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and samples of fabric, sent free for your address.

A Joke of Mark Twain's.

Probably few people are aware that the theatrical godfather of that famous actor Mr. William Gillette was Mark Twain, who was a fellow townsman and a friend of his father. Mark Twain in referring to the matter said that when he used his influence to get young Gillette on the stage he thought he was playing a great joke on the management, for he did not think Gillette had the slightest aptitude for acting. But it turned out to be no joke after all. "I don't know," said Mark Twain, "which I like better—having Gillette make a tremendous success or seeing one of my jokes go wrong."

MODERATE PRICES WILL BE CHARGED

Despite the fact that Jessie MacLachlan, the Scottish singer, is being brought to Peterborough at heavy expense, the tickets for the concert at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening, Nov. 15th, will be sold at very moderate prices. They will range from 25 cents to 75 cents, which is lower than the prices charged to hear the Scottish prima donna in other cities. Watch for further announcements.

HOW PETERBORO IS GOING AHEAD

Some idea of the way Peterborough is growing may be had from the fact that in the last three years the city had added to it a village as large as Havelock. The population has increased over 1,200 in the last three years, and bids fair to do even better than that before 1912 rolls round.

BUILD UP PETERBOROUGH!

Peterborough has been known in the past for its enterprise. As a corporate body, however, it has not been equal to its individual citizens in that respect.

Mr. W. H. Scott conceived and carried out the plan of building the Ontario and Quebec railway between Toronto and Montreal, now the C. P.R.

The growing needs of the time and Senator Cox made the G.T.R. what it is to Peterborough.

Mrs. Nicholls gave us our parks and maintains a hospital also.

Private enterprise built the street railway.

St. Joseph's Hospital and the House of Providence are not civic institutions.

The Public Library owed nothing to the city in the past, and will, in the future, owe merely its maintenance.

The city has done well enough in regard to its schools, but that is not the work of the City Councils.

The city provides water of doubtful acceptability at a high rate. It may be said that nature has not helped us much. While this is true, city water ought to be "cheap" at least. Water, light and transportation should be cheap to the people. They should not be reserved for private profit. They are the elementary necessaries of life.

We have not had a COMPREHENSIVE SCHEME OF A CIVIC CHARACTER for any great undertaking for the benefit of the city. Much could have been and can be done, it is felt by the citizens, to give Peterborough an outlook, a FUTURE. The meeting on Tuesday night next is for the purpose of discussing the why's and the wherefore of this civic shortcoming. Public enterprise and civic patriotism have not kept pace or anything like it with the needs of the future. The basis of Peterborough's future is Power. Have we got it at such a price as would put us in the spot light to those looking for places to settle.

Are we encouraging railways to come here, if so, how?

There ought to be a rush for Peterborough. Is there any indication of it? Much more could be said that might not be wise in view of the watchfulness of those around us.

It is gratifying to find, however, that what our City Council cannot do or is not doing is to be done by citizens in conjunction with the Board of Trade.

As it is, we are barely marking time and, in a few instances, have gone back. Let our public, our civic policy, be "Build up! Peterborough," and let us do it.

We have fallen heir to most of our good things. It is time for us to do something ourselves.

THE CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The "Young Conservative Club" has changed its name to "The Conservative Club." It is felt that Conservatives want a home that belongs to the party, as a whole, and not to the younger members only. This ambitious and excellent project is being started under the auspices of the party, and of three energetic and capable representatives duly chosen for the purpose, Mr. C. N. Brown, president; Mr. W. E. Murphy, vice-president, and Mr. George Benton, Jr., secretary-treasurer. They appeal to the spirit and patriotism of Conservatives to sustain them in this new venture. Let every one help and it will be a success. It cannot be so otherwise.

ATTRACTIVE AND ORIGINAL WINDOW

At Warne Drug Co's. Store—Idea of the Dressing Cleverly and Effectively Conveyed

A prettily dressed window, that is entered in the Nyal Medicine Co's. $25 competition is shown by the Warne Drug Company. It represents a dining-room scene, the room carpeted with a rich Wilton rug and furnished sumptuously in minature. Two large dolls represent two young ladies having afternoon tea, seated at the table on which is a china tea set and real cake. The idea intended to be conveyed by the window is that one of the ladies complains of being troubled by indigestion.

The other points to a bottle of Nyal's Digestive tonic and tells her companion if she uses that she will be troubled in that way no more.

SUGGESTED PLAN IS LIKELY TO FALL THROUGH

And Peterborough and Kingston Probably Won't Have Vaudeville Houses

The Review learned on good authority this morning that the question of organizing a vaudeville house in Peterborough, and another in Kingston had been under consideration for some time. The plan suggested was to get the good vaudeville talent and give a three-night show here and in Kingston at popular prices. The two towns would be convenient stop-overs to the vaudeville artists going from Toronto to the cities east on the big circuit.

"What is being done in the matter?" the Review asked.

"I'm afraid nothing," was the answer. "The people with the idea in view are not reasonably certain that the proposition would prove a paying one on account of the smallness of the cities."

"What about the one night scheme?"

"Thoroughly impracticable. The performers wouldn't listen to it, and it wouldn't be profitable enough from the box office standpoint at the popular prices charged for vaudeville."

MOTION TO BE MADE BY COUNSEL

To Quash Conviction Against Augus McDonald Made by Magistrate Dumble

It is understood that a motion will be made by Mr. Ruddy, K.C., to have the conviction made by Magistrate Dumble this morning against Angus McDonald, quashed.

At the hearing on Tuesday and again this morning counsel for the accused asked that McDonald be allowed to withdraw the election for a summary trial, made by him when the charge was first preferred, but the Magistrate objected on the ground that it had been deliberately made and he could not find any provision made which would allow him to change it.

The accused was not represented by counsel on his first appearance in court, and this, added to the fact that he was not allowed to change his election on this account, is one of the reasons for the motion made.

FORTY-FIVE CHILDREN ARE HOUSED THERE

Bradburn Homestead on Mcdonnel St. Now Occupied as Childrens' Home

The old Bradburn homestead, on London street, is now being used as an orphanage for the Roman Catholic diocese of Peterborough. It was purchased a short time ago for this purpose, as it was imperative that the children should be removed from the House of Providence, where they have been cared for in the past. They were placed in the new institution on Wednesday of this week. There are forty-five children in the home at the present time. It is likely that some changes will be made in the building in the near future.

It is not yet known who will be the superintendent of the institution.

MUSIC OF THE "MERRY WIDOW"

An Appealing Feature of "The Merry Widow" and "The Devil"—At Grand To-night

A great deal of the popularity of "The Merry Widow" and "The Devil" the two highly successful Weber burlesques on outstanding metropolitan successes of last season, is due to the original and striking travesty lines on which the play is constructed. Nevertheless it cannot be denied that probably the greatest charm of the piece lies in the retention of the enchanting numbers from the greatest comic opera triumph in years, "The Merry Widow."

The company with all its clever principals that won the show such distinction on Broadway, appears at the Grand to-night. The original splendor or the costumes and settings will be a feast to the eye of the lover of artistically elaborate stage pictures.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. H. MILLER.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly before three o'clock, Mrs. J. H. Miller passed away at her late residence, 336 Water street. The late Mrs. Miller, who was 55 years of age, was born in Chism Rapids, and was married to Mr. Miller in 1876. During the past 23 years, as a resident of this city, she made many friends, who will join in extending sincere sympathy to her husband and the members of the family. They are two daughters, Miss Christina Miller and Mrs. Pappas, of this city, and two sons, Harvey and John. Two sisters Mrs. J. H. Bettes, and Miss Annie Smith, of this city, and two brothers, John, of Bewdley, and William, of Beaufort Bridge, also survive.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

ELIZABETH ROBERTSON ARMOUR.

The death occurred this morning at 6.30 of Elizabeth Robertson, relict of the late John Armour. Deceased, who was 70 years of age, passed away at the residence of her son, George Armour, 145 Rubidge street. She had been in feeble health for the past year.

The late Mrs. Armour was one of Peterborough's oldest residents, having lived in this city ever since she came from Edinburgh, Scotland, with her parents, 58 years ago, when she was twelve years of age. She was a Presbyterian in religion and a member of St. Paul's church. Her husband predeceased her a year ago, after an illness in which the deceased overtaxed her powers in attending him and has not been in good health since.

Surviving are a family of nine children, five sons and four daughters. The sons are Andrew, of Utica, N.Y.; Wm., of Newark, Cal.; John, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and George, of this city. The daughters are Mrs. Wm Lyons, and Mrs. Thomas Kemp, both of whom reside in Smith township, and Mrs Robert Hart, and Miss Isabel, of Jamaica, Brooklyn, N.Y.

The funeral will take place from the late residence on Monday afternoon at 2.30, to the Little Lake cemetery.

ALICE HARTFIELD.

The death occurred early this morning of Alice Hartfield, at the Margaret Cox Home for Girls. The deceased was 19 years of age, and had been a sufferer from heart trouble.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. E. A. Pearson will conduct the service.

FIRST DRUNK IN TWELVE YEAR

James McCann was the name the man arrested in Ashburnham answered to at the Police Court this morning. He was charged with vagrancy but was allowed to go on his promise to start to work. He said he had been employed in Keene and this was the first time he had been arrested during his life and also the first drunk in twelve years.

APPLICATION TO REMOVE LIEUT. GOV. GIBSON

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—The Dominion Trades and Labor Congress sent a deputation to the Government to-day which asked among other things the removal of Lieut.-Governor Gibson for alleged insulting remarks towards union labor, made by him before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. No reply was made to this demand by the Government, but consideration of the other requests made was promised.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

TWO YEARS IN CENTRAL

Angus McDonald Found Guilty on Assault and Robbery Charge—Sentenced by Magistrate Dumble

Magistrate Dumble gave judgment in the case of Angus McDonald at the Police Court this morning. The accused was sentenced to the Central Prison in Toronto for a term of two years less one day.

His Worship remarked that the crime of which he decided the accused was guilty, was one that is a disgrace to the city. There is a gang of young men, he added, who follow up drunken people, or drink with them until they are intoxicated and then rob them. This case was not an exceptional one. There have been several others.

Before giving judgment, the prisoner was given a chance to make any remarks he wished to but on the advice of his counsel, Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., he remained silent.

The charge of which McDonald was found guilty was that he assaulted and robbed Wm. P. Whitney on the night of Thanksgiving Day.

MIDY

A CURIOUS CHIMNEY.

One In Wales Two Miles High With a Brook Running Through It.

Who ever heard of a chimney two miles high with a brook running through it? Yet such a chimney exists in connection with the copper works at Cwmavon, near Aberavon, in Glamorganshire, south Wales. This is how it came to be built:

About sixty years ago the copper smoke from these works was the plague of the neighboring countryside. It settled upon and destroyed the grass for twenty miles round, while the sulphur and arsenic in the fumes affected the hoofs of cattle, causing gangrene. The owners of the works tried all sorts of devices to remedy the trouble, but in vain. Finally Robert Brenton, who was afterward a successful railway engineer in India, solved the problem.

The copper works are at the foot of a steep hill. Mr. Brenton constructed a flue, or chimney, running continuously from the base to about a hundred feet above the summit, following the natural slope of the ground. The brick which lined it and of which it was largely constructed was burned close by. A small spring gushing out near the summit of the hill was turned into the chimney and allowed to flow through almost its entire length to condense the smoke. Once a year it is swept out and about a ton of precipitated copper obtained. Its top can be seen for between forty and fifty miles.—London Answers.

BRAVE MME. ROLAND.

Her Last Request Before Her Death on the Scaffold.

How Mme. Roland bore herself on her journey along the via dolorosa of the revolution which led from the Conciergerie to the Place de la Guillotin the world knows. No recorded pilgrim of the long train that fared that way in those heroic days showed a sublimer indifference to its terrors. A spectator who saw her as she passed the Pont Neuf wrote of her as standing erect and calm in the tumbril, her eyes shining, her color fresh and brilliant, with a smile on her lips as she tried to cheer her companion, an old man overcome by the fear of approaching death.

At the foot of the scaffold she asked for pen and paper to write the strange thoughts that were rising in her. When the executioner grasped her arm to assist her in mounting the steps she drew back and begged that her companion might be allowed to precede her. The custom of the guillotine allowed her, as a woman, the privilege of dying first, but she wished to spare the infirm old man a scene that would augment his fears. Sanson objected.

"Come, citizen," she urged him, with a smile, "you cannot deny a lady her last request."

Her wish was granted.—Editor of "Her Private Memoirs."

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"My man"—

"Lor', lumme!" cried the fellow in amaze, pivoting on his heel. Cupidity and quick understanding enlivened the eyes which in two glances looked Kirkwood up and down. "S'help me," thickly, "where'd you drop from, guvner?"

"That's my affair," said Kirkwood briskly. "Are you engaged?"

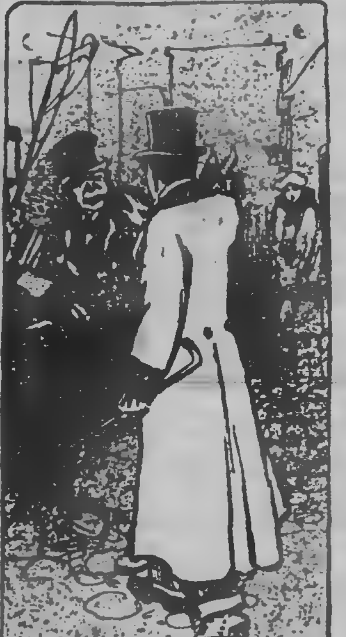
"If you mykes yerself my fare," returned the cabby shrewdly, "I ham."

"Ten shillings, then, if you get us out of here in one minute and to—say—Hyde Park Corner in fifteen."

"Us?" demanded the fellow aggressively.

Kirkwood motioned toward the passageway. "There's a lady with me—there. Quick now!"

Still the man did not move. "Ten bob," he bargained, "an' you runnin' awye with th' stuffy ol' gent's fair darter? Come now, guvner, is it gen'rous? Myke it a quid an'"—



Kirkwood tapped his shoulder.

"A pound then. Will you hurry?"

By way of answer the fellow scrambled hastily up to the box and snatched at the reins. "Ck! Gee-e hup!" he cried sonorously.

The gloom of the tunnel inclosed them briefly ere the lights of the Hog-in-the-Pound flashed by and the wheels began to roll more easily. Kirkwood drew back with a sigh of relief.

"Thank God!" he said softly.

The girl had no words.

Worried by her silence, solicitous lest, the strain ended, she might be on the point of fainting, he let up the shade and lowered the window at her side.

She seemed to have collapsed in her corner. Against the dark upholstery her hair shone like pale gold in the half light. Her eyes were closed, and she held a handkerchief to her lips. The other hand lay limp.

"Miss Calendar!"

She started, and something bulky fell from the seat and thumped heavily on the floor. Kirkwood bent to pick it up and so for the first time was made aware that she had brought with her a small black gladstone bag of considerable weight. As he placed it on the forward seat their eyes met.

"I didn't know"— he began.

"It was to get that," she hastened to explain, "that my father sent me"—

"I have been thinking that there is absolutely no way I know of to thank you properly. And I have been wondering," she continued, with unaffected candor, "what you must be thinking of me."

"What should I think of you, Miss Calendar?"

With the air of a weary child she laid her head against the cushions again, face to him, and watched him through lowered lashes, unsmiling.

"You might be thinking that an explanation is due you. Even the way we were brought together was extraordinary, Mr. Kirkwood. You must be very generous, as generous as you have shown yourself brave, not to require some sort of an explanation of me."

"I don't see it that way."

"I do. You have made me like you very much, Mr. Kirkwood."

"I'm glad," he said simply, "very glad if that's the case and presupposing I deserve it. Personally," he laughed, "I seem to myself to have been rather forward."

"No; only kind and a gentleman."

"But—please!" he protested.

"Oh, but I mean it, every word! Why shouldn't I? In a little while, ten minutes, half an hour, we shall have seen the last of each other. Why should I not tell you how I appreciate all that you have unselfishly done for me?"

"If you put it that way, I'm sure I don't know, beyond that it embarrasses me horribly to have you overestimate me so. If any courage has been shown this night it is yours. But I'm forgetting again." He thought to divert her. "Where shall I tell the cabby to go this time, Miss Calendar?"

"Craven street, please," said the girl and added a house number. "I am to meet my father there with this," indicating the gladstone bag.

CHAPTER VI.

KIRKWOOD thrust head and shoulders out of the window and instructed the cabby accordingly, but his ruse had been ineffectual, as he found when he sat back again. Quite composedly the girl took up the thread of conversation where it had been broken off.

"It's rather hard to keep silence when you've been so good. I don't want you to think me less generous than yourself, but, truly, I can tell you nothing." She sighed a trace resentfully, or so he thought. "There is little enough in this—this wretched affair that I understand myself, and that little I may not tell—I want you to know that."

"I understand, Miss Calendar."

"There's one thing I may say, however. I have done nothing wrong tonight, I believe," she added quietly.

"I've never for an instant questioned that," he returned, with a qualm of shame, for what he said was not true

"Thank you."

The four wheeler swung out of Oxford street into Charing Cross road. Kirkwood noted the fact with a feeling of some relief that their ride was to be so short. Like many of his fellow sufferers from "the artistic temperament," he was acutely disconcerted by spoken words of praise and gratitude.

Nor had she fully relieved her mind nor voiced all that perturbed her. "There's one thing more," she said presently—"my father. I—I hope you will think charitably of him."

"Indeed, I've no reason or right to think otherwise."

"I was afraid—afraid his actions might have seemed peculiar tonight."

"There are lots of things I don't understand, Miss Calendar. Some day perhaps it will all clear up—this trouble of yours. At least, one supposes it is trouble of some sort. And then you will tell me the whole story. Won't you?" Kirkwood insisted.

"I'm afraid not," she said, with a smile of shadowed sadness. "We are to say good night in a moment or two, and—it will be goodby as well. It's unlikely that we shall ever meet again."

"I refuse positively to take such a gloomy view of the case."

She shook her head, laughing with him, but with shy regret. "It's so, none the less. We are leaving London this very night, my father and I—leaving England, for that matter."

"Leaving England?" he echoed. "You're not by any chance bound for America, are you?"

"I can't tell you."

"But you can tell me this—are you booked on the Minneapolis?"

"No-o. It is a—quite another boat."

"Of course!" he commented savagely. "It wouldn't be me to have any sort of luck!"

"Since we are to say goodby so very soon," suggested Kirkwood, "may I ask a parting favor, Miss Calendar?"

She regarded him with friendly eyes. "You have every right," she affirmed gently.

"Then please to tell me frankly are you going into any further danger?"

"And is that the only boon you crave at my hands, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"Without impertinence"—

For a little time, waiting for him to conclude his vague phrase, she watched him in an expectant silence. But the man was diffident to a degree. At length, somewhat unconsciously, "I think not," she answered. "No; there will be no danger awaiting me at Mrs. Hallam's. You need not fear for me any more. Thank you."

He lifted his brows at the unfamiliar name. "Mrs. Hallam"—

"I am going to her house in Craven street."

"Your father is to meet you there?" persistently.

"He promised to."

"But if he shouldn't?"

"Why"— Her eyes clouded. She pursed her lips over the conjectural annoyance. "Why, in that event I suppose it would be very embarrassing. You see, I don't know Mrs. Hallam. I don't know that she expects me unless my father is already there. They are old friends. I could drive round for awhile and come back, I suppose."

"Won't you let me ask if Mr. Calender is there before you get out, then? I don't like to be dismissed," he laughed, "and, you know, you shouldn't go wandering round all alone."

The cab drew up. Kirkwood put a hand on the door and awaited her will.

"It—it would be very kind. I hate to impose upon you."

He turned the knob and got out. "If you'll wait one moment," he said superfluously as he closed the door.

Pausing only to verify the number, he sprang up the steps and found the bell button.

It was a modest little residence, in nothing more remarkable than its neighbors unless it was for a certain air of extra grooming. The area railing was sleek with fresh black paint. The doorstep looked the better for vigorous stoning. The door itself was immaculate, its brasses shining lustrous against red lacquered woodwork. A soft glow filled the fanlight. Overhead the drawing room windows shone with a cozy, warm radiance.

The door opened, framing the figure of a maid sketched broadly in masses of somber black and dead white.

"Can you tell me, is Mr. Calendar here?"

The servant's eyes left his face, looked past him at the waiting cab and returned.

"I'm not sure, sir. If you will please step in."

Kirkwood hesitated briefly, then acceded. The maid closed the door.

"What name shall I say, sir?"

"Mr. Kirkwood."

"If you will please to wait one moment, sir."

He was left in the entry hall, the servant hurrying to the staircase and up. Three minutes elapsed. He was on the point of returning to the girl when the maid reappeared.

"Mrs. Hallam says will you kindly step upstairs, sir."

Disgruntled, he followed her. At the head of the stairs she bowed him into the drawing room and again left him to his own resources.

Wearied, he deposited himself sulkily in an armchair by the hearth and waited.

From a boudoir on the same floor there came murmurs of two voices, a man's and a woman's. The latter laughed prettily.

"Oh, any time," snorted the American—"any time you're through with your confounded flirtation, Mr. George B. Calendar!"

The voices rose, approaching. "Good night," said the woman gayly. "Farewell, and—good luck go with you."

"Thank you. Good night," replied the man, more conservatively.

Kirkwood rose, expectant.

There was a swish of draperies, and a moment later he was acknowledging the totally unlooked for entrance of the mistress of the house. He had thought to see Calendar, presuming him to be the man closeted with Mrs. Hallam; but, whoever that had been, he did not accompany the woman. Indeed, as she advanced from the door way Kirkwood could hear the man's footsteps on the stairs.

"This is Mr. Kirkwood?" The note of inquiry in the well trained voice—a very alluring voice and one pleasant to listen to, he thought—made it seem as though she had asked, point blank, "Who is Mr. Kirkwood?"

He bowed, discovering himself in the presence of an extraordinarily handsome and interesting woman, a woman of years which as yet had not told upon her, of experience that had not availed to harden her, at least in so far as her exterior charm of personality was involved—a woman, in brief, who bore close inspection well despite an elusive effect of maturity, not without its attraction for men. Kirkwood was impressed that it would be very easy to learn to like Mrs. Hallam more than well—with her approval.

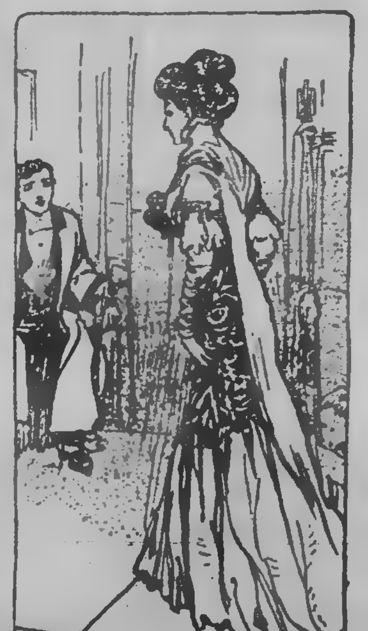
Although he had not anticipated it, he was not at all surprised to recognize in her the woman who, if he were not mistaken, had slipped to Calendar that warning in the dining room of the Pless.

"I am Mrs. Hallam. You were asking for Mr. Calendar?"

"He was to have been here at this hour, I believe," said Kirkwood.

"Yes?" There was just the right inflection of surprise in her carefully controlled tone.

He became aware of an undercurrent of feeling that the woman was estimating him shrewdly with her fine, direct eyes. He returned her regard with admiring interest. They were gray-green eyes, deep set, but large, a little shallow, a little changeable, calling to mind the sea on a windy, cloudy day.



"Dorothy Calendar!" Mrs. Hallam rose alertly.

Below stairs a door slammed.

"I am not a detective, Mrs. Hallam," announced the young man suddenly. Mr. Calendar required a service of me this evening; I am here in natural consequence. If it was Mr Calendar who left this house just now I am wasting time."

"It was not Mr. Calendar." The fine lined brows arched in surprise, real or pretended, at his first blurted words and relaxed. Amused, the woman laughed deliciously. "But I am expecting him any moment. He was to have been here half an hour since. Won't you wait?"

She indicated, with a gracious gesture, a chair and took for herself one end of a davenport. "I'm sure he won't be long now."

"Thank you. I will return, if I may." Kirkwood moved toward the door.

"But there's no necessity"— She seemed insistent on detaining him possibly because she questioned his motive, possibly for her own divertisement.

Kirkwood deprecated his refusal with a smile. "The truth is, Miss Calendar is waiting in a cab outside. I"—

"Dorothy Calendar!" Mrs. Hallam rose alertly. "But why should she wait there? To be sure, we've never met, but I have known her father for many years."

She swung about quickly, preceding him to the door and down the stairs. "I am sure Dorothy will come in to wait if I ask her," she told Kirkwood in a high, sweet voice. "I'm so anxious to know her. It's quite absurd really, of her—to stand on ceremony with me when her father made an appointment here. I'll run out and ask."

Mrs. Hallam's slim white finger turned latch and knob, opening the street door, and her voice died away as she stepped out into the night. Then, with a sudden, imperative gesture, she half turned toward him.

"But," she exclaimed, perplexed, gazing to right and left—"but the cab, Mr. Kirkwood?"

He was on the stoop a second later. Standing beside her, he stared blankly.

To the left the Strand roared, the stream of its night life in high spate; on the right lay the embankment, comparatively silent and deserted, if brilliant with its high swung lights. Between the two, quiet Craven street ran, short and narrow and wholly innocent of any form of equipage.

CHAPTER VII.

"WELL, Mr.—Kirkwood?"

"Mrs. Hallam," he stammered, "I"—

She lifted her shoulders impatiently and with a quick movement stepped back across the threshold, where she paused, a rounded arm barring the entrance, one hand grasping the doorknob, as if to shut him out at any moment.

"I'm awaiting your explanation," she said coldly.

He grinned with nervousness, striving to penetrate the mental processes of this handsome Mrs. Hallam. She seemed to regard him with a suspicion which he thought inexcusable. Did she suppose he had spirited Dorothy Calendar away and then called to apprise her of the fact, or that he was some sort of adventurer who had manufactured a plausible yarn to gain him access to her home, or—harking back to her original theory—that he was an emissary from Scotland Yard? Probably she distrusted him on the latter hypothesis. The reflection left him more at ease.

"I am quite as mystified as you, Mrs. Hallam," he began. "Miss Calendar was here at this door in a four wheeler not ten minutes ago, and"—

"Then where is she now?"

"Tell me where Calendar is," he retorted, inspired, "and I'll try to answer you!"

But her eyes were blank. "You mean"—

"That Calendar was in this house when I came; that he left, found his daughter in the cab and drove off with her. It's clear enough."

"You are quite mistaken," she said thoughtfully. "George Calendar has not been here this night."

He wondered that she did not seem to resent his imputation. "I think not"—

THIS HAS BEEN RECORD SEASON AT SWIFT & CO.'S HAVELOCK ICE-HOUSE

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 5.—Operations at Swift & Co's. ice house here are gradually coming to an end as the cars do not need much icing now, as the weather is becoming cooler. This has been a very busy season at the ice house, on account of the heat and also an increase in the number of cars sent over this line that need icing. In the middle of the summer as high as 250 cars were iced in a week or an average of 36 cars per day. Considering that these cars take from 6 to 15 cakes of ice each, according to the lowness of ice in the tanks, it can be seen that a large amount of that congealed moisture called ice, is consumed at this icing station. Although once in a while during the winter months special cars have to be iced, the regular season commences about March or April and finishes in November. The icing season does not stop abruptly, but from the last of September until the last of November the number of cars iced per day lessens as some of the meats and fruits do not need to be kept very cold.

Although Swift & Co. ship most of the cars that pass through here, there are several other companies that have icing done here, among them the following:—Armour Packing Co., Chicago and Kansas City; Nelson, Morris, Kansas City; Cudahy Packing Co., Omaha and Kansas City; National Packing Co., Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City; Cold Blast Transportation Co., Chicago and Kansas City; American Refrigerator Co., John Morral, Otomwa; the C.P.R. Refrigerator Co. and several other smaller companies whose shipping points are in the United States.

Some of the cars only go as far as Montreal where the contents are transferred to the steamboats by which they are shipped to foreign countries. Other cars go down into the New England States and others to Providence and from there to foreign countries.

When the cars leave Chicago, they are iced at Windsor, Ont., then at Havelock, sometimes at Montreal and then at Newport. The icemen have considerable trouble in judging the time they must commence to prepare the ice for the cars. The cakes which are packed in close together are frozen to one another and these have to be loosened up and separated. The ice is then hoisted to the platform which is the same height as the cars and here it is broken by hand into pieces about the size of a man's fist. Considerable judgment is necessary for the ice must not be gotten out too soon or it will melt, or too late as it will delay the train. A report is first received by mail that certain cars have left the shipping point and the next report is received from Windsor by wire when the cars leave there and it is then that the men begin to loosen up the cakes in the room. A report is also received when the cars leave Toronto and again when the cars arrive in Myrtle or Burketon and then they commence to pull the ice up, which work is done by means of a horse. Generally, if they start to pull up when the cars leave Myrtle they have the ice fully prepared for the cars when the arrive at Havelock, But sometimes the train is delayed by some cause and a large amount of ice is melted before the cars reach here.

When the cars arrive the tops, which are placed on the ice tanks on each end of the car, are opened up and the ice already in them pounded down and the water in them allowed to run out. Rock salt is then placed on the old ice in the tanks and ice placed on top of that up to the top of the tank when another layer of salt is placed on it.

Some of the cars which only go as far as Montreal and are then transhipped to the steamers are merely filled with large cakes of ice without being broken up. Sometimes a shipment of cars which is sent out from the shipping point, is divided on the way and comes in on two different trains and thus makes it necessary to pull up twice.

The regular shipment of provision cars generally comes in on train No. 58, due at Havelock at 12.30 p.m., but cars come in on all trains and sometimes during the night. For night purposes, ice is kept in a room level with the platform, already loosened up, which can be pulled on to the platform without the use of a horse. The men who are called out for an hour or so during the night, do not have to get around as early as the others in the morning.

A large amount of rock salt is used in icing the cars and it is stored in a large room and drawn to the platform and placed in large salt boxes as needed.

The walls of the ice house are about two feet thick and are filled with very fine sawdust which is tightly packed in. When a room is completely filled with ice it is covered over with marsh hay. The roof of the building is flat and covered with a coat of tar with small stones and gravel on top of that. There are several large air boxes on the roof to allow fresh air to go down into the rooms below. The platform is placed on the north side of the building and has a covering over it to keep the sun from melting the ice when it is on the platform. Electric lights are also installed for night work. The ice is broken into pieces by large wooden mallets and is shovelled into the cars and packed down by hand.

GIRL DEFAULTED TO FRANK GOTCH

After Match Had Been "Fixed"—No Wedding Bells Will Call Time for Champion

Chicago, Nov. 5.—No wedding bells for Gotch. Visions of a wedded life down on the farm and a last farewell to the match championship have gone by the board for the Humboldt strong man. Plans laid last spring for a ring ceremony this fall were doomed, when, it is said, Miss Minnie Warner, 212 East Forty-Eighth street, canceled the engagement.

Announcement of the coming nuptials was made last spring, following the return of the world's champion from a European junket. The romance shrouded in mystery was supposed to have had its origin when Gotch met Miss Warner, a charming brunette, at the booking office in the Majestic Theatre Building, where she is employed as switchboard operator. Correspondence between Gotch and Miss Warner is said to have been fast and furious, and while Frank was treading the footlights in English concert halls a full-grown diamond ring found its way to the accustomed finger on Miss Warner's left hand.

Gotch, when asked in Minneapolis the day following the announcement, had no hesitation in putting his O. K. on the report and later reiterated the announcement while preparing for a match in Kansas City. The ceremony was billed to come off in October, Gotch was to wind up his professional career with two big matches—one against Raicevich and the other other with Zbyszko, the foreign grapplers now on Yankee soil, and then to sink into oblivion as far as the wrestling field was concerned.

Now, the color scheme has changed, and the mat men can come on in droves, for Gotch is determined to fill any and all engagements, save those in the matrimonial arena. Miss Warner will leave shortly for New York, to make it her future home.

SPORTING TALK

W. R. C. Laston, B.S.,M.D., in a long review in Health Culture Magazine picks Johnson to beat Jeffries when the two meet for the world's heavyweight championship. He says there is no doubt the fight will be on the square as both men are above suspicion.

In this the learned doctor is somewhat in error.

While there is no doubt as a matter of fact that the fight will be on the level, all real world's championship battles are;—Johnson has not been above suspicion in his ring career. In fact some of his dealings are just as shady as his color, to wit; his 20-round bout with Marvin Hart in San Francisco. In this battle Johnson let Hart, who is more or less of a plug, win from him on points. Burns had no trouble with Hart and Johnson won in comparatively easy fashion from Burns. It is stated that Johnson has since confessed that his bout with Hart was a fake and others who were associated with the affair have no hesitancy in saying it was.

JEFFRIES KNOCKS GRIDIRON GAME

Jim Jeffries denounces the brutality of rugby football. He says:

"I'm against any game that kills seven boys while it's only warming up, you might say. That sort of a game is not worth while. No game that kills men as a regular thing is worth while.

"There have always been lots of men in the country who stand up on their hind legs and roar about the brutality of the boxing game. Their women will put their skirts away from a prize-fighter, as if he was some sort of an animal, yet the same people go out to a football game and yell themselves black in the face at an exhibition that's too rough for men who fight for a living. But football is a fashionable game, and society stands for it."

THE HOOK

The question that is overshadowing all others in Ottawa just now is whether the knees of Williams and Stronach will be in shape for to-morrow's game at Hamilton.

Halley's comet is now being described as a celestial hobo.

Who did this felow Guy Fawkes ever beat that all this fuss should be made?

Lindsay will likely have its main street paved. Does this mean that we will have to say farewell to the Scugog mud?

At anyrate there is no danger of fire in some hotels unless you pay for it.

CANAL NOTES

A much larger force was put to work last week on the concrete work at the dam, and things are now being rushed to a completion to get in ahead of the cold weather. The wall is all completed but the last few feet and where the molds have been taken off is a very handsome piece of work. The piers for the bridge over the race will then likely be put down and the base for the coffer dam below, for the new locks. The water is considerably higher below than last year, and the job will be harder to handle.

The surveyors are up to Rice Lake every day getting everything in readiness for the survey of the lake as soon as it is frozen over.—Hastings Star.

A Plant For the Mosquito.

Dr. William Tell Kudlich has brought to the notice of the health board of Hoboken, N. J., a plan for exterminating the mosquito which consists in planting mosquito infested tracts with azolla. The plant is a native of Africa. In a short time it covers marshy land with a layer three inches thick, thus both suffocating mosquito larvae and preventing the living insects from depositing their eggs in the water.

SEEKING THE CAUSE.

He Went the Right Way About It and Was Successful.

By RICHARD BARKER SHELTON.
[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Bobby Renwick, dictating some important letters to his stenographer, glanced abstractedly at the handful of mail the office boy laid on the desk before him. Among the envelopes he caught sight of one that he hurriedly separated from its fellows and, with quickening pulses, glanced at the superscription in a firm, familiar hand.

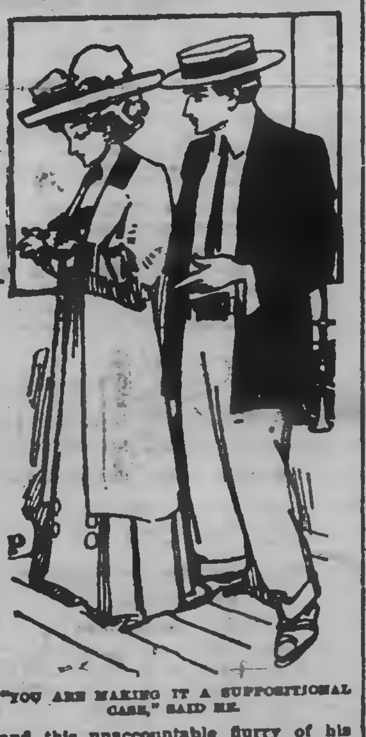
"Er—just a minute, Miss Stone," said he, opening the envelope and drawing out its contents.

The stenographer sat tapping her pencil upon the pad in her lap, while Renwick, his brows suddenly puckering in a frown, read the brief missive he held in a hand that was rather unsteady. The epistle ran:

> Dear Bobby—It is impossible—impossible; a mistake from the very beginning. We can't—we mustn't. I am afraid and terribly wretched. I don't know how I can ever make you see it in the right light. I only knew that our plans are very, very foolish and that we must never think of them again.
>
> We are sailing this afternoon on the Avonia for two months on the continent. Please forgive me and, above all things, do not write to me. Yours, ELINOR.

For a moment Bobby sat like a man stunned by some crushing blow, his eyes staring straight ahead and the letter crumpled in his hand. Then suddenly he swung about to his desk—swung his chair so violently that the stenographer jumped nervously and dropped her pencil.

She picked it up hurriedly, smoothed the paper of the pad and turned alertly to Renwick as if expecting him to continue the dictation. But Bobby Renwick was rummaging through the pigeonholes of the desk, throwing things right and left in a veritable frenzy of haste. The stenographer looked at him with a puzzled frown. Ordinarily he was the calmest of mortals, and this unaccountable flurry of his upset all her preconceived ideas of the man.



"YOU ARE MAKING IT A SUPPOSITIONAL CASE," SAID HE.

"The letter I was taking, Mr. Renwick," she suggested tentatively.

"Letter?" Bobby repeated. "Letter? Oh, yes! Never mind it now. Morse will finish 'em up. Tell him I say for him to look after the matter as best he can, and, say, send Harding in, will you, please? Send him in immediately if you will."

The stenographer, her bewilderment increased perceptibly, hurried into the outer office to deliver the message. A moment later Harding pushed through the door of Renwick's private office and stood staring at the man before the desk.

"Bobby, old boy, what's up?" he asked anxiously. "What's wrong with you?"

"Eh?" said Bobby without looking up. "Say, what time does the Avonia sail this afternoon? Do you know?"

He shot out the question in a fashion that seemed to hint that if the man before him was unable to answer the question it might go hard with him.

"Four o'clock, I believe," said Harding.

Renwick glanced at the clock on the wall and jumped to his feet so quickly that his desk chair overturned with a crash.

"Four o'clock!" Bobby fairly howled. "Don't tell me that! It's ten minutes of 4 now! Say, something's got to be done! Send Jim down for a cab! Tell him if it isn't at the curb by the time I get down his life won't be worth 3 cents!"

Harding gave one perturbed glance at his partner, started to remonstrate, thought better of it and tumbled headlong through the door, bellowing lustily for the office boy. Bobby meanwhile caught up his hat and his overcoat, tore through the other office and sped down the long corridor toward the elevator. At his heels, panting and sadly disturbed, came Harding.

"Say, what's the row anyway?" he demanded. "Where are you going in all this rush, Bobby?"

The elevator came whirring up. Bobby jumped into it.

"Don't know yet where I may land," he called as the descent began. "Europe, maybe."

The cab Jim had summoned was just drawing up to the curb as Renwick rushed from the building.

"Pier 76!" he bellowed at the cabby as he tumbled in. "Let the beast out. I'll make it well worth your while."

They reached the pier after a mad gallop. On the wharf was a scattering crowd, and out in the stream the Avonia was making her way majestically toward the bay. Bobby groaned. Then his eyes fell on a tug moored to the wharf. Thither he sped. A few words to the red faced man leaning out of her pilot house window, a display of greenbacks on Bobby's part, and the latter leaped aboard and the tug was speeding after the departing liner.

Down the bay went the liner, and after her at full speed raced the tug, kicking up a great commotion.

As they neared the Avonia the tug's whistle began to scream. The liner's whistle answered with deep throated brays. Closer drew the tug, and over the liner's side was dropped the dangling length of the Jacob's ladder, at the top of which a crowd of excited passengers watched the oncoming tug.

Presently they were alongside. Renwick caught the ladder and scrambled up to the liner's deck.

"Good work!" a big man who had been leaning excitedly over the rail declared heartily as Bobby reached the Avonia's deck.

Bobby said nothing. He caught sight of a pretty girl on the outskirts of the watching group and in a most determined fashion made his way straight to her side. Her lips were parted. A beautiful color was in her cheeks.

Bobby lifted his hat, said something to her in a low voice and in a masterful fashion led her away.

No other word passed between them until they found a quiet nook to themselves far aft. Then the girl turned to him.

"Well?" she said quietly.

"I got your letter," said Bobby.

She was silent.

"That is why I am here," he went on.

Still she said nothing.

"I'm mighty sorry to have to make my entrance in so spectacular a fashion, but there was really no other way," said he.

"Why was it so very necessary for you to come at all?"

Bobby noticed that her eyes refused to meet his own. Somehow he was decidedly glad of this.

"Why?" he echoed. "Good heavens, Elinor, what is the sense of your asking why? Did you imagine for a minute I would let you go like that? Did you think I would sit calmly by and accept it all without a murmur?"

He came a step nearer. He noticed she was trembling.

"I came for good and specific reasons," he went on gently. "I came to let you tell me that the only mistake in the whole thing was that letter you wrote me; that you didn't mean it, not a word of it; that you didn't write it of your own free will and volition; that outside influence was brought to bear upon you. Tell me that, Elinor."

"Suppose you are all wrong," she suggested. "Suppose there was no outside influence, as you choose to call it. Suppose I meant that letter and wrote it because I meant it."

His brow clouded. He looked at her as if he did not dare believe his ears. Then his jaw set.

"You are making it a suppositional case," said he. "Why not make it a plain, bald statement?"

There was something like a sob. "I—I can't," she faltered.

A great light came into Bobby Renwick's eyes. Utterly unmindful of the little groups near by, he took her hand in his own.

"I knew it," he declared triumphantly. "I was sure of it."

Then suddenly he began to chuckle softly.

"Now, who on earth is going to break this news to Aunt Agatha you or I?" he laughed happily.

WOMEN'S WOES

Peterboro Women are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. John Wallace, of 323 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—"I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble for over two years, and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDermid & Jury's Drug Store cured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and would not be without a box in the house."

Oak Mark For Government Surveyors.

The sky line north of Mountain Home, Ark., rises in two long curves, then flattens out and leaves in silhouette above the crest of what is known as Wallace knob a solitary tree. It is such a strikingly lovely tree that no visitor to the town fails to notice it and ask how it got there. Then he hears that several years ago the government engineers decided to find out the exact fall of the land from Denver to Atlanta, Ga. Wallace knob on account of its elevation was chosen as one of the three chief observation points in a huge triangle. To mark this knob with a conspicuous object to sight at all the trees on it were cut off but this one marker. It is an oak fifty or sixty feet in height.—Kansas City Star.

TO CURTAIL POWERS OF ONTARIO MEDICAL COUNCIL

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—An attempt will be made by several members of the Legislature at next session to curtail the powers of the Ontario Medical Council. This action will be taken as the result of a number of charges of improper operations against several of its members, which have lately been investigated in the Toronto police court. In the case of one of these Dr. Polhaml, a conviction was registered last Saturday, and a sentence of five years in Kingston Penitentiary imposed. The Legislative members claim that the Medical Council has not done its duty in suppressing such practices, although the information was in its hands.

The Attorney-General stated this morning that any legislation that would be brought in would not take the form of a government measure.

The next sitting of the Division Court will be on Friday, Nov. 12th.

The C.N.R. will erect new shops at Port Arthur.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

The meeting in St. Paul's last night was attended by much the largest congregation that has yet assembled on a week night. The meetings have steadily grown in interest and attendance from night to night, and this evening a specially large gathering is expected. Last night the pastor, Mr. Pogue took charge of the opening song service. Requests for prayer were noted, and Mr. Shook led in prayer impressively. Rev. Mr. Webb, of Murray street Baptist Church, was present and took part in the service. A good many from other congregations attended. They are cordially welcome to all these services. Last evening Mr. MacBeth took for his subject, Daniel 12, 13 the closing verse in the wonderful book. The character of Daniel was briefly sketched as that of one of the most gallant and noble figures in the Old Testament. To such a man God would specially speak. Daniel, differing from some modern teachers, did not profess to know everything. He never eliminated the supernatural, and he humbly asked God to teach him the meaning of the things he heard. God's answer intimated that there would always be some recesses of the Infinite which men would not be able to fully fathom here. But enough was revealed to enable them to do their duty, to God and men, and what they know not now, they will know hereafter. The speaker said that the existence of things in the book of Revelation and the book of nature, which we could not fully understand, showed that behind all was the Master-mind of God, who directed the course of things and who knew the end and aim of the universe. And so God said to Daniel in this text: "Go thy way till the end be, for thou shall rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." Life was a journey and we must not mourn if the scenery and surroundings changed as we went swiftly on our way. But to the faithful and true, like Daniel, the end would be rest, and they would have their lot and place in the land to which we are all going. Let us see that we are on the right road.

The subject to-night will be "The Things That are Certain."

Knox Church

The subject that Rev. Mr. Mitchell will discuss in Knox church to-night is "A Tragedy of a Soul." The meetings have been growing in numbers and intensity. Mr. Mitchell is pleased with the response of the people and the spirit manifested. There was inspiration, he said, in the fact that so many services were being held at the same hour, and there was great assistance being given by the prayers of the people.

Mr. Mitchell took as his theme what Tennyson calls the most pathetic utterance in history, yet the most triumphant. This is the expression of Jesus on the cross, "It is Finished." It is difficult for us to understand all the expression means, seeing we are so far removed from its expression and its tone. It suggests the danger of repeating anything we hear. The soldiers around the cross failed to comprehend Christ's words. It was long after that John saw their meaning. As we approach them in the spirit of Jesus we can see something of what they were intended to convey.

There was in the expression, for one thing, a sigh of relief. He had been absent a long time—33 years—from His father. He had been living right in the midst of sin, and His trained eye saw its greatness, as with keen consciousness He perceived its awfulness. In a sense it was finished, and He was going home.

One can also see in it a note of victory. Temptations and gethsemane had gone down before Him. There was nothing left undone. He had fulfilled the law. He had remained pure. He had fully expressed divine love. Man was saved. Satan was defeated. It was a victorious note. It was also a message sent back to His father. He came to show to the world what our Heavenly Father is like, and He had done so without flinching. The work His father commissioned Him to do was done.

It was also a proclamation to the world. It tells man everywhere he is saved. There is a fountain filled with blood. The great work of redemption is done. Man is invited to accept the finished work of Jesus Christ.

To-night—"A Tragedy of a Soul." Is it yours?

At St. Andrew's

The text taken by Rev. Mr. Atkinson in St. Andrew's church was from Roman's 8, 1-23, and the subject of the sermon was "The First Fruits of the Spirit." This is a chapter in experimental Christianity, and what was derived from actual experience. The first fruits were:—

Liberty—The law of the spirit of life in Christ has made me free from the law of sin and death.

Spirituality—They that are after the things of the spirit mind the things of the spirit.

A New Affinity—The spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God.

Agony—We that have the first fruits of the spirit groan within ourselves waiting for the spirit of peace.

Special Announcement

In connection with the Evangelistic Mission, the visiting missioners will unite with the Salvation Army in an open air service, Saturday night at the corner of Simcoe and George sts. Rev. Mr Atkinson and Rev. MacBeth will speak.

Special meeting for boys will be held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Atkinson will give the address.

THE SMALLER CITIES DEMAND GOOD THEATRICAL OFFERINGS

"Road companies have to be of a much better quality these days than in the past. The people in the smaller towns and cities are becoming educated in the matter of amusements to such an extent that it is impossible to please with anything but productions of real worth. I have seen the time when only inferior offerings were sent on the road and the expenses of the producers, both in the salary list and scenic equipment, were kept on the most economical basis. But the metropolitan taste seem to be spreading to the 'one-night stands' to use the general expression, and many auditors who are appreciative only of what is original and clever, and up to the metropolitan standard in musical and dramatic offerings, are to be found among the audiences of the smaller cities."

These remarks were made to a Review representative this afternoon by Mr. Sam Collins, the clever comedian, who is appearing in the leading part in "The Merry Widow and the Devil" at the Grand to-night. Mr. Collins is not a stranger to Peterborough, and he will be remembered for his extremely droll comedy work as "Li" in "San Toy," which was so successfully presented here last season by the Imperial Opera Company.

Since he was seen here, Mr. Collins was prominently featured in the big review at the Empire Theatre, Lester Square, London, Eng., and was spoken of in the highest terms by the press of the English metropolis.

Mr. Collins talks interestingly of things theatrical, and said the present year was a banner one for the New York producers.

Making Good Butter.

Buttermaking is so general that a great many people think there is little to be learned regarding it, but the making of high grade butter is a very difficult matter when one does not understand all of the requirements thoroughly. A factor which is positively necessary first, last and all the time is perfect cleanliness. The stables must be clean, light and airy, the cows healthy and well groomed and their feed of the best quality. The milker should be very careful that no foreign matter contaminates the milk in any way.

McLAUGHLIN SAYS THAT HE FEARED FOR HIS OWN LIFE

Man, Whose Wife and Children were Burned to Death at Uxbridge, Goes on Stand at Inquest — Bought Rat Poison, Strychnine and Morphine.

Uxbridge, Nov. 6.—Morning, afternoon and night sessions were held at the inquest into the death last Friday night of Mrs. Archie McLaughlin and her two children, and the end is not yet. Adjournment was made by Coroner Bascom till Monday, Nov. 22, when the report of the analyst who is to examine the stomachs of deceased will be received.

Late last night McLaughlin himself was recalled to the stand to explain the evidence of a number of witnesses, who had testified to his wife having complained that he neglected her, that he had been very much enamored of a woman in the town, that he had said he was afraid of being poisoned at home, that his wife was "queer", that she might suicide, that he expected he might be free by December, and that the two boys burned were not his children.

To McLaughlin, Crown Attorney Farewell said:

"I am told by the little girl that you went upstairs to your wife's room and lit the lamp, and also carried the child down; also that you carried things out of the clothes' closet and put them over her as she lay in the baby carriage."

This McLaughlin denied. He said his wife was sitting by the stove when he reached home and he had not gone upstairs that night.

Crown Attorney Farewell wished to know whether there was anything in the house that the wife could have taken to make her sleep while the house was burning, an opiate or anything.

"Well, yes, there was rat poison if that is what you call it," replied McLaughlin. He believed the poison was on the sideboard. He had purchased it at Nicholls' drug store and they had used about half of it.

On Thursday morning last his wife had told him to buy some butter and some strychnine to put in the rat poison, which was not sufficiently effective. He remarked to her, "For God's sake, put that poison away where the children won't get it." McLaughlin said there was some morphine in the house at the time, which he had bought himself, but had not used.

McLaughlin's explanation of his remarks to companions about having had improper relations with a young lady, was that he was only joking. His wife, he said, was down hearted often and threatened on at least three occasions to end her life. During the last three months she had hardly spoken to him. He had never known the time he might be poisoned himself by her.

"Why did you purchase that poison and give it to her, when you were in dread of using it on one of you?" asked a juryman.

"Well, it is just this way, I never thought of it," McLaughlin replied.

T. C. Nicholls, chemist, testified that on Oct. 28, he had sold McLaughlin 10 grains of strychnine, said to be for rats, and about a month previous a quantity of morphine.

Several witnesses were heard during the three sessions. Mrs. A. Bant and Mrs. Jennie Morden said deceased woman had complained to them of her husband's neglect, and his attention to other women. Reuben Harman had been shown a letter by McLaughlin that he boasted was from a girl he was intimate with, and said he would leave Uxbridge with her if she would go. He had said he was "afraid to eat at home for fear of dope." Bert Nolan had also seen a letter and was pressed by a juryman to tell its contents, as he had been saying they reflected on the girl. This Nolan denied.

Bert Harsell testified that in conversation with him last Sunday night, McLaughlin said he didn't know where he would be on the next Sunday, behind the bars or in his grave.

AN ANGLO-GERMAN TREATY IS NOW A POSSIBILITY

Britain Has Heretofore Made Advances and Has Failed to Obtain a Satisfactory Reply From Kaiser's Ministers.

Berlin, Nov. 6.—The possibility of an Anglo-German understanding appears to be under consideration in high German Government circles.

The failure to reach such an understanding heretofore, is attributed to the method adopted by Great Britain. After Sir Charles Hardinge, permanent Under Secretary of the British Foreign Office, failed to obtain a satisfactory reply to his suggestion, made at the meeting between King Edward and Emperor William at Kronberg, King Edward is understood to have tried to persuade the Emperor of Austria, whom he met at Ischl, to make friendly representations to Germany.

The author of an anonymous communication, which appeared in the [illegible] Zeitung yesterday, discusses this subject and asks what can be done to restore among the British a feeling of security against German invasion, and so silence the mischievous agitation concerning the naval preparations being made in the two countries.

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's "rather obscure hints to Vienna," says the correspondent, "would seem to indicate that he was dwelling upon this question, and that it is now Germany's turn to make a counter proposal, having considered the British suggestion unacceptable." The writer adds that mutual assurances might be made in writing.

BIG MAILBAG ROBBERY WAS CARRIED OUT

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Theft of a mail pouch believed to have contained between $25,000 and $50,000 in express and postoffice money orders was revealed yesterday through the cashing of several of the stolen orders in Chicago.

The rifled bag was discovered by a farmer boy in a cornfield near Tolons, Ill.

The mail bag is thought to have been taken off a truck which was standing on the depot platform during the transfer of mail from a Wabash train to the Illinois Central.

Two thousand opened letters were found in the cornfield near the pouch.

TO MAKE OFFICIAL MAP OF WORLD

Washington, Nov. 6.—Topographers Bailey Willis and Stephen J. Kubel of the U. S. Geographical Survey sailed from New York to-day for London to represent the United States in an international conference of topographers, called to further the designing of a world map, to be universally recognized as official. The project for a common world map among the greater powers originated almost twenty years ago.

Forest Fires In Virginia.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 6.—The forest fires in this section continue to rage fiercely, and unless rain falls within the next few hours the property loss will be enormous. Thousands of acres of valuable timber land in the great north mountains have already been laid waste, and the flames are spreading in all directions.

The western slope of Maryland Heights at Harper's Ferry is also aflame.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM OF ONTARIO

New Regulations Will Be Ready to Go Into Effect at Opening of Next School Year —Practical Subjects Will Receive Special Attention—Some Inspectors To Be Replaced.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—The Educational Department of the Province has under consideration the revision of the Public school system of Ontario and the new regulations will be ready to go into effect at the opening of the next school year, September, 1910.

It was intended to make the changes in time for this year, but action was deferred at the request of a number of the teachers of the province. The subject will come before the Ontario Educational Association next spring, after which the Department will consider the proposals sent on by this body.

Your correspondent learns that, while no radical changes will be made in the list of subjects that are now taught in the public schools, very material improvements will be brought about in the direction of giving more attention to the chief subjects, such as reading, spelling, writing and arithmetic. There have been general complaints that, with the increase of subjects taught in the schools, these fundamentals of education were gradually receiving less attention, and that the old-time "drills" in spelling, mental arithmetic and other branches were fast disappearing. The present course of studies and regulations date back to 1904, when Hon. Richard Harcourt was Minister of Education, and the new ones are expected to be adequate for the next five years. Dr. Seath, Superintendent of Education, is in charge of the revision.

One weakness in the system in the past has been the lack of responsibility of the public school inspectors to any one except the county councils, who, as a rule, were scarcely competent, or in a position to judge whether they saw to it that the regulations were carried out by the teachers. Some of the subjects were not properly fitted for the work; some had grown old or indifferent. The Act of last session, by which Dr. Merchant was created chief inspector and the inspectors were made responsible to the Department of Education with periodical inspections of their work by Dr. Merchant, is certain to raise the standard of inspection in the public schools, and consequently the quality of the work of the teachers. As a result, the new regulations, emphasizing the good old "three R's" are likely to be enforced much better than ever before. Dr. Merchant is visiting every inspectorate in the province, and a number of changes in the inspectors will be made by the end of the year. The condition of affairs is indicated by the resignation announced yesterday of the inspector of Stormont, in his 88th year.

LIBERALS DEFAULT

B.C. Grits Decide Not to Contest Several Constituencies.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 6.—After holding formal conventions, or canvassing their supporters in these districts, the Liberals have decided not to contest the constituencies of Cowichan, Dewdney, Kaslo, Nanaimo, Newcastle, Revelstoke, Slocan or Ymir in the approaching general election.

Skeena, Similkameen, Lillooet and the Islands may also be Conservative wins by acclamation, the Liberals having as yet failed to secure candidates.

Assurance is given Hayward (Cowichan) and McKay (Kalso) that their re-election by acclamation will be unopposed. In Nanaimo, Newcastle, Revelstoke and Ymir the Socialists will offer candidates, and in Dewdney there is a local oppositionist.

Twenty-eight seats in the House of 42 are now counted Conservative certainties.

"Nick Carter" on Paris Stage.

Paris, France, Nov. 6.—"Nick Carter," a five-act play, by Mm. Alexandre Brisson and Guillaume Livet, was produced at the Ambigu last night. The piece deals with a fight between a detective and Meloil, a notorious criminal. The latter, though duping Carter a long while, eventually sacrifices himself to save the life of a woman he loves. The critics speak well of it.

KITCHENER TO SEE MANOEUVRES

Utsunomiya, Japan, Nov. 6—The manoeuvres of the Japanese army began yesterday. The arrival of the Emperor in the morning was the occasion of a great popular demonstration. Other notable personages on the scene are Gen. Count Nogi, Gen. Count Kuroki, Admiral Count Togo and Field Marshal Prince Oyama. The military attaches of the foreign embassies were also present.

Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, who is making a private visit to Nikko, is expected here to witness the opening of the campaign by the Southern army. Simultaneously the Northern army will commence its campaign from Kori Yama, 130 miles from here.

BISHOP'S DREAM IS TREASONABLE

Vienna, Nov. 6.—Despatches received here yesterday from Belgrade, Servia, say that Bishop Nikador of Nish, Servia, is to be tried for high treason for an unfortunate dream in which he saw a revolution in Belgrade, the disposition of King Peter and the proclamation of former Crown Prince George as king.

The bishop told of his vision to some friends and finally it reached the ears of the Government.

At a session of the Cabinet, where King Peter presided, the dream was considered and construed as a part of a propaganda in favor of the ex-prince. It was decided to prosecute the dreamer.

TRY A REVIEW WANT AD.

DO NOT WANT A CEMETERY

LeBeau, S.D., Nov. 6.—In an indignation meeting Thursday leading citizens protested against the burial in or near this city of the body of L. T. Perkins, 50 years of age, who was killed about two miles out of town Wednesday, in an automobile accident. This town has no graveyard and does not want any.

Public-spirited citizens, immediately Perkins' body was taken from beneath the machine, began contributing towards a fund to send it post haste to Mellette, S.D., 140 miles east on the Minneapolis and St. Louis road, to the nearest undertaker.

This is the first death in or near LeBeau during its existence as a town. Inasmuch as the accident occurred two miles from town the municipal record is yet clear and the rights of Perkins' relatives to bury him within the corporation limits is questioned.

THE IRISH LAND BILL REJECTED

London, Nov. 6.—By a vote of 215 to 54 the House of Commons yesterday refused to agree to the House of Lords amendments to the Irish Land Bill.

On moving the motion, Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a conciliatory speech, declared he was most anxious to come to terms, if possible, as the failure of the bill would create a deplorable situation in Ireland.

Efforts will be made to arrange a compromise between the two Houses of Parliament.

RICH AMERICAN LEAVES $25,000,000 TO CHARITY

Largest Sum Ever Left for Charitable Distribution is Bequeathed to Presbyterian Church Institution by John Stewart Kennedy, who Died of Whooping Cough.

New York, Nov. 6.—John Stewart Kennedy, one of America's little known rich men, who died of whooping cough in his New York residence on Sunday last at the age of 80, left bequests of more than $25,000,000 to religious, charitable and educational institutions in his will, filed for probate here yesterday. The gift is the largest single contribution of its kind ever made, and the beneficiaries include educational and church institutions, north, south, east and west, in the country, and abroad, sixty in all.

Nearly half of the $25,000,000 goes to institutions connected with the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Kennedy had been an active member for many years. Other large beneficiaries include the American Bible Society, the Metropolitan Museum, of Art, the New York Public Library, the New York United Charities, Columbia University, Robert College, Constantinople.

Aside from these gifts Mr. Kennedy left approximately $35,000,000 to his wife, his relatives and a great number of friends and employes. The widow's share will be about $16,000,000. All of the testators' employes receive gifts from $500 to $2,000.

The long list of gifts is prefaced in the will by this brief paragraph: "Having been greatly prospered in the business which I carried on for more than thirty years, in this, my adopted country, and being desirous of leaving some expression of my sympathy with its religious, charitable, benevolent and educational institutions, I make these gifts."

The charitable, religious and educational institutions which receive the largest bequests are to share the residue of the estate left after definite gifts of approximately $12,000,000 have been paid, their shares estimated by counsel for the executors as follows: Presbyterian board of foreign missions, $2,250,000; Presbyterian board of home missions, $2,250,000; Presbyterian church extension fund, $2,250,000; Presbyterian hospital, New York, $2,250,000; Robert College, Constantinople, $1,500,000; Presbyterian board of aid for colleges, $750,000; Museum of Art, New York, $2,250,000; New York Public Library, $2,250,000; Columbia University, $2,250,000; United Charities, New York, $1,500,000; American Bible Society, $750,000; Charity Organization Society, New York, $750,000.

John Stewart Kennedy was born in Blantyre, Lanarkshire, Scotland, Jan. 4, 1830, and died in New York Sunday last from whooping cough. For years he was in the banking business. On Wall street he was known as "the man with ready cash," of which he could command from 50 to 75 millions. He had as much to do with relieving the recent financial depression as had J. P. Morgan. Many years ago he was closely associated with J. J. Hill in Northwestern Railway development, and was a member of the syndicate that contracted to build the C.P.R.

MAN GAVE LODGE SIGNAL IN COURT

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—Because he gave "the distress signal" of a secret society in court here yesterday, Adolph Moskovits, plaintiff in litigation involving a small amount of money, was sent to prison for contempt of court.

He was detected giving signs to the jurors, and was asked for an explanation by Judge Kinsey. He informed the judge that the sign was used by a secret order, of which he was a member when assistance was needed. The case was a simple one, and after the jury had returned a verdict in Moskovitz's favor, he was taken into custody by order of the judge.

In committing him for contempt, Judge Kinsey gave Moskovitz a lecture, and said the secret order should make an example of him.

REPORT THAT ROOSEVELT HAD BEEN KILLED

Washington, D.C., Nov. 6.—A rumor that ex-President Roosevelt has been killed on his hunting trip in Africa was afloat in Washington yesterday morning, but diligent search failed to discover the slightest foundation for it. Enquiries from many parts of the country make it evident that the rumor is widespread. At the Smithsonian Institution not the slightest word of such a fatality or even of an accident, had been received. The State Department, which would be most likely to be notified by its Consular representative in Africa, had received no such news.

TORONTO YOUTH IS REMANDED

Toronto, Nov. 6.—George Neilson, the youth who fired three shots at Esther Hazel Thursday night, was remanded a week in the Police Court yesterday morning. Mrs. Tucker, mother of his sweetheart, was seeking to bail him out before the court, but after the hearing, T. C. Robinette, K.C., who acted for him, did not press the matter. He is charged with attempting to murder.

The revolver has been found in the lane where he threw it away. It contained four good and three discharged shells.

The girl's condition is steadily improving at the hospital. All three bullets have been located, but not moved.

Naval stores worth ten million marks have been stolen from German shipyards.

CHINA AND THE OPIUM TRADE

Pekin, Nov. 6.—British Minister Jordan, on behalf of this Government, has raised objections to the manner in which China is suppressing the opium traffic.

The objections is the result of the success of the anti-opium movement in China, which is causing a more rapid decline in the importations of opium from India than was provided in the British-Chinese agreement of 1907, which contemplated a gradual reduction of the importation. Consequently China is now confronted with the prospect of paying for Indian opium that she does not use.

N.S. PAYMASTER WAS HELD UP

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 6.—As George Foote, paymaster, was driving in a team from Dartmouth to the rope works, north of the town yesterday, with $3,000 to pay the rope works' employes, three masked and armed men attempted to hold up the team and get the money. The driver whipped up the team and one of the trio shot at Foote, the bullet going through his cheek. A bag of money fell from his hand but remained in the wagon, and was delivered safely at the rope works.

PORT ARTHUR TENDERS READY

Toronto, Nov. 6.—No time has been lost by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in getting in tenders for the installation of the plant at Port Arthur. Following the vote of the people on Thursday, the tenders will be opened at the next meeting of the commission. The contract negotiated with the Kaministiqua Power Co. is along similar lines to that with the Ontario Power Co.

FATAL STUMBLE WHILE HUNTING

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—Charles Dexter, 26 years old, first baseman for the New Orleans Southern League team, accidentally shot himself while hunting near his parents' home at Mount Holly, Ohio, Thursday, and died shortly afterward. Dexter was running down a hill when he stumbled and his gun exploded. He was drafted last year by Detroit and the year before by Cleveland, but [illegible] called on by either team. His [illegible] name was Oscar [illegible]

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

OBJECTIONS TO LOCAL OPTION AND ANSWERS TO THEM

Replies to Arguments Used Against Local Option—Not One Objection is Well Taken

Most of the arguments that are advanced against the adoption of local option in Peterborough next January are old ones that have been used time and again in other places, and that have been proven to be unsound. The following are a few of these arguments, as we hear them occasionally, with brief replies thereto. Much more complete replies could be furnished, did space permit. Temperance workers may find it convenient to cut these out and use them:

SHOWS UP THE DIVES

Local option does not prohibit, but creates "dives" and "blind pigs," and a great deal more.

You will only create secret selling and dives that will be far worse than what we have now.

No better answer can be given to these objections than the answer given by Rev. Dr. John Somerville, who said in an interview regarding the situation in Owen Sound:

"During the local option campaign in Owen Sound it was said the closing of barrooms would mean the opening of dives in livery stables and other places. I said then that such a [illegible] should be gibbeted at once, and would like to say the same now to our workers in other places.

"At a public meeting I asked the question: What is a dive? The answer was: A place where liquor is sold illegally. Then I asked: How many license-holders in Owen Sound ever sell liquor after 11 p.m.? They said: They all do. How many keep the law on Sunday? Not one! Then I said: Every place in which liquor is sold after hours or on Sunday now is a 'dive.'

"Under the new law almost every place formerly licensed has been fined for selling liquor illegally, thus further proving my contention that these places were 'dives.' Local Option does not create 'dives,' but it does show up some.

"In my opinion there was just as much illicit sale of liquor before local option came into force as there is now. The difference is that the searchlight has been thrown upon it, and public attention called to it."

MAKE IT EASY TO DO RIGHT

You cannot make men better by act of law.

Perhaps not. You can at least give men a fair chance to make themselves better by making it easy for them to do right and hard for them to do wrong, and that is the prime function of law.

You can do this by closing up the barrooms, which are temptation places—which thrive financially in proportion to the evil they cause.

REMOVE THE SANCTION OF THE LAW

The selling of liquor is just as legitimate as any other business, as it is sanctioned by law.

Exactly, and local option takes away the legitimacy from the selling of liquor—takes away from it legal sanction.

Local option removes this objection. Local option is the only way by which the people in any community can remove the objection that the selling of liquor is legitimate to-day. It should not be.

THE POOR MAN IS BETTER OFF

The rich man can buy it by the gallon. The poor man cannot, and would not be able to even buy it by the glass.

If this were true, then all the worse for the rich man, for the more he buys the poorer he would become, and the lower he will sink. And all the better for the poor man, for the more he will save and the higher he will rise.

Why should a poor man or a rich man, or any other man, for the sake of a little personal appetite he might gratify, wish to maintain in a community such an institution as a barroom with the terrible havoc that these places cause.

However, this objection does not take into account the great primary benefit of local option, which is the closing of the public carousing place, and the destroying of the treating system, which is the curse of the poor and rich alike.

HOTEL ASSESSMENTS

Depreciation in the assessable value of hotel property, deprived of a license.

Since its profitableness is the only reason for the existence of the liquor traffic, it is to be expected that some loss will be entailed by its removal. The bar, though a very small part, is the most profitable attachment of a hotel. Do away with it and the actual value of the property will not be lessened, but the owner will strive hard for a lower assessment, on the ground that it is much less profitable.

The universal experience of local option villages and towns has been that the total assessment has rapidly increased. In West Toronto the assessment in 1904 was $3,897,000; that was the year in which local option was carried. Two years later the assessment was $4,883,000; in 1904 the hotel assessment was $37,200; in 1906 it was $34,900. The decrease is of little amount, in view of an increase of $1,186,000 in the total assessment.

In Owen Sound the hotel assessment was reduced, following the adoption of local option, so as to reduce taxes by $1,011, but the total assessment of the town increased to make an increase in revenue from taxation of $67,746.

Doing away with the bar-rooms makes a village or town a more desirable place of residence. It improves business very materially. It enables many poor families to live in better homes — some to purchase homes. Whatever small reduction may be made in the assessment of hotel property by the withdrawal of license is quite certain to be more than made up by the increase in the total assessment.

IT HAS TO BE SHOWN

The world is getting better gradually, not because of preachers, temperance legislation, lodges or literature, but because the world sees its folly in drinking to excess. Leave it alone is the cure.

The reason the world sees the folly of drinking to excess, is that it is being shown it, and the reason municipalities are availing themselves of the great benefits of abolishing the bar-room is that these benefits are being practically demonstrated in the places where bar-rooms have been abolished.

Preachers, temperance lectures, temperance legislation, all these things are simply means towards an end, the enlightening of the people. Anything that will tend to enlighten the people to the benefits of personal temperance or to the advance of temperance legislation is good.

Individuals should leave liquor alone. Communities should leave bar-rooms alone.

Individuals should enact Local Option laws for themselves, and say, "I will not drink." Communities should enact Local Option laws and say, "We will not have bar-rooms."

Thus by individuals and communities practicing what they know to be right, the world will move onward to higher and better things.

NO RETAIL SALE OF LIQUOR

The liquor store will remain, and there will be all kinds of selling out of it.

The liquor store cannot remain, for Local Option by-laws affect the retail sale of liquor in shops as well as the sale of liquor in bars.

Local Option is not permission of any kind. Local Option stops all retail sale of liquor, whether in shops or bar-rooms.

AN EXCUSE

Give me complete prohibition and I will be with you.

I do not believe it. The man that says this now is generally a man who, if prohibition was the issue, would want something else. He would then say, "Hold on, you are wanting too much."

Some people are so curiously constituted mentally that they always want to suggest "something else." Anything but the thing immediately in the issue. Any port in the storm.

It is utter nonsense to talk about securing total prohibition or nothing. The wise man will accept even the smallest modicum of reform so long as it is true reform, and will then press on for more. Let us get what we can, and take what we can get.

Local Option is to-day the best, and, indeed, the only way by which the people in each community can deal directly with the drinking problem at their own doors. What nonsense, therefore, for a people to defer cleaning out their own back yards until some magnificent, far-reaching, wide-spread system of flushing and house-cleaning has been devised and inaugurated.

What folly to perpetuate local drinking places which are the feeders of the great liquor tyranny.

A man's greatest duty is the duty next him. Neglect of that cannot be atoned for by the loudest protestations of a desire for something better.

How Crime is Promoted in Peterborough

Magistrate Dumble, at the Police Court yesterday, when sentencing Angus McDonald to Central Prison for robbery, said:

"There is a class of men here who make a practice of setting men, who come to town for a holiday, drunk, and then robbing them. The practice is altogether too common. We have had too many cases of it in this court. The judgment of the Court is that you spend two years, less one day, in the Central Prison."

Vote for Local Option and Help to Prevent This

RADICALLY DIFFERENT FROM SCOTT ACT

We have seen enough of Scott Act and want nothing to do with anything more of the kind.

"The fault was not with the "kind" of the Scott Act, but that the Scott Act was not a good measure of its kind.

A law restricting the sale of liquor is a good law. Our license law is a restrictive law. Local Option is the perfection of the license law in its restrictive functions, and the Local Option provisions of the License Act are radically different in many particulars from the old Scott Act. Local Option is of the same "kind" as the Liquor License Act. The License Act prohibits the sale of liquor without license.

Local Option by-laws prevent the issue of licenses. The license law does the rest.

LICENSE IS A BONUS

It is not fair to a man after he has bought the house and we give him the license, to destroy its value.

It certainly would be unfair if the granting of a license were in any sense the bestowing of a permanent privilege, but all licenses are annual, and convey to the possessor absolutely no right or privilege beyond twelve months, for which they are granted. If a man on the chance of getting a renewal of his license, makes certain investments, he does so entirely at his own risk. No one asked him to, but he did it of his own volition. He was the man who applied for the license. The people were not the persons who applied for a license. Indeed, the obligation was conferred by the people upon the license holder, not by the license holder upon the people.

Let us be fair. A license is a valuable privilege, which the community grants to a certain person for one year upon certain considerations.

The license holder becomes practically the beneficiary of the community. The amount he pays for the license is small compared to the value of the franchise he receives. He is practically bonused by the municipality. The community had a perfect right to bonus him. The community has a perfect right to withhold the bonus.

The community is not wronging a license holder in withholding the bonus, but it was favoring him in granting it. The withholding of a factor is not wrong. And he is a man who will whine and cry simply because people stop being generous to him and who insists upon his right to enjoy the benevolence of others.

OTHER DAYS, OTHER WAYS.

Modern Conveniences That the Average Maid Will Not Use.

The modern housewife may have in some instances an equipment that few "Biddies" can or will manipulate, says a writer in Harper's Weekly.

"No, mum, if ye plase; O'll do the washin' in the ould way. Oi don't loike thim newfangled things," old Ann remarked to her mistress when she returned after many years' absence and found a steam washing machine installed. "Oi was doin' washin's whin ye was in short dresses, Miss Mary. Oi'd ruther rub thim on the board than wash the ould thing," she concluded, with a glance of grim displeasure at the despised labor saver.

The "Miss Mary" of twenty years' standing as a matron said to a neighbor who did her own work: "Ann simply won't use the washer. Wouldn't you like to have it?"

The neighbor accepted the offer, but in a week returned the machine. "I was never so disappointed," she explained. "I waited two hours for those streams of boiling suds to appear and pour through the clothes; then I washed the clothes on the board and was two hours late."

Inquiry revealed the fact that she had not used the cover of the machine and had actually expected to do her washing with the steam she had allowed to escape into the room.

"Well, you won't persuade me to try it again," she said testily. She is still using the washboard. So is Ann.

There are, of course, women who cannot or will not apply a scientific principle nor understand a mechanical device, however simple. There are others, men and women, too, who grudge the lightening of any burden borne by another.

Obstinacy is frequently a bar more impassable for improvements than either ignorance or stupidity. The "old days" and the "old ways" interpose a sentimental or narrow minded obstacle to progress of every sort. Who denies the charm of the pastry baked in an old fashioned brick oven? Who wouldn't prefer a sand scrubbed white maple floor to the new white tile, cold and without sentiment—until one remembers the aching back of the one who must scrub? There is something substantially cheering about a heavy, shining coal range and its gleam of glowing coal, but think of the work of tending it, of keeping it and its surroundings clean. Watch the face of the woman who uses it for broiling or frying, then vote for the gas or electric range that does its work far more perfectly and leaves the worker cool and fresh.

When You're Out of Sorts.

A good thing to try when you are out of "kilter" is to fast, drink lots of water during the fast, but remember when you are fasting to remove all reason for further fast. Having decided to fast, the faster should make up his mind to use discretion. He should not, because he has come to believe in the efficacy of fasting, determine upon a long fast for a beginning. He must not let his enthusiasm for the new treatment carry away with it his common sense. His first fast should cover two meals—breakfast and dinner.

Peril in Spring Locks.

Parents should warn their children about the dangers of getting into trunks or closets which have spring locks. A little girl while playing the other day hid from her playmates in a trunk and, the lid falling, the spring lock prevented her from lifting it, and the result was she was dead when her mother finally looked for her there. No child should be allowed to hide in closets either if the doors cannot be opened from the inside.

THEATRICAL

"The Merry Widow" and "The Devil"

The thread of the plot that holds together Joe Weber's travesty on "The Merry Widow" and "The Devil" is a mighty fine one. But the thread is quite equal to the strain on it. The libretto is practically empty and when George V. Hobart prepared it he likely studied to religiously avoid writing anything approaching an interesting story with developments that would tend to make an audience think. What story there is could by synopsized very briefly and as is the case in all travesties, it is simply used to justify the presentation of the piece and to give it a suggestion of coherence.

But the dual burlesque serves its purpose. It amuses and entertains, and judging from the applause, its presentation won at the Grand last night the audience was of the opinion the show was a decidedly good one of its kind. Apparently no expense has been spared by the production. The costumes and the settings are stunningly elaborate and there is a constant variety in the several choruses. Quite a number of pleasing songs are introduced, the taking way in which they are given probably having as much to do with the enthusiastic reception of most of them as the real quality of the songs as musical numbers. The celebrated "Merry Widow Waltz" is featured to good advantage, and other music of "The Merry Widow" score received an appreciative hearing. "Bonnie, My Highland Lassie" with its Highland chorus, caught the fancy of the audience, and "Yip-I-Yaddy-I-Ay" also made an immediate hit. In both cases Nina Collins (Fonia) was the soloist, and sang with highly acceptable expression and received excellent support from the chorus.

The atmosphere of the burlesque is naturally decidedly Parisian, and the travesty sparkles with the life and brightness of the gay French capital.

In the principal part, Sam Collins as Heinrich Bosch, valet to the prince, proved a Dutchman of unusually entertaining qualities, and was conspicuously above the average in his delineation of the much caricatured son of the Faderland. Others who appeared to particular advantage were Oscar Ragland as Baron Kaufman, Charles Stine, as the Devil, and Mina Collins as Fonia. In fact, it is on the work of the principals rather than on the merits of the play itself, if play it may be called, that its success depends. In anything but capable hands the suspense from the first curtain would be an unpleasant thing to imagine—but it is in capable hands and the desired effect is obtained in a way that provides a widely varied and very entertaining evening.

SPORTING TALK

Anyway MacPherson has the right idea to popularize rugby in Peterborough. He is getting the young fellows interested and teaching them the knack of punting, drop-kicking and the general ins and outs of the game. With an early knowledge of the game the boys grow up to be experts. Watch a mighty classy team from Peterborough in a few years.—Lindsay Warder.

With the hope of being good and strong when he meets Jack Johnson in their battle for the heavyweight championship of the world, Jeffries has decided to engage Frank Gotch, the champion wrestler of the world, to work with him for a few months when he begins training for the fight. Jeffries intends to work twice a day with Gotch, so as to be in fine condition when the bell clangs. Gotch will probably accept Jeffries' offer to assist him in his training.

The American League, at its annual meeting next month, the exact date of which has not been decided, will take up seriously the matter of abolishing spikes from the paraphernalia of the diamond.

Jack Marks is spoken of as manager of the Brantford hockey team this winter. Roy Brown has declined the issue. Plenty is enough, for Roy.

FOOTBALL

The hitherto unbeaten British Soccer team, the Pilgrims, were blanked in Pennsylvania.

Johnson Proud of Fines.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Jack Johnson, returned Thursday from Detroit in a big new blue and cream colored automobile, which he bought in that city, and says he is much pleased with his purchase. He asserts he can go 70 miles an hour.

"I've been fined in nearly every town I've been in for speeding," he remarked with mingled pathos and pride in his tone, "and I don't think it's right. I've never hurt anybody yet."

Johnson's expansive smile was his chief response when the statement credited to Jeffries that he could stop Johnson in six rounds was repeated to him.

"Maybe the bout will end in six rounds," he said, "but Jeffries has picked the wrong man as winner."

Violated Fruit Marks Act.

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—Further prosecutions by Dominion fruit inspectors for illegal marking and packing of apples have resulted in the following convictions: J. P. Dunn, Streetsville; J. A. and E. Brown, Port Hope; W. J. Henders, Port Perry; Albert Brent, Port Perry; C. F. Chase, Frankford; Phillips and White, Frankford; R. J. Graham, Belleville; Thomas Brain, Oakville; F. P. Ainsworth, Brighton; Royal Fruit Co., Edmonton, Alta. The fines ranged from $10 to $50.

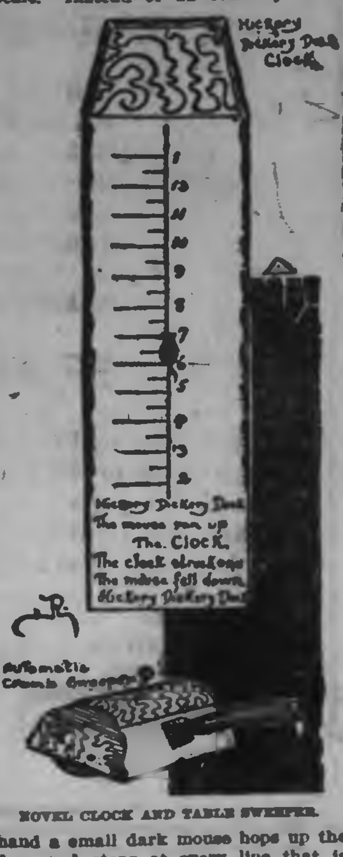
Historic House Burned.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Nov. 6.—The old and historic Livingstone manor, located near Tivoli, on the banks of the Hudson River, was destroyed by fire last night. It was in this house, erected in 1783, that Chancellor Livingstone swore George Washington into office in 1789. Its novel architecture has been copied by famous architects from all parts of the country. The fire was caused by burning leaves.

DICKERY-DOCK CLOCK.

Table Crumb Sweeper Built Along Lines of Carpet Invention.

If Mother Goose needed anything more to perpetuate her she has it now. There's a brand new hickory dickery dock clock that shows just how and why the active little mouse of the rhyme went on his travels up and down. The "face" of the clock is perpendicular, with the very necessary "1" o'clock which marks the end of mousie's journey at the tiptop of the scale. Instead of an ordinary clock hand a small dark mouse hops up the face and stops at every line that is marked, so that the time may be told, if not to the very second, at least approximately. The clock is made of wood and would be a treasure in a child's bedroom or nursery.



NOVEL CLOCK AND TABLE SWEEPER.

The automatic crumb sweeper shown in the cut is a miniature of the familiar carpet sweeper, intended for table use. It is fitted with a tiny revolving brush.

There is a new bonbon box of glass in the form of a book, fastened with brass clasps.

Substitute For a Waitress.

It is a delight to be waited upon at the table by one who is deft and watchful and whose presence you feel merely in increased comfort. But if the attempt at waiting is made by a blunderer whose mistakes and intrusions absorb half one's attention then it is better, as they say in some localities, to "do your own reaching." This involves much passing of dishes from one person to another, and if there is any attempt at serving in courses it means that one person must rise and perform part of the duties of a waitress.

Various plans have been tried to substitute some method or mechanical device for waiting at table, but most of them bring the quick lunch counter too forcibly to mind. The most successful one came to my attention recently and is merely a set of shelves inclosed on one side and of the same height as the dining table. It is loaded in the kitchen with the whole meal and all the dishes needed for serving it, then as the affair is on easy rolling casters it is taken into the dining room with very little effort.

The hostess sits at one end of the table, the "waiter" at her side with its open shelves facing her and the back toward the other people. The dishes of one course are removed to a shelf without rising and the items of the next taken out. When the meal is finished the dishes and remnants of food are practically all in the waiter, and in a minute this is rolled into the kitchen, saving numberless steps.

Business and the Housekeeper.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the business woman makes a poor housewife. In many ways her business training stands her in good stead, and she is better equipped for her work than the girl who has spent all her time at home. It would take an ex-business girl surely to discover the comfort of using a typewriter chair at her sewing machine. The fact that it turns on a pivot makes it possible for her to turn to her cutting table without rising, and the fact that it can be adjusted to any height adds to comfort when running the machine.

Perhaps it is typical of the business woman any way that she is not content with old ways when newer and easier ways may be found. More business methods would save many an hour in the home.

Soft Ginger Cookies.

Put a level teaspoonful of soda in a measuring cup, add three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, one-quarter cupful of melted butter or lard, a saltspoonful of salt, a level teaspoonful of ginger and enough sifted pastry flour to make a dough as soft as can be handled. Shape small bits of dough, lay in the greased baking pan and press out half an inch thick. Bake carefully.

THE BANDBOX LADY.

She Met In Her Wanderings a Fairy Godfather.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

She had on a little gray frock, and she carried a bandbox. Beyond that the man in the big red motor saw nothing except the tired droop of the shoulders under the coat. The day was hot, the road dusty.

He stopped his motor. "If you will pardon informality," he said, "I'll take you into town."

The girl looked up at him. She had blue eyes—tired blue eyes. They seemed to weigh and then to accept his trustworthiness.

"Yes," she agreed. "I'm—I'm not very well, and it's farther than I thought."

He put her into the wide back seat, into which she nestled, with a weary sigh. Then he drove toward town in silence, holding himself all the time sternly to the position of a man giving a tired fellow creature a lift, although with the thought of the blue eyes it was not easy.

At the edge of the town she said timidly, "Will you let me out here?"

As there was on each side of them only barren stretches of waste land, with three great oaks in the foreground, Robson turned and looked at her in astonishment.

"I can just as well take you the rest of the way."

"There isn't any rest of the way."

His eyes swept the landscape. "But where do you live?"

She blushed, then laughed a little. "In my bandbox," she said.

He stopped his machine and turned on her squarely.

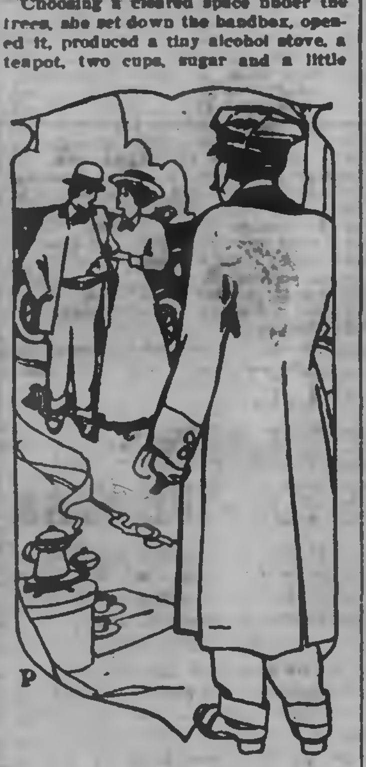
"Can you wave your wand and change your box into a house?"

"No, but I can make you a cup of tea in exchange for my ride."

"Good!" he said and drove the machine into the shade of the oaks.

The little lady alighted and took off her hat and coat, revealing thus in the sunlight the red gold of her hair, the snowy whiteness of her blouse.

Choosing a cleared space under the trees, she set down the bandbox, opened it, produced a tiny alcohol stove, a teapot, two cups, sugar and a little gray box of tea. Then, closing the bandbox, she made a table of it.



IN HIS EYES AT LEAST THE QUEEN COULD DO NO WRONG.

He sat down and watched her as she put the kettle on to boil. "Child," he said suddenly, "tell me how it happens."

Her head went up, and she caught her breath quickly. Then she said, "You mean that I live this way?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever know," she asked, "what it is to work all day in a stuffy room sewing on heavy garments, with tired people all about you sewing, too, to grow weary and heartsick and at last to lose your place?"

Robson's heart went out to her. She was so little and frail and helpless, and she was good. Any one could tell that from the purity of her eyes, the firm curve of her mouth. He had known so many women whose lips were not firm and whose eyes—

"Well, that's what happened to me," she told him. "I lost my place, and when they paid me off I went into the park and sat on a bench and wondered what I would do. And on another bench was a tramp. He had come in from the country, and there was a daisy in his buttonhole. And all at once I knew I wanted to go to the country too. I wanted to be a tramp—a respectable one." She smiled a little. "So I packed everything in this bandbox. It isn't as heavy as a bag. I had a little money, and that pays for my lodgings at night in the farmhouses, and during the day I cook my own meals by the roadside."

The tea was ready, and she poured it, and when she handed Robson his cup he asked:

"How long have you done it?"

"A month," she said, "and this is the end of my journey. Tomorrow I go to work again."

"On my soul"—Robson was thinking of the roll of bills in his pocket—"it isn't fair!"

"Life isn't fair," she agreed. "But I am better and stronger than I was. I think now that I can face the winter."

It was coming to him that he did not want her to face it alone. He had met many women, but none that had in an hour crept so completely into his heart.

And, having always had his own way, he planned to have it now. But her next words destroyed his castle of dreams.

"There was another reason," she said and blushed, "why I ran away. There was a man—who wanted to marry me."

Robson's heart jumped. "And you?" he questioned.

"I wanted to marry him," she said, "but his pay is small, and most of it must be sent west to his old parents. He is ambitious, and if he married he couldn't get ahead. He begged me to marry him, but I wouldn't. I knew that marriage would hold him back, and I knew that for his sake I must not."

Robson began to see dimly the tragedy that was here.

"And you will work, both of you, without hope?"

There came into her face a white radiance. "We have love," she whispered, "he and I." And then suddenly she started to her feet.

"Listen!" she said.

Far in the distance Robson heard the sound of some one whistling—a clear, trilling sound. The girl's face was illumined. "I wrote him that I should be under the oaks," she said. "He is coming to me"—

"Then I am in the way?" Robson asked.

"Oh, no." She flung out her hands. "You have helped me; he will be glad."

But Robson, knowing the thoughts of men, was not so sure.

"Perhaps he'd rather find you alone"—

"No; stay," she pleaded and flew down the road to meet the broad shouldered young fellow who came swinging along toward them.

Robson knew what the men of his own world would have thought, the suspicion that would have clouded their faces, but in this man's face was infinite trust. In his eyes, at least, the queen could do no wrong.

"She has told me that you gave her a lift," he said, "and I thank you for her. She oughtn't to have tramped, but she would"—

"No; she ought not." Robson was comparing her delicacy, her refinement, with this plain workaday being. And yet she loved him. One could see it in the happiness that shone from her face.

"I brought some things for our supper," the man said. "Perhaps you'd join us."

Robson declined. His idyl of the afternoon was over. But the girl begged. He stayed and ate the tinned salmon and crackers and the fat currant cakes, and they talked with him frankly of their plans.

"After this she goes her way, and I go mine," the man said sadly. "It isn't what I want, but she says I must."

Then all at once Robson had an inspiration.

"Look here," he said, "she told me that you were working in the parks. Now, I've got a big place in South Carolina, and my head forester needs a man to help him. It would give you a chance to learn, and it's among the pines. It would do her good." He glanced at the girl.

"It's too good to be true," the man said huskily, and the girl breathed. "God bless you!"

And after that benediction Robson went away.

"Come and see me," he said to the man and gave him his card, "and we will make final arrangements."

Then he chugged away in his big red motorcar, a man who, having played the part of fairy godfather, was yet heavy hearted for the happiness he had missed.

The Modern Architect.

In his book on "The English House" W. Shaw Sparrow, the eminent English art critic, puts up a novel plea for the castigation of the modern architect through newspaper criticism. "Public opinion," he says, "should be an artist's critic as well as his client.

"At present he never feels that whip with a thousand thongs which newspapers keep for writers, painters, actors and dramatists. A writer of a bad play is flogged in one week by all the leading newspapers in England, for those in country places quote from the best known London critics. Indeed, there is so much ado that a bad play might well be a danger to the British empire. Yet it does harm only to the dramatist and his company, while a single bad plumber, a single slipshod builder, does more mischief in a year than all the bad plays written in a century."

Her Treat.

In the English royal family it is the custom to decorate the breakfast table in the favorite flower of the person who has a birthday. When Queen Victoria of Spain was the Princess Ena of Battenberg her flower was the primrose, and on her thirteenth birthday she received primroses as usual. Then she jokingly expressed the wish that, as she was Scotch, there would be a change to thistles. Her brothers kept the wish in mind and gathered thistles for her fourteenth birthday. But Ena suspected something was up and, slipping downstairs earlier than usual, saw the thistles and took action. When her brothers came down, keen for the surprise to their sister, they found chopped thistles and vinegar waiting for them and in front of their plates the sign reading, "A Treat For Donkeys."

"But ze foot of ze bed," the bewildered Frenchman said, "it ees not ze end of ze leg."

THE NEW MOVE

The citizens of Peterborough are waking up. They realise that their usual good luck in securing good things from railways to factories, at little or no expense, is deserting them, at any rate for the moment. But mere advertising will not suffice. What are we going to advertise?

It is a great pity that obstacles are being thrown in the way of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard line of railway. Its railways are Peterborough's chief asset next to its water-power. Cheap power and good transportation facilities will get us factories and they will come in no other way. It is idle to ignore the fact that we have met with reverses rather than advancement, in the last few years.

It will not do to develop a policy of making private profit out of public utilities in Peterborough. It will kill our prospects. It may keep us a healthy, compact little city, but it will end there. Progress and rapid development do not come in this manner. They are the result of inducements. Factory after factory is going to other places while in Peterborough we have lost instead of gaining. For Peterborough, there are far too many houses vacant just now. It might not be wise to say more in print. But on Tuesday evening we hope that there is to be some plain statement and practical speaking from a number of speakers which the local press might, if necessary, be asked not to mention. The policy of waiting, as it is called, is merely a form of living death. It is a policy that is begotten of fear and incapacity. The good business man goes after business—and gets it. It is the same with a city. The "dear old stagers" of the past did not believe in going out of their way in any daring manner, for business. But they are dead. In fact, some of them were dead and didn't know it. Other people walked all over them while they sat behind the stove shaking their heads in a prophetic and misgiving way. But nil nisi bonum.

If Peterborough does not go ahead in the future as in the past—what will be the reason?

GUY FAWKE'S DAY WAS CELEBRATED BY THE LOCAL DISTRICT ORANGE LODGE

A Splendid Fowl Supper and a Pleasing Programme in the Forester's Hall, Simcoe Street. An Interesting Talk by Rev. E. A. Pearson on His Visit to Rome.

The anniversary of the discovery of Guy Fawkes in time to prevent the British House of Commons being blown up by him, was celebrated last night by the City District Lodge of the Loyal Orange Order in the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, in a manner that bespoke the progressiveness of the Order in this city.

The accommodation of the hall was taxed to its utmost, owing to the large number of members and their friends who were present. From six o'clock until eight supper was served by the ladies, and the bill-of-fare was a choice one; in fact it was of such a high order that those who sat down, in the early part of the evening, gave such a good account of themselves that many who came in late did not fare so well. Fowl suppers are always a success, especially when the ladies have charge, and the one last night was much enjoyed by the 450 who sat down to the feast during the two hours.

Shortly after eight o'clock the programme was commenced with Mr. Joseph Batten, Grand Chaplain for Eastern Ontario, occupying the chair. With him on the platform were Rev. E. A. Pearson, Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. H. C. Coon and officers of the Orange Lodges of the city.

The programme was a splendid one and was well arranged. Each number was heartily applauded, and when circumstances would permit, encores were given.

REV. E. A. PEARSON.

The Rev. E. A. Pearson's short talk on his visit to Rome, where with a party of others he was given an audience with Pope Pius X. was most interesting, and the speaker was listened to with rapt attention by the large number present. He first spoke of the Capuchin Church, in which 4,000 monks have been buried. Different passages and other parts are now decorated with skulls and bones, and the spectacle, although very interesting, is inclined to be rather gruesome. Years ago these monks thought the pagan soil of Rome was not fit to be buried in, and they brought earth from Egypt for this purpose. From the church the party went to the Vatican. It is necessary, in the event of an audience with the Pope being granted, for the visitor to secure a new suit. This was secured at an establishment, conducted by an Italian, and the speaker remarked that, if possible, this class of business men will endeavor to get the better of their customers as much as possible; yet if a firm stand is taken by the purchaser they will take a much reduced price. Having procured the suit, the party, which was composed of five, arrived at the Vatican at ten o'clock, and, after passing the Swiss guards, who are attired in beautiful costumes, were ushered into the presence of the Major Domo, where their tickets were marked for 11.30. It took three hours, however, before the room where the Pope received was reached and entered and another three-quarters of an hour before His Holiness, accompanied by the guards, arrived. As an act of etiquette it is customary, but not necessary, to kiss the ring on the Pope's finger. After this was done he at once began speaking to those around him, but on his occasion paid particular attention to a widow and her children. After the Pope passes around and gives his blessing, the audience is over, and all leave. Rev. Mr. Pearson referred to Pope Pius as a man who had a beautiful and kindly face, and who apparently felt the responsibility placed upon him.

Reference was also made to the trip up the River Foyle and the visit to Londonderry. No sight on the whole journey appealed to him so much as his first glimpse of Ireland, which was there in all its beauty. He walked the walls of Derry, which are still in a good state of preservation. The party stopped at the Northern Counties hotel, in which place not a drop of liquor is sold. Here a Bible is placed in every room and one presented to every traveller. The Doris Column and St. Columbus church was visited, and the bomb shell which was sent over the walls by Murray, with a note demanding surrender, was seen. Belfast was visited during the course of an Orange celebration on the 12th of July, and in which 5,000 Orangemen took part. In the Hippodrome on Sunday afternoon, a large meeting was held, and what appealed to him most was the reading of the rules of the Orange Order. From Belfast they went to Dublin and crossed the Boyne river on the 12th of July. In concluding, Rev. Mr. Pearson said he would be pleased to grant their request and give a talk on Ireland and the Boyne.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING; REPORTS FOR THE YEAR

The formation of a park commission to work in conjunction with the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society.

The affiliation of the local society with the Ontario Horticultural Society.

The sending of delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Horticultural Society at Toronto next week.

The holding of a horticultural show in Peterborough.

The above were some of the matters decided on at the annual meeting of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society held in the City Council Chamber last night. There was a good turnout of the members and considerable business was transacted. Mr. P. Campbell, the president, occupied the chair.

The following communication was received from J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of the Ontario Horticultural Society;

To the Secretary;

Dear Sir,—I wish to call attention of the directorate of your society to the fact that the most important meeting of the year, dealing with questions of vital importance to all the horticultural society of this Province, will convene in the City Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 9th and 10th. On the above dates the Horticultural Association will hold its annual convention, for which an excellent programme has been prepared, including a number of speakers from the American Civic Association. The question of an increased grant to the societies will also be brought up, and the directors are arranging for a strong delegation to wait on the Government in this behalf. In order that your delegates may be in a position to take part in all the questions that may arise, it will be necessary for you to forward the membership fee for your society of $2. to Mr. H. B. Cowan, of Peterborough, treasurer of the Ontario Horticultural Association, your society is entitled to send three delegates to this convention. Single fare rates can be obtained on all railways by procuring standard certificates from your station agent.

Trusting that your delegates will be present and the good work will continue to prosper, I am.

Yours truly,
J. LOCKIE WILSON,
Superintendent.

In reference to the above communication Mr. A. P. Pousette moved that this society affiliate with the Provincial Society. Mr. Stocker seconded it and it carried.

Moved by Dr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, that the president, Mr. Stocker, and Mr. Wise be delegates to attend the Provincial convention and their expenses be paid by the Society.—Carried.

PARK COMMISSIONER.

Mr. P. Campbell said there was a demand now for a park commission to work in conjunction with the society in regard to parks, boulevards, trees, and especially dead trees, of which there are a number about the city at the present time.

Secretary Beale said he had written to the Mayor on the subject but his letter had never been placed before the Council. The Mayor said that the Council did not want to take the matter up this year on account of the lack of funds.

Mr. Pousette said that it was not for the Council to say. If the Horticultural Society were prepared to give the matter over to the commission and presented a petition properly signed, to the Council, then that body had to act.

Mr. Dumble was very strongly in favor of a park commission. It was a very useful body and it would have authority to act while the Horticultural Society had no authority. There are a great many places in the city which could be beautified by a commission that the society cannot touch.

A motion was then made that the society take steps now to have a by-law for a park commission submitted to the people. Mr. Dumble seconded the motion.—Carried.

On Motion of Mr. Stocker, Messrs. A. P. Pousette, D. W. Dumble and Mr. Beale were appointed a commission to get up the petition to present to the Council.

It was proposed by Mr. Stocker that the society have a show this year. There are a great many more interested in horticulture now than ever before and the exhibition should be a great success. Many members were in favor of the proposition and a committee will take it up in the near future. It is several years since a Horticultural show was held here.

The whole Board of Directors were appointed a committee to wait upon the Council with the Board of Education to secure a sidewalk through Central Park.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

"Miss MacLachlan is a finished artist; her interpretation of sentiment is psychologically true; her vocal nuances in the expression of the thought and emotion of a given song are thoroughly artistic. And above all, her singing has the distinguishing quality of soul-fervor. She is indeed, even if she is not heralded as a Melba, Sembrich or Gadski, a great vocalist, the people's songstress. The Sons of Scotland are to be congratulated on the unequivocal success of their annual concert last night, and their star, Miss MacLachlan, is to be felicitated over the fact that she proved by her lovely vocalism how true it is that the Kelts are the supreme melodists of the world."—Toronto World, Friday Nov. 5, 1909.

YORK LOAN CHEQUES ARE ON THEIR WAY

All Were Not Sent Out From Toronto at the Same Time

A large number of people in town who have not received their dividend cheques from the York County Loan & Savings Company, have thought it strange all cheques did not reach Peterborough at the same time. From inquiries made it is learned that a large number of cheques have yet to be sent out. Certain lists of depositors were not complete when the first lot of cheques were mailed. The Review is informed by the manager of the Bank of Ottawa that the people who left books with that bank are likely to receive their cheques before the end of next week.

SUNDAY MEETING AT THE GRAND

Special Speaker From Toronto—Meeting at Four O'clock

William J. Conron, for many years city clerk of West Toronto, will be the speaker at the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

West Toronto has enjoyed unparalleled prosperity since the adoption of local option, and Mr. Conron has been "on the spot" and has had the best chance to see its results in every way.

The musical service will be supplied by George St. choir, and Miss Cassie Reasor will sing. It is expected that all who are in earnest about Peterborough's prosperity will turn out to hear this experienced civic authority. Every man in the city is invited.

A SUPERIOR STOCK COMPANY

Tom Marks Has a Particularly Good Company this Year—Excellent Vaudeville.

There is no better popular priced organization appearing before the Canadian public than the Tom Marks Repertoire Company. At prices that are extremely reasonable, interesting plays interspersed with bright specialties are provided and Mr. Marks has not in any previous season been surrounded by such an able company as he has with him this year. In view of the demand for the best in vaudeville the management of the company have made special efforts to secure clever artists for this department and have signed contracts with some of the ablest vaudeville people that ever appeared in connection with a repertoire show.

The company will appear at the Grand all next week in a number of the latest successful plays and the cast of principals and supporting artists will be considerably above the average of any that have been here with a stock company. The offering on Monday night at the opening of the company's local season will be the widely known and delightful comedy drama "Sergeant O'Rafferty," and taking as an indication the present encouraging demand for seats there will be one of the largest audiences of the season on hand.

Pilot Labrecque was censured for the grounding of the Montezuma at Cap la Roche and Captain Potter was admonished.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

At St. Paul's there were three services yesterday, all largely attended, and there was a spirit of much earnestness prevalent. At three o'clock Rev. A. E. Mitchell, of Hamilton, addressed the first meeting on the evangelistic campaign in the Kootenay Valley, B.C. Mr. Mitchell's account was graphic, and showed how, amidst discouraging surroundings of materialism and atheism, great good had been done.

At 4.15, after a short song service, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Atkinson, Mr. MacBeth addressed a meeting of boys and girls, who had assembled from the nearby schools. They were evidently deeply interested and profited. Then, at eight o'clock, Mr. MacBeth spoke on "Things That Are Certain," dwelling on facts that come within our knowledge clearly. The fact of our own existence, the existence of others, and of the world around were dwelt upon. The fact that our personality demanded the other fact of a personal God, a living God, the fact of a revelation in the Bible, with the marks that show the book superhuman, the fact of sin, salvation and personal experience—all were dwelt upon in such a way as to impress them upon all present. Mr. MacBeth will conduct both services on Sunday in St. Paul's, and will address the "Mitto Bible Class" at three o'clock. Judging from the interest manifested during the last few nights a day of great blessing may be expected to-morrow.

Knox Church

A large congregation and an address never to be forgotten were the two most striking remarks heard at the close of a very impressive service in Knox church. Mr. Mitchell took as his theme, "The Tragedy of a Soul," and as his text, "He went away sorrowful." It is one of the saddest stories of the New Testament. It refers to a young man. Young men are always the hope of one's country. The young men in this land, and in this day have far greater opportunities and privileges than our fathers had.

This young man was in earnest, but not intense enough. He was moral with a character stainless compared with many other men, but impure compared with Christ.

He was an enquirer after the best. Jesus offered him a career, an occupation worth while, come and follow Me. He suggested the immense field of service that would open up.

Then he offered him a character. The man wanted eternal life, but Jesus pointed out he was to be saved for time, as well as for eternity. He would be saved to serve. The only thing worth while is character, not what you have but what you are.

Jesus offered these two things on the condition of self renunciation. Jesus said to him "I want all of you." Many Christians are without happiness or peace because they have not gone far enough. Many, like this young man, so near the Kingdom, are yet lingering outside. The right thing to do is to step over the line.

The address was a wonderful appeal and left a remarkable impression on every one present. Mr. Keith emphasized its message to the young men, and said the clearest mark of gratitude to Mr. Mitchell would be a deeper consecration on the part of Christians and a definite decision on the part of all to follow Christ.

The services will continue to-morrow.

DOWNER'S CORNERS ORANGE HALL IS NOW FREE FROM DEBTS

Downer's Corners Orange Lodge royally celebrated the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot in royal style last night. The turnout was the largest in the history of the lodge, and the programme and supper were well up to former standards. The receipts were large enough to wipe off the debt on the hall and the mortgage will be burned in the near future.

Worshipful Master McGregor occupied the chair, and the programme was as follows:—

Selection by fife and drum band of L.O.L. No. 321.
Chairman's address.
Song—Mr. Ernest Thompson.
Song—Mr. Heron.
Recitation—Viola Pennington.
Address—Rev. A. H. Brace, Cobourg.
Phonograph selection.
Dialogue—"The Double Surprise of the Scoopers."
Address—Rev. W. C. Riddiford.
Song—Mr. Ernest Thompson.
Recitation—Mr. A. Holden.

Rev. A. H. Brace was given an enthusiastic reception and gave a stirring address. He said the Orangemen loved their Roman Catholic friends, but it was the system of the Roman Catholic Church that they protested against. Orangemen stood for the separation of Church and State, which the speaker referred to as a divine principle. Eternal vigilance was the price of safety, and the Orangemen should always be on the lookout.

Rev. W. G. Riddiford also gave an excellent address and was warmly greeted.

REQUISITES FOR THE STAGE

By Claude Kimball of the Lily and the Prince Co.

If you have a good mind and a certain amount of magnetism, and an unlimited capacity for hard work—earnest, sincere and loving work—it seems to me you can approach acting as a profession from any direction. Luck and sincerity will carry you quite a little distance, but like Alice in Wonderland, you will have to keep moving to keep in the same place, and that is where work is the chief essential.

Luck is an intermittent talent. As a novice on the stage, I may be considered forward in expressing opinions on its ethics—but I have had opinions on most subjects before I ever tried to act, so this opinion of mine must be accepted merely as an opinion, not as an assertion.

My life on the stage has been a safe and kindly one. The men and women with whom I have been immediately associated, and the many others I have met in various social ways, are little different from my former acquaintances, except perhaps, that they are generally broader and hence less deadly conventional. Naturally men and women whose lives are spent in travelling the world over and in the course of there travels coming in contact from time to time with individuals representing every kind of art, science and literature, must sooner or later reap the benefits of those associations.

The lessons I have learned from it are to mind my own business and to do my best to the extent that it really meant something to myself.

TRIP BY MOTOR BOAT THROUGH KAWARTHA LAKES AND THE TRENT CANAL

The current issue of the "Motor Magazine" contains an interesting article entitled "Two hundred miles by motor boat; a trip through the Kawartha Lakes and Trent Canal." It is as follows:—

Late in August of last year a party of four, consisting of three ladies and one gentleman, the latter being unanimously elected Captain, left Beaverton, Ont., on a one hundred mile trip in the motor boat, the Wa-Wa. Of course such a lengthy journey had necessitated a good deal of consideration and preparation on our part. Accordingly when we left home on that Wednesday evening to commence our voyage we were well outfitted and our motor towed a well-laden dingy behind.

After a run of four miles on Lake Simcoe, the Trent Valley canal was entered and at the end of half a mile we entered lock No. 5 and had a lift of fifteen feet. Only half a mile brought us to No. 4 and a second lift of fifteen feet. No. 3 soon appeared and gave us a lift of twenty feet. At the end of a mile run we submitted to another lift of twenty feet at No. 2 lock. Here we decided to camp for the night and by permission of the Lock Master pitched our tent on his lawn.

It was between nine and ten o'clock next morning when we left this point and after a run of a mile came to Lock No. 1, which gave us twenty-one feet of a lift. When the locks were left behind the scenery for about one mile and a half was beautiful. Then the flooded lands were entered and at the time of our voyage were so wide that it proved a matter of great difficulty to locate the channel.

By carefully following the white buoys we reached the Kirkfield lift locks. This great lift of forty-five feet frightened several of our party who talked of going ashore until we got through. However, we all remained on board and these huge steel locks proved the easiest we negotiated on the voyage. There was no rushing in of the water. We simply remained still and did not even feel the lift, although it was double the height of the previous one.

These are the locks on the Lake Simcoe route and the passage through them placed us on a level with Balsam Lake. We had dinner above the locks and a short rest. After following the high banks for two miles we came to more flooded land and were glad to enter Balsam Lake, six miles from the lift lock.

Balsam Lake is a pretty sheet of clear water, eight miles by six, with plenty of good fishing. It is also the highest lake on the canals, being about one hundred and thirty-six feet higher than Lakefield. We ran across the lake to Rosedale, posted some letters home and entered the lock.

A fall of only three feet brought us to the level of Cameron Lake. We ran down the river 'till we came to three forks, and while studying the map to find out which branch to take, we saw two motor boats coming down one of channels and promptly decided that must be the right one. About three miles up we made inquiries and found we were out of the right channel and on Burnt River. There was no alternative but to turn back and find the right channel which we did.

One mile down this channel we entered Cameron Lake. This little lake about three miles long by two wide, with heavy wooded shores, was very rough during our passage. On arriving at Fenelon Falls we had to pass through the double locks. Each of these is fourteen feet of a drop—a total of twenty-eight feet between Cameron and Sturgeon Lakes.

For two miles after leaving the locks we ran between high rocky shores and then entered the beautiful clear sheet of water, noted for its fishing and camping grounds—Sturgeon Lake. It was seven o'clock in the evening, when we arrived at Sturgeon Point and there we pitched our tent for our second night under canvas. As we were very tired we retired early though we were unable to obtain much sleep, as steamers were whistling and cottagers singing and sleep seemed impossible in the din. However we were very comfortable at the Point, and in no hurry to leave it next morning.

As a matter of fact it was nine o'clock before we got away and after a pleasant run of one hour we arrived at Bobcaygeon Locks. The pretty little village of Bobcaygeon is situated on an island in the river between Sturgeon and Pigeon Lakes. The camping grounds in the neighborhood are fine, and the fishing is good.

In Pigeon Lake, where the fishing and duck shooting are excellent in season, the waters were rough but we managed to get through the waves and as our dinner at Sandy Point was a little late, we all had good appetites and satisfied them. In the afternoon we passed Jacob's Island and the floating bridge at Gannon's Lodge, opposite Oak Orchard. We met several steamers and returned their salutes.

After entering Buckhorn Lake, we made a second mistake and took the channel to Chemong Lake and down to the Indian village instead of the Buckhorn channel. Again we had a run of six miles out of our way, on account of an error.

We returned to Buckhorn Lake and entered the locks at five o'clock going through with the steamer Majestic. A short run down Deer Bay brought us to Love Sick Locks where we pitched our tent for the night. We were thoroughly tired out; had a good night's rest, and were astir early next morning.

By the way, the moment connected with the name of the locks was told to us by the Lock Master. The tale is an Indian one concerning the wooing of an Indian maiden by a white man. In journeying to see his dark eyed sweetheart the lover was drowned at the falls and the maiden, in her grief, drowned herself at the same place. From that time the Indians called the place Love Sick Rapids and the Locks are now known by the same name. This lock has only about ten feet of a fall.

Saturday was another beautiful day and after passing through the lock we reached Love Sick Lake. This is a clear sheet of water, two miles long and rather narrow, with rocky shores. Before noon we reached Burleigh Locks, which are double locks, each having a fall of thirteen feet, or twenty-six feet in all.

Passing them brought us into Stoney Lake, a beautiful sheet of water, about ten miles long by two wide and containing nearly eight hundred islands, large and small. The rocks are well bouyed in order to prevent accidents. Many cottages are built on the rocky islands and steamers and pleasure yachts are much in evidence in this lake. Fishnig for both maskinonge and bass is much indulged in, these waters proving excellent for such fishing. We called at a cottage on Horse Shoe Island belonging to friends and remained for dinner. A maskinonge caught that morning made an excellent contribution to the meal and was much enjoyed. In the afternoon we passed between two ugly looking rocks, the channel between them bearing the ominous name of Hell's Gate.

By that way we entered Clear Lake which was very rough at the time. This lake is a small one surrounded by thick forests and does not present a very picturesque appearance. When we reached Young's Point we had to wait for the steamer Majestic in order to be locked through with her. Young's Point lies between Clear and Katchewanooka Lakes. The latter is a narrow body of water connecting Clear Lake with the Otonabee River. There is nothing remarkable in the scenery which consists chiefly of farm land, and after a short run the next place of any importance is Lakefield. This is a pretty village of about fifteen hundred people situated nine miles above the town of Peterborough.

This was the terminal point of our trip and when we arrived there at five o'clock on a Saturday evening our journey of one hundred miles (one way) was concluded. We enjoyed the hospitality of a friend over Sunday and at half past two on Monday afternoon started on our return trip. By the evening we had reached Painsbury's cottage on Stoney Lake and made our camp.

Tuesday being September 1st, the Captain was anxious for a morning's shoot in order to provide us with ducks for breakfast. Accordingly a party was made up and the men returned with eight ducks and two fine maskinonge—after three hours' sport.

Fascinated with this experience the Captain would like very much to have remained longer, but our time was limited and we were anxious to get back so our Captain reluctantly tore himself away.

Our trip home was a replica of our trip down and we passed through the same lakes and locks. There are fifteen locks between Simcoe and Lakefield, making thirty on both trips. These cause many delays and in several places we had to wait as long as an hour before the passage was free.

It was early on Friday morning when we arrived at the entrance of Lake Simcoe, but the water was too rough to allow us to enter the lake. The waves indeed were washing right over the piers into the canal. We had dinner at the railway bridge and remained till sundown when we thought the water had subsided sufficiently to allow us to make a safe run home. All the way home the roughness continued and we were glad indeed when we turned into the river. One of our party who had had considerable experience, declared that he had never before been out in so rough a sea. We have found that Balsam, Gull, Cameron and Sturgeon Lakes can get rough and choppy on occasions but they can't compare with Lake Simcoe swells.

At seven in the evening we landed at our boat-house, having taken nine days over the two hundred mile trip. We found, however, that our time had been too limited to allow us to properly enjoy such a trip and permit of our stopping at any point we wished.

We hope, however, with the experience we have gained to plan another cruise in the Wa-Wa, which will in some respects surpass the pleasant and enjoyable Kawartha Lakes trip.

ONE WOMAN'S STATEMENT

Tells Her Suffering Sister to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills

They Proved a Blessing to Her When Her Pains and Weakness Were Almost More Than She Could Stand.

St. George, Man., Nov. 5.—(Special).—Hoping to save her sister women in the West from pains and aches which come at the critical times in a woman's life, Mrs. Arsene Vinet, of this place, has given the following statement for publication:—

"I have brought up a large family and have always enjoyed good health until the last two years. I am fifty-four years of age and at the critical time of life that comes to every woman, I had pains in my right hip and shoulder. I could not lie down two minutes at a time without suffering the greatest agony. Sometimes I awakened with a feeling as if some one had laid a piece of iron on my head. Another time it would be a burning pain under the left shoulder.

"I took many medicines, but could get no relief, till reading of cures of similar cases to my own by Dodd's Kidney Pills, led me to try them. They did wonders for me.

"I want all women to know what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. The woman who has sound Kidneys is safeguarded against nine-tenths of the suffering that makes life a burden to the women of Canada.

Cotton Growing a Negro's Job.

London, Nov. 6.—Bernhard Dernburg, the German Secretary of State for the Colonies, who is returning from a trip to the Southern States, where he made a study of cotton growing, said in an interview that his experience in the United States convinced him that cotton growing was essentially a black man's job.

Boston, Nov. 6.—Archibald McClellan, editor of the official organ of the mother church in Boston, concerning the exoneration of Mrs. Stetson, said such action is not binding on the mother church in Boston and that the decision of the mother church in revoking the license of Mrs. Stetson to teach Christian Science for three years or more, is in no way affected.

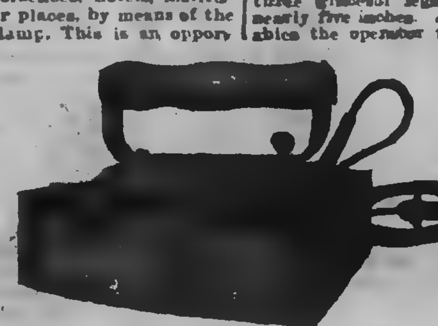
THE COLLIER-CUNNINGHAM COMPANY AND ITS PROGRESS

GROWING PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRY THAT IS TURNING OUT GOODS THAT ARE IN GREAT DEMAND

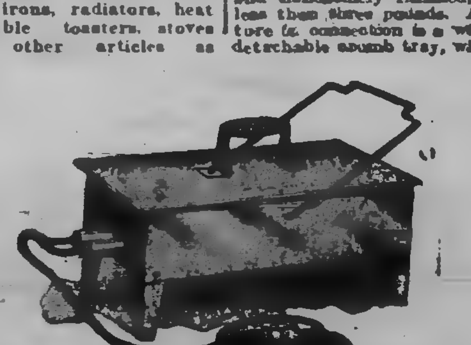
The Varied Uses of Electricity in the Home—Articles That Sell on Their Merits.

Opportunities are not always taken advantage of. They may be found everywhere, but in the business world they generally present themselves more prominently in cities, towns and villages which are only in their infancy and are making progress. This is the situation in Peterborough to-day, principally owing to the fact that there is water-power in abundance, which may and is being converted into electricity to be used for innumerable purposes, one of which is the lighting of residences, hotels, institutions and other places, by means of the incandescent lamp. This is an opportunity that has provided another and it has been taken advantage of and the result has been that this city now numbers amongst its many progressive concerns, the Collier-Cunningham Co., Limited, manufacturers of electrical apparatus. This presents another opportunity to the citizens of this place and outside points; namely the opportunity to save money, and time, by using one or more of the articles made by this firm. It is located in well adapted premises at the foot of Simcoe street. Machinery of the latest design and proficient workmen turn out electrical irons, radiators, heat pads and table toasters, stoves and various other articles as demanded by the trade. The company was only organized two years ago, but from that time to this wonderful progress has been made. An idea of the amount of success attained can be found in the fact that six hundred electric smoothing irons are in use in Peterborough to-day, and that means that every third family which uses electricity owns and operates one. The company has also become known from the sale and merit of their goods all over the Dominion and this means considerable advertising for the city of Peterborough.

MR. H. S. COLLIER,
Vice-President and Manager of The Collier-Cunningham Co.

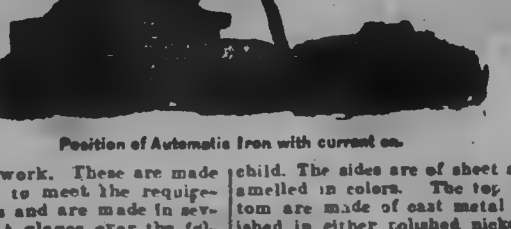


Tourist Iron.



The Collier Table Toaster.

Besides the articles of which cuts are presented in this article, there are manufactured electric irons to be used for heavy work. These are made more especially to meet the requirements of tailors and are made in several patterns. A glance over the following will give the reader an idea of the goods turned out by the Collier-Cunningham Company.



Position of Automatic Iron with current on.

ELECTRIC MOUNTER.

The Electric Mounter was designed and is manufactured to meet the needs of the progressive photographer. The Roy Studio has one in use and it has been found everything that it was represented to be.

AUTOMATIC SMOOTHING IRON.

The main feature of the Automatic Smoothing Iron is the cut-off, by means of which the current, the instant the iron is turned on its heel, is shut off. This also has the effect of keeping the temperature of the iron sufficiently cool to prevent scorching. This means much to the user, working on light goods. A thick asbestos pad, placed just above the heating element and below the top casing, allows the handle to remain cool and keeps the heat at the bottom where it is required. This iron has been thoroughly tested and the automatic cut-off has been made to operate 100,000 times without showing any defects.

ELECTRIC STOVE.

The Collier Electric Stove is one of the handiest of electric heating devices. Very fine toast can be made by placing the bread directly on the plate. Again, with a good flat-bottomed kettle a quart or more of water will boil in a very few minutes. This means that tea, coffee, etc., can be made in any part of the house at a moment's notice. In hotels and restaurants the problem of how to keep the large tanks of tea or coffee just at the right temperature can be solved by the use of the Collier stove. It will fill many other requirements with perfect satisfaction at a very low cost. The construction of the stove consists of a circular plate or disc seven inches in diameter, set upon three graceful legs at a height of nearly five inches. A swing handle enables the operator to move the stove about in comfort, even when at its hottest. All but the top plate is nickle-plated and polished.

TABLE TOASTER.

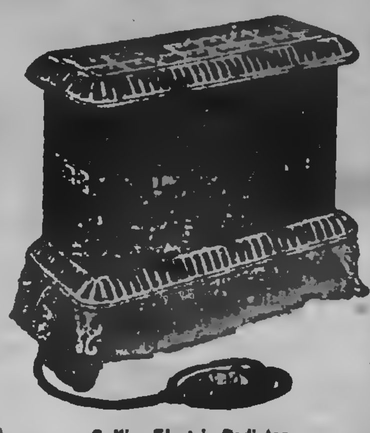
Toasting by electricity is a luxury to be obtained with the use of the economical electric Table Toaster, the cost of operation being but one cent per day. The toast can be made that beautiful amber shade, uniform and crisp, with a spongy centre, which everyone enjoys. It can be made as fast as the family of four or five can eat it. The Toaster is nickle-plated and handsomely finished, and weighs less than three pounds. A special feature in connection is a wire gauze and detachable crumb tray, which prevents crumbs falling on the table or remaining in the toaster.

RADIATOR.

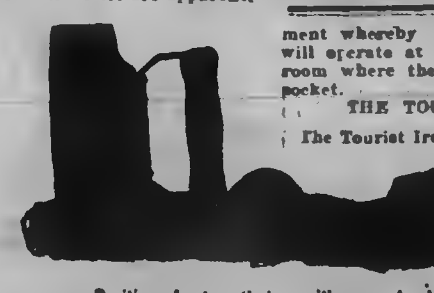
The electric radiator is a convenience that will be appreciated by those fortunate enough to have one in use, in the sick room, bath-room, boudoir, office or in any of the innumerable places it may be utilized. Wherever there is an electric lamp, the radiator can be operated. All that is necessary is for the plug to be inserted instead of the lamp, and the button pressed. The weight is less than eight pounds and it can be conveyed to any part of the house if necessary by a child. The sides are of sheet steel, enamelled in colors. The top and bottom are made of cast metal and finished in either polished nickel or aluminum. Besides being invaluable as a heater, it is an ornament fit to grace any room. One feature of the radiator that is much appreciated by the ladies is its utility in drying hair after shampooing. Sitting in an ordinary chair, it may be adjusted to suit any position of the head.

HEAT PAD.

This unique device consists of wires insulated and protected by asbestos, woven into a thin light flexible sheet or pad and is supplied with long conducting cord and connecting plug which is inserted in any electric lamp socket. As the current passes through the wires, heat is generated by resistance and by means of a regulating switch the temperature desired may be obtained and maintained constantly for an indefinite period. The many advantages of this device are apparent.



Collier Electric Radiator



Position of automatic iron with current cut off.

The size is 11x5 inches and 1-4 inch thick.

The weight is less than a pound, and as it will conform to the shape of the body its lightness is enhanced. Compare this with a 2-quart water bottle with its six or more pounds resting on the stomach in cramps, and the advantage of the light pad is appreciated.

The Collier Heat Pad can be attached wherever there is an electric lamp, and it does not require quite the current a 16 c.p. lamp uses. The operative cost is therefore very small. Every pad is fitted with attachment whereby a lamp and the pad will operate at the same time in a room where there is but one lamp socket.

THE TOURIST IRON.

The Tourist Iron is only four pounds in weight and the feature of its construction is that it is fitted with a removable handle. By the simple turn of the thumb screw the iron is dismantled of the handle, and this allows it to be packed into a very small space in the trunk or grip as the case may be. This iron is designed to meet the needs of the travelling public and there are many in use at the present time giving every satisfaction. It is operated on the same principle as the other devices and by owning one of these irons the traveller is enabled to keep clothes neat and dressy without inconvenience.

THE REVIVAL OF FAITH

Is it likely that "faith" will ever be where it once was in the minds of the people? Are people asking for greater definiteness and certitude in matters of religion? There can be no doubt in answer to these questions, which are the subject of daily conversation, that people are, in fact, as a whole, the world over, asking themselves why should the main purpose of religion, the practice of Virtue, be obscured in any form of exposition. The schoolmen enjoyed theology as such. The deficiencies and shortcomings of language with respect to perfectly definite expression of meaning, afforded much scope for quibbling, haggling and otherwise making a nuisance and a farce of the preaching and practice of goodness, which, after all, ought to be and must necessarily be, a very simple thing. Will "faith" ever revive? The man-in-the-street says "No, not as it used to be." It can never again be wrapped up in exclusiveness or be shrouded in mystery. It must be plain to be understood, for without a fair measure of comprehension faith is merely superstition and superstition like "chivalry" is a thing of the past.

Men made God to be a burner of witches, the Builder of a place of eternal torment. That idea has certainly gone out of fashion. "It simply couldn't be" to the minds of the people, so it departed from further consideration.

The coming religion is the worship of God as the Supreme Good, the Lover and Approver of Good. If we are good, therefore, we shall receive the All-father's approval. It is an easily-understood religion and easily applied. There is no way of shirking it, and it works out most satisfactorily. Pauline disquisitions have gone out of fashion, and with them, in the popular mind at least, the need for theology. The cultivation of our desire for good in the probable course of our future education for, manifestly, if we do not desire "good" all else is useless, and if we do, all else is needless. To the theologian the world is crying "Out it out!" Kindness, benevolence, self-sacrifice, helpfulness will succeed wealth as cardinal virtues in public esteem, and then we shall be pretty near to a realization of Heaven, as near as disease and decay will permit us.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The coming French-Canadian Congress at Ottawa, so the Toronto Star says, will demand that French be used equally with English in public schools in Ontario, where it appears to be desirable.

The "science men" are right. The Caput of Toronto University needs to be disciplined. It's weak in that quarter. The people of this province are making up their minds that higher education is doing harm.

We read Hon. W. L. M. King's speech to the people of Middlesex with amazement. He said that it was no use sending mere farmers to Parliament. They should send skilled advocates or lobbyists. "To such base uses have we come."

Western Ontario towns are being paved with Whitrowlite, which we gave an account of in these columns some time ago. Even Lindsay is to be paved. Peterborough needs a shaking-up. We are behind in many ways.

Prof. Whitney, an eminent American authority, says that soils do not get worn-out and exhausted. He points to China and India, where without fertilizers the soil continues to provide wonderful crops.

It strikes a man as rather bad logic to punish Blythe with an 18-year sentence when he escaped full responsibility for his deed, because "he was too drunk to know what he was doing." Either one thing or the other, he should have been hanged or pardoned. The courts seem to be getting lost in a sort of theological maze.

M. Prevost, a prominent French-Canadian, will vote against the Government, while Sir Hibbert Tupper will support C.P.R. and G.T.P. monopoly by voting against Mr. McBride. It is true that B.C. is not in a pleasant condition politically, but when monopolies are to be broken there can be no excuse for voting to continue them.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said at Ottawa that the Government and Opposition were agreed on the naval scheme. Conservatives do not, however, agree with Sir Wilfrid's naval policy. The Canadian navy idea is neither imperial nor economical, and the idea of reserving the right to say when we shall help the empire in case of war is virtual independence.

This is the era of political clubs. They are being opened everywhere by both parties. The Conservative Club, of Peterborough, has opened its new year, which ends next Thanksgiving Day, by a splendid sale of tickets. The club will be well run and carefully looked after. It will be a rendezvous for party men, more than ever. Conservatives are enthusiastic and loyal.

CONTROL YOUR FAT

One can now take off and keep off extra fat at will. If you have an over-fat abdomen or double chin you can clear it away completely without a minute's bother, exercising or dieting. Take a teaspoonful after meals and at bed time of this mixture;—1-2 oz. Marmola, 3-4 oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 4 3-4 oz. Peppermint Water—any druggist has them—and you go on eating as best pleases you; don't worry about results.

The double chin and ponderous stomach will soon show signs of melting away. They will not sag in or wrinkle, however; just go down nice and smooth and even. That effect is due to the harmless natural action of the mixture.

This is explained as follows: Blame overfatness to the stomach. It is getting lazy. Instead of making energy and muscle from your food it is manufacturing fat. The above mixture corrects this defect and hence it makes you stronger and healthier; at the same time it is taking off of you 12 to 16 ounces of useless fat a day. The reason it affects double chin, hips, etc., first is because the fat on them is softer and can not resist the remedy as long as that on the limbs. But eventually all the fat has to go if you keep up the treatment.

Ditched Train to Prevent Collision.

Mason City, Iowa, Nov. 6.—To prevent a collision between passenger trains on the Iowa Central and Great Western railroads at Mason Junction, early yesterday, Towerman James Edinburg derailed Iowa Central train No. 6, southbound, sending it into the ditch. The mail coach was burned with all the mail and a large amount of money. No one was hurt.

Stole Wedding Gifts.

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 6.—An English orphan boy named Bell, aged 19, got back at W. J. Webb, his employer, for being discharged as a farm hand. He returned and stole a quantity of silverware, chiefly wedding gifts belonging to Mrs. Webb. Bell pleaded guilty to burglary yesterday and was remanded for sentence.

The Fate of Three Hundred.

Cape Town, Nov. 6.—A quantity of charred wreckage has been washed ashore near Port Alfred on the south-east coast of Cape Colony, probably from the British steamer Warratah, which had 300 passengers and a cargo of metal and wool, and has never been heard from since she sailed from Port Natal on July 26 for London.

Ladies Issue a Daily Paper.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 6.—Members of the local council of women last night edited the regular Saturday morning edition of The Colonist.

Four women will be candidates for Vancouver's School Board.

OF INTEREST

Religion in Europe—

The Montreal Witness.

Curiously enough, to those who have not given much close study to the matter, Mr. McCabe, in his 'Decay of the Church of Rome,' makes out a weaker case when dealing with the Teutonic than when he is writing about the Latin races. In the latter case he produces striking figures. In France, for instance, in the early seventies, the persons regarded as Catholics numbered at least 30,000,000 out of 36,000,000, while to-day there are not more than 6,000,000 out of 39,000,000. Taine, fifteen years ago, estimated the number at 7,500,000, and reckoned that among these the proportion was four women to one man. The comparative scarcity of churches in Paris is given as an example. There are only 71 to a population of 2,714,100. In the eleventh arrondissement there are three for a population of 230,149, and Mr. Yves Guyot found at high mass, on Sunday, August 25, 1901, only 950 worshippers, of whom only 80 were men. M. Paul Sabatier, an impartial observer, offers the same testimony, indeed, he goes further, and reduces the number of Catholics in France to three or four millions. In Italy, Mr. McCabe finds that the northern provinces, which contain some forty per cent. of the population, are quite dominated by the anti-clericals; that the central provinces are about fairly divided between clerical and anti-clerical influence; while the southern provinces are nearly solidly Catholic. But seven-tenths of the southerners are illiterate as against less than three-tenths in the north. This is confirmed in the strongest manner by Professor Labanca, of Rome, who, as a Roman Catholic theologian, complains of the absolute indifference of the educated class in Italy to the whole subject, and of the fact that no Italian university now possesses a Theological Faculty, though there is in his own chair a sort of substitute for one in Rome. Much the same thing Mr. McCabe tells of Portugal and Spain, only that the educated minority is much smaller than it is in Italy. In Portugal the mass of illiterates is as high as 78.6 per cent.

ENGLISH SCHOOLS.

uaint Customs That Are Maintained With Religious Care.

The head master of Manchester Gramar school, in a speech at Rochdale ferred to a custom at Rugby school hich forbids a boy of less than three ears' standing to turn up his trousers nd insists on his doing so after that eriod.

The custom is only a minor instance the quaint practices that exist at l the great public schools in England and are maintained with religious are, though in many cases their origin obscure or unknown. The Shrove uesday tossing of the pancake at Vestminster school, with its ensuing cramble for the largest fragment, hich gains for its possessor a guinea om the dean, is perhaps the best nown among them. A curious cusm at Marlborough requires every y to bring to school with him a ushion, technically termed a "kish"—ith the "i" long. This article is his separable companion in school time nd, in addition to the ordinary functons of a cushion, is employed to car- books from one form room to anher.

At Shrewsbury school, at the beinning of each term, "hall elections" e held for the posts of hall crier, all constable, hall postman and hall cavengers. The genial brutality of outh often selects for the position of all crier either the most nervous boy the school or one who is afflicted ith a stammer.

The new boy in the schoolhouse at ugby is early called upon to take his art in "house singing." At this functon, which is held in one of the doritories, he has to render a song to e satisfaction of his audience, the enalty being the swallowing of a outhful of soapy water.

Another ancient school custom is the arade of the Christ's hospital blueat boys before the lord mayor at the ansion House on St. Matthew's day, hen the "Grecians," who correspond "sixth formers" elsewhere, receive guinea each and the rank and file the school are presented with new hillings.—London Mail.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Listen!" she cried, raising a warning hand, and, relaxing her vigilant attitude, moved forward once more to peer down toward the embankment.

A cab had cut in from that direction and was bearing down upon them with a brisk rumble of hoofs. As it approached, Kirkwood's heart, that had lightened, was weighed upon again by disappointment. It was no four wheeler, but a hansom, and the open wings of the apron, disclosing a white triangle of linen surmounted by a glowing spot of fire, betrayed the sex of the fare too plainly to allow of further hope that it might be the girl returning.

At the door the cab pulled up sharply and a man tumbled hastily out upon the sidewalk.

"Here!" he cried throatily, tossing the cabby his fare, and turned toward the pair upon the doorstep, evidently surmising that something was amiss, for he was Calendar in proper person and a sight to upset in a twinkling Kirkwood's ingeniously builded castle of suspicion.

"Mrs. Hallam!" he cried, out of breath. "Is my daughter here?" And then, catching sight of Kirkwood's countenance: "Why, hello, Kirkwood!" He saluted him with a dubious air.

The woman interrupted hastily. "Please come in, Mr. Calendar. This gentleman has been inquiring for you, with an astonishing tale about your daughter."

"Dorothy?" Calendar's moonlike visage was momentarily divested of any trace of color. "What of her?"

"You had better come in," advised Mrs. Hallam brusquely.

The fat adventurer hopped hurriedly across the threshold, Kirkwood following. The woman shut the door and turned with back to it, nodding significantly at Kirkwood as her eyes met Calendar's.

"Well, well?" snapped the latter impatiently, turning to the young man.

But Kirkwood was thinking quickly. For the present he contented himself with a deliberate statement of fact. "Miss Calendar has disappeared." It gave him an instant's time. "There's something fishy!" he told himself. "These two are playing at cross purposes. Calendar's no fool. He's evidently a crook to boot. As for the woman, she's had her eyes open for a number of years. The main thing's Dorothy. She didn't vanish of her own initiative. And Mrs. Hallam knows or suspects more than she's going to tell. I don't think she wants Dorothy found. Calendar does. So do I. Ergo, I'm for Calendar."

"Disappeared?" Calendar was barking at him. "How? When? Where?"

"Within ten minutes," said Kirkwood. "Here; let's get it straight." And he told what had happened, mentioning that he had not paid the cab driver.

"Thanks," said Calendar dryly. He bent his head in thought for an instant, then looked up and fixed Mrs. Hallam with an unprejudiced eye. "I say!" he demanded explosively. "There wasn't any one here that knew—eh?"

Her fine eyes wavered and fell before his, and Kirkwood remarked that her underlip was curiously drawn in.

"I heard a man leave as Mrs. Hallam joined me," he volunteered helpfully and with a suspicion of malice. "And after that—I paid no attention at the time—it seems to me I did hear a cab in the street"—

"Ow?" interjected Calendar, eying the woman steadfastly and employing an exclamation of combined illumination and inquiry more typically British than anything Kirkwood had yet heard from the man.

For her part, the look she gave Kirkwood was sharp with fury. It was more; it was a mistake, a flaw in her diplomacy, for Calendar intercepted it. Unceremoniously he grasped her bare arm with his fat hand.

"Tell me who it was!" he demanded in an ugly tone.

She freed herself with a twist and stepped back, a higher color in her cheeks, a flash of anger in her eyes.

"Mr. Mulready," she retorted defiantly. "What of that?"

"I wish I was sure," declared the fat adventurer, exasperated. "As it is, I bet a dollar you've put your foot in it, my lady. I warned you of that blackguard. There! The mischief's done. We won't row over it. One moment." He begged it with a wave of his hand, stood pondering briefly, fumbled for his watch, found and consulted it. "It's the barest chance," he muttered. "Perhaps we can make it."

"What are you going to do?" asked the woman.

"Give Mr. Mulready a run for his money. Come along, Kirkwood! We havent a minute. Mrs. Hallam, permit us." She stepped aside, and he brushed past her to the door. "Come, Kirkwood!"

He seemed to take Kirkwood's company for granted, and the young man was not inclined to argue the point. Meekly enough he fell in with Calendar on the sidewalk. Mrs. Hallam followed them out. "You won't forget?" she called tentatively.

"I'll phone you if we find out anything." Calendar jerked the words unceremoniously over his shoulder as, linking arms with Kirkwood, he drew him swiftly along. They heard her shut the door. Instantly Calendar stopped. "Look here, did Dorothy have a—a small parcel with her?"

"She had a gladstone bag."

"Oh, the devil, the devil!" Calendar started on again, muttering distractedly. As they reached the corner he disengaged his arm. "We've a minute and a half to reach Charing Cross pier, and I think it's the last boat. You set the pace, will you? But remember I'm an oldish man and—and fat."

They began to run, the one easily, the other lumbering after like an old fashioned square rigged ship paced by a liner.

The Thames appeared before them, a river of ink on whose burnished surface lights swam in long winding streaks and oily blobs. By the floating pier a county council steamboat strained its hawsers, snoring huskily. Bells were jingling in her engine room as the two gained the head of the sloping gangway.

Kirkwood slapped a shilling down on the ticket window ledge. "Where to?" he cried back to Calendar.

"Cherry Gardens pier," rasped the winded man. He stumbled after Kirkwood, groaning with exhaustion. Only the tolerance of the pier employees gained them their end. The steamer was held some seconds for them. As Calendar staggered to its deck the gangway was jerked in, the last hawser cast off. The boat sheered wide out on the river, then shot in, arrowlike, to the pier beneath Waterloo bridge.

The deck was crowded, and additional passengers embarked at every stop. In the circumstances conversation, save on the most impersonal topics, was impossible.

As the boat snorted beneath London bridge Calendar's impatience drove him from his seat back to the gangway. "Next stop," he told Kirkwood curtly and rested his heavy bulk against the paddle box, brooding morosely, until, after an uninterrupted run of more than a mile, the steamer swept in, side wheels backing water furiously against the ebbing tide, to Cherry Gardens landing.

Sweet name for a locality unsavory beyond credence!

Kirkwood shuddered, sticking close to Calendar's side as they landed. Life's naked brutalities had theretofore been largely out of his ken. He had heard of slums, had even ventured to mouth politely moral platitudes on the subject of overcrowding in great centers of population, but in the darkest flights of imagination had never pictured to himself anything so unspeakably foul and hopeless as this. And they were come hither seeking Dorothy Calendar!

After some ten minutes' steady walking Calendar turned aside with a muttered word and dived down a covered dark and evil smelling passageway that seemed to lead toward the river.

Mastering his involuntary qualms, Kirkwood followed.

Some ten or twelve paces from its entrance the passageway swerved at a right angle, continuing three yards or so to end in a blank wall, wherefrom a flickering, inadequate gas lamp jutted. At this point a stone platform perhaps four feet square was discovered, from the edge of which a flight of worn and slimy stone steps led down to a permanent boat landing, where another gaslight flared gustily despite the protection of its frame of begrimed glass.

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the young man. "What in heaven's name, Calendar"—

"Bermondsey Old Stairs. Come on."

They descended to the landing stage. Beneath them the pool slept, a sheet of polished ebony, whispering to itself, lapping with small, stealthy gurgles angles of masonry and ancient piles. On the farther bank tall warehouses reared square old time heads, their uncompromising, rugged profile relieved here and there by tapering mastheads.

A few scattering, feeble lights were visible. Nothing moved save the river and the wind.

The landing itself they found quite deserted, something which the adventurer comprehended with a nod which, like its accompanying inarticulate ejaculation, might have been taken to indicate either satisfaction or disgust. He ignored Kirkwood altogether for the time being and presently produced a small, bright object which, applied to his lips, proved to be a boatswain's whistle. He sounded two blasts, one long, one brief.

There fell a lull, Kirkwood watching the other and wondering what next would happen. Calendar paced restlessly to and fro upon the narrow landing, now stopping to incline an ear to catch some anticipated sound, now searching with sweeping glances the black reaches of the pool.

Finally, consulting his watch, "Almost 10," he announced.

"We're in time?"

"Can't say. If that infernal boat would only show up"—

He was lifting the whistle to sound a second summons when a rowboat rounded a projecting angle formed by the next warehouse downstream and with clanking oarlocks swung in toward the landing. On her thwarts two figures, dipping and rising, labored with the sweeps. As they drew in the man forward shipped his blades and, rising, scrambled to the bows in order to grasp an iron mooring ring set in the wall.

Calendar waddled to the brink of the stage, grunting with relief.

"The other man," he asked brusquely—"has he gone aboard, or is this the first trip tonight?"

One of the watermen nodded assent to the latter question, adding gruffly, "Seen nawthin' of 'im, sir."

"Very good," said Calendar, as if he doubted whether it were very good or bad. "We'll wait a bit."

"Right-o!" agreed the waterman civilly.

Calendar turned back, his small eyes glimmering with satisfaction. "I suppose," he said to Kirkwood abruptly, "you haven't changed your mind?"

"Changed my mind?"

"About coming in with me."

"My dear sir, I can have no mind to change until a plain proposition is laid before me."

"H-m!" Calendar puffed vigorously until it occurred to him to change the subject. "You won't mind telling me what happened to you and Dorothy?"

"Certainly not."

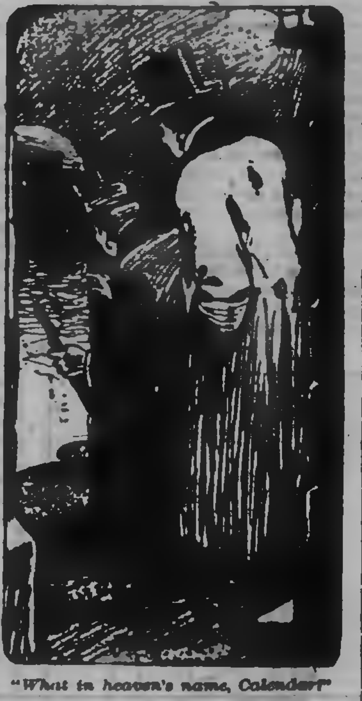
Calendar drew nearer, and Kirkwood, lowering his voice, narrated briefly the events since he had left the Pless in Dorothy's company.

Her father followed him intently, interrupting now and again with an exclamation or pertinent question—as, had Kirkwood been able to see the face of the man in No. 9 Frognall street? The negative answer seemed to disconcert him.

"Youngster, you say? Blam' if I can lay my mind to him! Now, if that Mulready"—

"It would have been impossible for Mulready—whoever he is—to recover and get to Craven street before we did," Kirkwood pointed out.

"Well, go on." But when the tale was told "It's that scoundrel Mulready!" the man affirmed with heat. "It's his hand. I know him. I might have had sense enough to see he'd take the first chance to hand me the double cross. Well, this does for him, all right!" Calendar lowered viciously at the river. "You've been blamed useful," he told Kirkwood assertively. "If it hadn't been for you I don't know where I'd be now—nor Dorothy, either"—an obvious afterthought. "There's no particular way I can show my appreciation, I suppose? Money"—



"What in heaven's name, Calendar!"

"I've got enough to last me till I reach New York, thank you."

"Well, if the time ever comes just about for George B. I won't be wanting. I only wish you were with us, but that's out of the question."

"Doubtless."

"No two ways about it. I bet anything you've got a conscience concealed about your person. What! You're an honest man, eh?"

"I don't want to sound immodest," returned Kirkwood, amused.

"You don't need to worry about that. But an honest man's got no business in my line." He glanced again at his watch. "D— that Mulready! I wonder if he was cute enough to take another way? Or did he think—the fool!"

He cut off abruptly, seeming depressed by the thought that he might have been outwitted, and, clasping hands behind his back, chewed savagely on his cigar, watching the river. Kirkwood found himself somewhat wearied. The uselessness of his presence there struck him with added force. He bethought him of his midnight boat train, scheduled to leave a station miles distant in an hour and a half. If he missed it he would be stranded in a foreign land, penniless and practically without friends, Brentwick being away and all the rest of his circle of acquaintances on the other side of the channel. Yet he lingered in poor company, daring fate that he might see the end of the affair. Why?

There was only one honest answer to that question. He stayed on because of his interest in a girl whom he had known for a matter of three hours at most. It was insensate folly on his part, ridiculous from any point of view, but he made no move to go.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE slow minutes lengthened monotonously.

There came a sound from the street level. Calendar held up a hand of warning. "Here they come! Steady!" he said tensely.

Calendar turned to the boat.

"Sheer off," he ordered. "Drop out of sight. I'll whistle when I want you."

"Aye, aye, sir."

The boat slipped noiselessly away with the current and in an instant was lost to sight. Calendar plucked at Kirkwood's sleeve, drawing him into the shadow of the steps. "E-easy," he whispered. "And, I say, lend me a hand, will you, if Mulready turns ugly?"

"Oh, yes," assented Kirkwood, with a nonchalance not entirely unassumed.

The racket drew nearer and ceased. The hush that fell thereafter seemed only accentuated by the purling of the river. It was ended by footsteps echoing in the covered passageway. Calendar craned his thick neck round the shoulder of stone, reconnoitering the landing and stairway.

"Thank God!" he said under his breath. "I was right, after all!"

A man's deep tones broke out above. "This way. Mind the steps. They're a bit slippery, Miss Dorothy."

"But my father?" came the girl's voice, attuned to doubt.

"Oh, he'll be along—if he isn't waiting now in the boat."

They descended, the man leading. At the foot, without a glance to right or left, he advanced to the edge of the stage, leaning out over the rail as if endeavoring to locate the rowboat.

"But, Mr. Mulready"—

The girl's words were drowned by a prolonged blast on the boatswain's whistle at her companion's lips. The shorter one followed in due course.

"But what shall we do if my father isn't here—wait?"

"No; best not to—best to get on the Alethea as soon as possible, Miss Calendar. We can send the boat back."

"'Once aboard the lugger the girl is mine,' eh, Mulready, to say nothing of the loot!"

If Calendar's words were jocular his tone conveyed a different impression entirely. Both man and girl wheeled right about to face him, the one with a strangled oath, the other with a low cry.

"The devil!" exclaimed this Mr. Mulready.

"Oh, my father!" the girl voiced her recognition of him.

"Not precisely one and the same person," commented Calendar suavely, "but—er—thanks, just as much. You see, Mulready, when I make an appointment I keep it."

"We'd begun to get a bit anxious about you"— Mulready began defensively.

"So I surmised from what Mrs. Hallam and Mr. Kirkwood told me. Well?"

The man found no ready answer. He fell back a pace to the railing, his features working with his deep chagrin. The murky flare of the gas lamp overhead fell across a face handsome beyond the ordinary, but marred by a sullen humor and seamed with indulgence—a face that seemed hauntingly familiar until Kirkwood in a flash of visual memory reconstructed the portrait of a man who lingered over a dining table with two empty chairs for company. This, then, was he whom Mrs. Hallam had left at the Pless—a tall, strong man, very heavy about the chest and shoulders.

"Why, my dear friend," Calendar was taunting him, "you don't seem overjoyed to see me for all your wild anxiety! 'Pon my word, you act as if you hadn't expected me—and our engagement so clearly understood at that. Why, you fool"—here the mask of irony was cast—"did you think for a moment I'd let myself be nabbed by that yap from Scotland Yard? Were you banking on that? I give you my faith I ambled out under his very nose! Dorothy, my dear," turning impatiently from Mulready, "where's that bag?"

A GOOD SUGGESTION

ake a Friend's Advice

And do not neglect your Fire Insurance at any period of the year. It is the best friend you have got in case of accidental fire—which the utmost caution will not not always prevent. It is far better to take out a policy in a good Company and be on the safe side. Remember you cannot insure AFTER the fire, only before.

We issue policies in the most reliable Companies and the annual cost is but a trifle for Fire, Life, Accident & Sickness, Tourist, Automobile Motor Boat, Burglary Insurance and Surety Bonds.

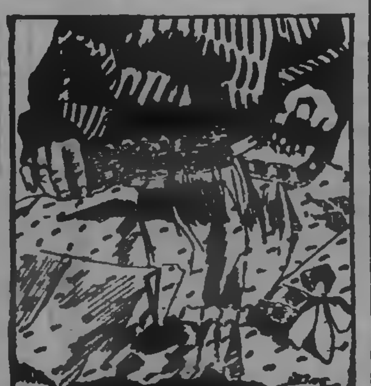
NORTH POLE DINNER.

Not a Frozen Feast, but Startlingly Original and Realistic.

NO KNIVES, SPOONS OR FORKS

A Menu That at First Glance Seemed Unsuitable to This Zone—An Intellectual Course Redeems Guest's Lack of Table Manners.

My Dear Elsa—Dick says he doesn't see why there's such a row being made over the discovery of the north pole, for the only use that can be made of it is for the government to go into the ice business. Now that I see this statement in print, as it were, it dawns on me that it was Vice President Sherman who suggested the paternal business venture and not Dick, but what difference does it make which one is responsible for the suggestion? And, as for the no-accountness of the discovery itself, I have no patience whatever with the people who think that it is of no practical value. I, at least, know that they are mighty much mistaken in their views, for I've found a beautiful use for the arctic block of contention. It gave me the best idea I ever had for a dinner party, and I feel particularly grateful to Dr. Cook and Commander Peary for supplying data to carry out the suggestion.



FOR RUNNING RIBBON IN LINGERIE.

Even here in little old blase New York, where novelty has a discouraging fashion of often palling, my north pole dinner made the guests sit up and take a lot of notice. My dear, it was a decided hit, and I'm as proud as that proverbial person Punch over the discovery. I was so afraid the idea might fall flat that I invited only a small company to dine with us, but I worked for success as untiringly as if a state dinner was "on." And you may have a polar function like mine if you want to, for I am going to tell you my ideas. Here goes.

To begin with the table decorations, right in the middle of a snowy damask cloth I erected a north pole made of a large white blotter with a base of sufficient circumference to enable it to stand securely. Bits of cotton were pasted on the blotter, or pole, and all around the base were fluffy bunches of cotton, giving quite realistic effects of snow. On the cotton I sprinkled silver tinsel—the kind you use on the children's Christmas tree—to give a pretty glistening effect in the candlelight. From the top of the pole fluttered an American flag cut from stiff muslin so that it would have more body than a silk flag and not disgrace itself on this glorious occasion by hanging at half mast.

At the foot of the pole were small dolls dressed in fur. I sacrificed an old squirrel muff for the victory. It is not necessary to remind you that these fur clad figures represented the rival finders of the pole. Tiny footsteps coming from each corner of the table toward the pole were made of black paper fastened to the cloth by photographer's paste. One line of the footsteps led to the figure of Dr. Cook, and opposite ones approached Commander Peary.

The other two lines ended a foot or more from the debatable spot. At each of these points was another fur dressed doll to recall other arctic explorers whose journeys in northern waters were not successful. These two disappointed explorers were in a sitting position to represent failure of purpose. Apropos of failures, it is hardly fair to smile at Wellman's frequent dash for the pole. It may be all he claims for it. A dash is an abrupt stop, isn't it? But, to stop trying to be smart and to come back to the dinner decorations, the only light used were four candles, one at each end of the table, stuck by means of melted wax to china saucers. They were short, thick candles two inches or more in diameter.

The table service was primitive, sure enough, and consisted of new and shining tin pie plates, dippers and cups. There was a lack of knives, forks and spoons. The menu was made up of courses that could be eaten without the aid of forks and spoons. We had lots of fun from this part of the program, ridiculous attempts at disposing gracefully of oysters directly from the shells, etc. The napkins were strapped up in tourist style with red, white and blue ribbon and placed at the corners of the table, so each guest had to scramble for a "wipe."

Favors at each place were figures of dogs harnessed up to sleds filled with three tiny finger rolls, which were strapped on with red ribbon. The menu cards were in the shape of tents and made of plain white paper. A glance at the card doubtless gave the guests mental indigestion, for the dishes to be served were hardly conducive to health in this zone. Fortunately for them, the things actually eaten did not exactly bear out the announcements on the printed cards.

The faked up north pole menu was as follows:

Ninety Degree Oysters.
Musk Ox Tail Soup.
Fried Walrus With Blubber.
Roast Bear.	Tallow.
Seaweed Salad.
Iceland Moss Pudding.
Gumdrops.	Whale Oil.

Translation of menu: Oysters, ox tail soup served in tin cups, deliciously fried fish on toast, potato chips, a crown of roast lamb, buttered corn, lettuce salad, ice cream in cone shape, candies and coffee. You see how all of these courses could be eaten without the usual implements of the dinner. The roast lamb was a crown piece, so each chop was "Frenched" and decorated with a little paper holder on the bone end, which made the act of consumption quite civilized. My own maid and an "extra" pressed into service for the dinner were dressed like pictures one sees of Commander Peary's daughter when she was the "snow baby." The costume was easy to make, being merely a long loose coat, with a pointed cap attached, the entire affair cut from a particularly furry looking piece of white canton flannel.

After dinner I gave my guests a chance to redeem their bad table manners by showing their intellectual superiority. On the back of each place card was written a question, and the guests were asked to write a poem of four lines answering the query. These questions referred to the discovery of the north pole, and some of the verses were extraordinarily clever and added not a little to the merriment of the dinner.

Of course you want to know what these questions were. The ones I recall were: Do you really believe that Dr. Cook and Commander Peary reached the pole? Would you like to be an Eskimo? Do you like arctic food? What will you say to Dr. Cook and Commander Peary now that they are home? The answers I have forgotten, but they were most amusing.

I am right up in the line of discoveries nowadays and have unearthed in the shops a most practical and time saving little device in the shape of an invention for running ribbon in lingerie. It costs only 15 cents and is a flat little contrivance, one end of which is finished with a flat tape, or twine. When run through once the process never has to be repeated, as the string is drawn through the beading to stay. When a fresh ribbon is needed in a clean garment it is attached to the clamped end and pulled through by the string or twine.

If you dislike putting ribbon in lingerie as much as I do you will hail with delight this simple but time and money saving device. Try it and thank yours devotedly, MABEL.

Historic Acapulco.

Acapulco, now ruined by earthquake and tidal wave, is classic ground to all good sailors, for it was from this Mexican port that the Spanish galleons used to sail laden with ill gotten treasure to enrich hidalgos at home. It is associated with the very earliest and most alluring of the stories of the buccaneers. Captain Hall describes the harbor as beau ideal. "It is easy of access," he writes, "very capacious, the water not too deep, the holding ground good, quite free from hidden dangers and as secure as the basin in Portsmouth dockyard. From the interior of the harbor the sea cannot be discovered, and a stranger coming to the spot by land would imagine he was looking over a sequestered mountain lake." But Acapulco has always been an unhealthy town, and the destruction of its buildings may not be an unmixed evil.—London Chronicle.

Paris Student Restaurants.

Student restaurants in Paris are an institution that Americans may well envy. They are run solely for the benefit of the students, although strangers are welcome. There are certain little formalities that must be observed. For instance, it is the duty of every one entering to bow to the madame and say, "Bonjour, madame," or "Bonsoir, madame," according to the time of day. After one has finished his meal he asks for the "additione," as the bill is called. When it is presented by the trim little waitress it is considered only proper to say, "Merci, mademoiselle." He then leaves a tip of 10 centimes, or 2 cents, and, again bowing to the madame and saying "Bonjour" or "Bonsoir," he is at liberty to leave. The highest priced article on the bill of fare is 75 centimes, or 15 cents, and this in all students' restaurants is a chateaubriand, a tender piece of beefsteak surrounded with potatoes souffle. Never drink French coffee. It is execrable. The French do not consider coffee good unless the bean is burned to a black crisp.—Lyceumite.

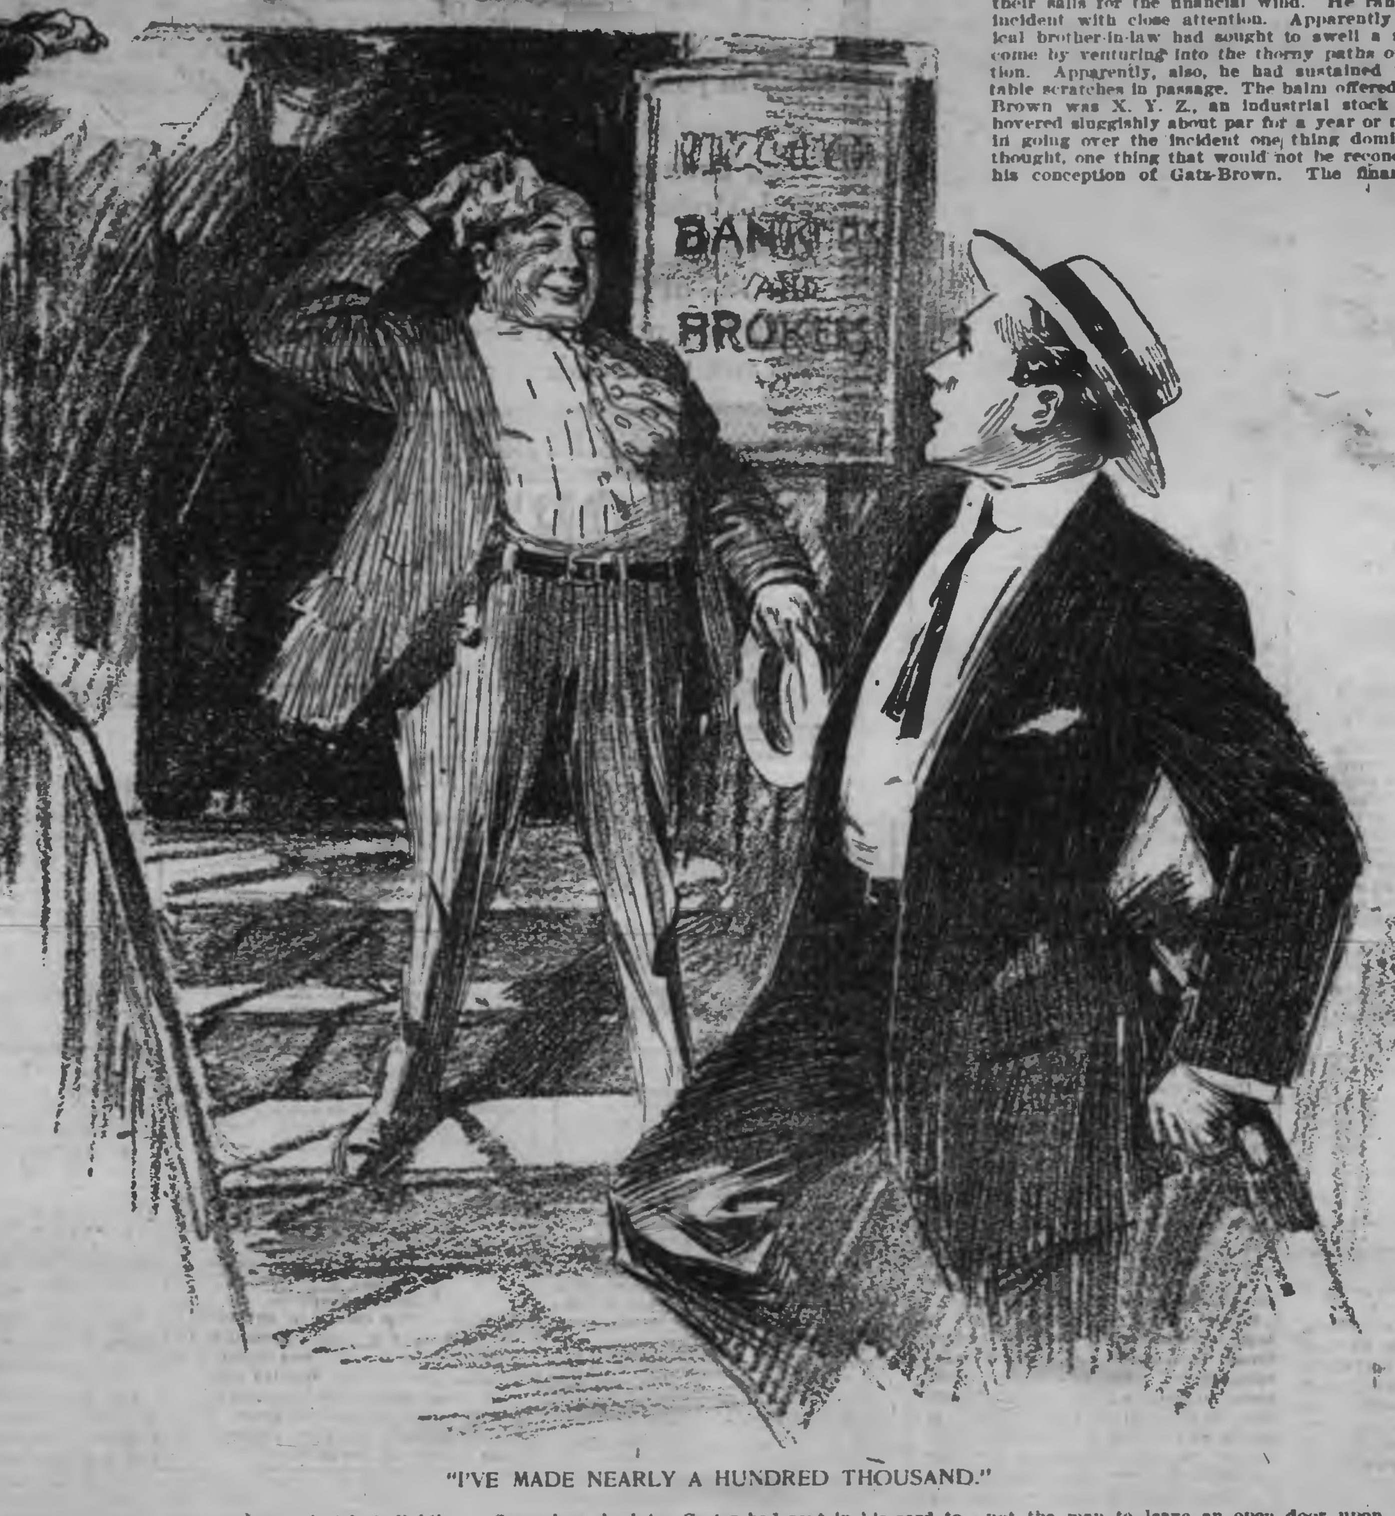
THE SOCIETY WOLF

A REVERSE ON THE MARKET



"I'VE MADE NEARLY A HUNDRED THOUSAND."

BY LUKE THRICE.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

THE bald man with the fussy tie and the diamond ring on his little finger came up to Carter in Lesser's brokerage office. His thin voice sounded across the rattling of the tickers, the hum of conversation and the monotonous calls of the blackboard clerk.

"Mr. Carter? Pardon me, Mr. Carter. A word with you, sir—just a word."

The Virginian, secure in the superior armor of flawless clothes and perfection of manner, looked askance at his questioner and made as if to pass.

"You have the advantage of me, sir," he murmured coldly.

But the bald man, smiling and mopping his brow, held his ground easily.

"Very likely. Still, I will make so bold as to presume upon it. I have a proposition that might interest you, I think."

Robert Carter was the last man in the world to play the victim in a bucket shop game or to waste his time with the petty rogues and swindles of the street, but it so happened that he was idle, that there was no one about that he knew and that he was just curious enough to wish to discover how this bald man meant to use him. It was sufficiently remarkable that his name was known. He seated himself in a vacant corner and prepared to listen.

"You're not to be blamed if you shy off at this for a while," began the bald man, fumbling with his erratic tie. "I'm willing to believe that it is—well, unusual, Mr. Carter."

The Virginian showed no surprise.

"I've taken considerable interest in watching you for some time," continued the bald man. Carter eyed him.

"You flatter me," he returned.

"I'll forgive you the dig," laughed the other, settling back genially into the leather cushions. "But the point is this—Without any desire to convey offense, I have made myself fairly familiar with your way of life and general habits."

Carter began to stiffen. Decidedly, this was uncomfortable. He thought first of St. Geoffry, then of his unknown antagonist in the affair of the rosewood cabinet. But the bald man hurried on, noting the suspicion in the Virginian's face.

"If I took the trouble you would see that I must have had a motive. So I had. I am the representative of a group of operators having very wide interests and engaging in a great variety of activities. Recently they assigned me to pick out a young man familiar with the district, smart enough to execute commissions and with such connections that he could appear to invest on his own account. Do you get me?"

"Well?" said Carter.

"Well, it's a plain business offer. I noticed you and followed you up. You are the one we want. You are on speaking terms with some big men. You are straight. To be frank, you look and act the part of the wealthy young loiterer. And unless I have slipped up the inducement we can offer you will prove acceptable."

"I don't think I understand the nature of the service you are seeking," said the Virginian, still on his guard.

Baiting the Trap.

"Why, nothing more or less than to follow the instructions you will receive from day to day, placing orders as you are told to. You must be able to see the reason. There are others in the same business, fellows of good family but no funds, who are useful to manipulators in concealing big market moves. I make no gaudy promises. I am offering you employment that will give you personal prestige without risk and without fear of discovery."

"I shall have to consider it."

"Be so," returned the other. "My name is Weldstone. You can find me at my office in William street. So long, Mr. Carter." The bald man waved his diamond and was gone.

The Virginian found some difficulty in adjusting himself toward the proposed position. It was alluring and there was no denying the fact that it might supply very welcome assistance. But he scanned it closely. His social advance had been too hardly won to permit the slightest indiscretion. In his policy it was better to refuse a million than to lose standing with any of the friends he had so laboriously cultivated. He had heard of such arrangements, however, and could see that they offered desirable advantages. To be able to show money, to handle large stakes, to pose as he had never been able to for a man of wealth—there were possibilities for him here. The mere tickling of his vanity meant nothing. What drew him was the apparent chance to buttress his importance. It meant that he could approach a class of men whom he never could have impressed on the recommendation of perfect clothes and polished manner.

He saw Weldstone in Lesser's the next day and had another interview with him. He put his questions with the utmost caution and watchfulness. Within half an hour he was satisfied. According to the agreements he was to call upon Weldstone each morning for orders. He was to have the power to command sums of money in several banks, placed temporarily at his disposal.

This was the road by which Robert Carter entered the field of finance. He was well chosen for his rôle. Within a month he had handled $50,000, placing them in the dark and simply as the pawn of the powers employing him. Had his cynicism stood in need of fresh lessons he could have drawn them from his experiences during that month. As a well dressed idler who lounged at the blackboards and exchanged an occasional greeting he had been remarked but slightly. As a young man with money to play he was one to be recognized. With an eye characteristically set upon taking all the lead he well might, he skilfully built up the impression that he commanded large private resources and that so far he had only felt his way.

Among the intimacies which his new occupation enabled him to foster was that with Gatz-Brown, the wily Talleyrand of the 'Change, whom he already knew more than slightly. Figures loomed and figures faded in the kaleidoscope of Wall street, but the ruddy little man, with curly, white galways always formed a part of the design. From the height of fuller knowledge Carter saw in Gatz-Brown one of the shrewdest, most farsighted and successful stock manipulators in the country. He always knew how far to swim with the dominant wave, drawing out before disaster and chuckling serenely to the surface when reaction set in.

It was impossible not to like Gatz-Brown, and aside from the social obligations under which he had placed Carter the Virginian found him a valuable study. He made it a practice to drop into the operator's office at least once during the week and chat about thoroughbreds, the passion of the millionaire's life. Gatz-Brown put a few casual questions to him one day concerning his presence in the district. Carter answered offhandedly, but he was quite aware that he could not deceive the financier in such a matter. If Gatz-Brown really cared to find out the source of any one's activity the information could not be hidden from him.

The Group of Five.

In due course Carter met the four other men who, with Weldstone, composed the group of his employers. They were built of and for money—hard, sharp, unsympathetic. They formed interesting subjects before the clinic of his observation. Among them Weldstone alone seemed most human. He rather liked Weldstone.

He had been invited to luncheon with all five. There was that in the air by which he was conscious of a definite purpose in the event. It cropped to view presently.

"You must know Gatz-Brown fairly well, don't you?" asked White, a grizzled broker with a shifty eye.

The Virginian admitted that he did.

"Notice you look in on him pretty regularly."

Again Carter assented. There was a moment of silence.

"Ever [illegible]r the old man drop anything about the market? [illegible]ou ought to pick up something good that way."

Carter eyed the speaker distantly.

"Do you mean to ask whether Mr. Gatz-Brown may not at times make some inadvertent remark that would have a bearing on values?"

"Something of that kind," was the answer, and there was a short laugh about the table. Carter noticed that Weldstone did not laugh.

"Mr. Gatz-Brown may have said such things," said Carter slowly, "but I have never tried to remember them."

White stared.

"Never tried to, eh? Better make a note of them next time. We might have use for them."

"I will bear your instructions in mind," returned Carter precisely.

Several weeks later Carter had sent in his card to Gatz-Brown and was seated in the little anteroom to the private office. The clerk, preceding him from the outer rooms, had walked across the apartment, directing him naturally to the chair nearest the partition. From beyond came the indistinct grumble of voices, scarcely audible, for the dividing wall was firmly made. Carter was not interested. He yawned and disposed himself comfortably in the chair.

Suddenly the knob on the frosted glass door leading into the financier's sanctum clicked and the voices became distinguishable, as the door itself was held ajar the fraction of an inch.

——"and, as I say, you are placing me under a debt which I can never hope to repay."

The voice of the speaker was almost tearful. It was that of a man, but soft and pitched rather high. Carter did not recognize it.

"Tut, tut," came the amiable tones of Gatz-Brown. "You have been unfortunate—acted on poor advice. After this keep out of the street. It's no place for one of your calling. And remember what I said about keeping it to yourself."

"You are most kind, Arthur. I shall not forget this. X. Y. Z., you said?"

"Yes. And buy—not sell. See if you can get that right," said the manipulator, dropping his voice.

"Buy for a twenty point rise and keep mum. It's all over if the thing gets out."

Then, with a burst of cheery goodbys, echoed more faintly by the other, he apparently shook hands with his visitor. A second later the door swung open and the stranger crossed the anteroom. He was thin, slight and dressed in clerical garb. He hurried by with short steps without noticing Carter.

Several minutes passed before a clerk from the inner room came in to inform the Virginian that Gatz-Brown would see him. He found the financier seated at his desk, busily engaged with a mass of papers.

The Clerical Relation.

"Hello, Carter," was the jovial greeting; "sit down, my boy, sit down. How's the tape running for you the day? Did you get a bit of that Yellow Rose Copper trimming? No? Now, that's unfortunate. By the way, I bought a new roadster yesterday, a dream. You must come out and see her."

So ran the rapid fire of his conversation, popping trivialities and street gossip like a gatling gun, and all with a bland, almost fatuous, smile. It was hard to reconcile this chubby little individual with his cheerful, inconsequential comments and the fearsome dictator who juggled fortunes every hour. Carter met him on his own ground, the only possible way with Gatz-Brown, and stayed his usual time. As he started to rise the manipulator stayed him with:

"Don't forget your umbrella."

He pointed to one standing against a chair. The Virginian disclaimed it.

"It's not mine."

"Oh," exclaimed Gatz Brown, "then it must be my brother-in-law's. He was here just before you came. Wouldn't have made the mistake," he continued with a grin, "if I'd looked at it closer. Isn't it eloquent of rustic virtues and the cloth? You'd swear, now, that no one but a country clergyman could own it. One of my sisters married a small, struggling minister years ago. He's done nothing but struggle ever since. He drops in on me now and then. A decent enough chap, but simple, quite simple. Goodby."

The Virginian went away in thoughtful mood. Here was one of those elusive tips that formed the basis of so many wondrous tales afloat among the gilded canyons, one of the chance straws to which hardened and sophisticated veterans of the street were apt to attach great importance in trimming their sails for the financial wind. He ran over the incident with close attention. Apparently the clerical brother-in-law had sought to swell a scanty income by venturing into the thorny paths of speculation. Apparently, also, he had sustained the inevitable scratches in passage. The balm offered by Gatz-Brown was X. Y. Z., an industrial stock that had hovered sluggishly about par for a year or more. But in going over the incident one thing dominated his thought, one thing that would not be reconciled with his conception of Gatz-Brown. The financier was not the man to leave an open door upon his confidences, even by accident.

Carter slept little that night. He passed the hours in going over the situation, bringing to bear all his power of keen analysis and all his native intuition, the two qualities which gave him his great aptitude for the peculiar task he had set himself. At the end he came to the conclusion that here was the best opportunity he had had to place himself beyond the pinch of necessity. Recently he had improved the little sum he possessed and had cleared himself of debt by successful eighth chasing. But his total capital was inadequate for the affair into which he had stumbled. He needed a stake—needed it badly.

His early visit to Weldstone next morning was accompanied by a request that his five employers be gathered together for a conference. Weldstone good naturedly translated the occasion into a luncheon at which he would be host, and for the second time the Virginian was one in the circle of money hunters that had engaged his services. When cigars had been reached Carter related, without addition or variation, the incident of the previous day at Gatz-Brown's.

"I felt at liberty to reveal this, gentlemen," said the Virginian, with a sidelong glance at Weldstone, "because it was picked up in the legitimate round of my duties. Any one might have been in the office at that time and might have heard what I did. I leave you to draw your own conclusions and to act accordingly. I have told you nothing but what happened."

The group broke up without comment, and Carter accompanied Weldstone to his office. He knew well enough that there would be a later meeting of the brokers to consider action on his information. In the meantime he desired some private conversation with the man in whom he had the greatest hope of friendliness.

$10,000 Call.

"Weldstone," began the Virginian, when they were together in privacy, "I come to you because you are the one who knows me best. You told me once that you had looked into my personal history. In that case you know that my record is straight, that I have made a fair start, that I have some powerful friends. You should know, moreover, that some day—some day, I said—I shall arrive."

He threw into his speech the sincere decision and force that were the outgrowth of his complete, unwavering faith in himself. Weldstone's beady eyes twinkled at him.

"What then?" he asked cautiously.

"Just this—I want a loan of ten thousand from you or credit for ten thousand at your office. It is extraordinary, I know, to ask such a thing of a man in your position and business. But it is a fair gamble as I look at it. Even should I lose I am sure to be able to repay you some time. In the meantime this is my one opportunity. I have no money."

Weldstone had recourse to his necktie, which he adjusted nervously.

"I will go so far as to consider it, Carter," he answered. "Certainly, as you say, this is not in the line of regular business. How long is this tip good for?"

"I should say for three days," returned Carter at haphazard. "Say until Friday."

The other nodded.

"And kindly say nothing of this to your associates," said Carter as he took his leave.

On Wednesday and again on Thursday Weldstone failed to mention their little affair when Carter called for instructions for his usual work. The Virginian did not remind him. On Friday morning the broker gave his answer.

"I can't see your proposition, Carter," he said with watchful eyes. "I can't afford it. Sorry, but the thing is impossible."

Carter bowed gravely and made no comment.

"Oh, by the way," called Weldstone as the Virginian was about to close the door. "I am about to leave town until next Tuesday. You can fill in your time as you like until then. The market is rather dull."

Any one conversant with his disappointment would have looked to see the young man in gray humor as he walked away from the broker's office. That same any one would have been surprised to see the smile that kindled the handsome face.

Promptly at two o'clock, the hour when Carter was always to be found at Lesser's, Weldstone bustled in and plumped into a chair beside the Virginian, who was calmly going over his note book.

"I climb down, Carter," the broker exploded, mopping his bald head vigorously. His necktie had flown beyond all bounds. The other looked at him in surprise.

"Here, take my pocketbook, my ring and my shoes," continued Weldstone, with a grin. "You can have your ten thousand." He sank limply against the leather cushion with a sigh.

"I thought you were going away," said Carter mischievously. Weldstone passed it off with a wave of his diamond.

"You fetched me," he said. "It was well done. There was something like fifty thousand subject to your orders in one bank alone. I almost broke my neck stopping it after you sprang your request. I may as well tell you now. I removed the stop, but I watched every bank and you as well—and you never reached out a hand. Come. I owe you the best drink money can buy."

Passing the Test.

Carter indulged in a little pardonable self-congratulation as they walked toward a place of refreshment. Throughout his campaign toward the citadel of the socially elect he had been meticulously careful in money matters. He knew instinctively that here was the shoal upon which many a hope as ambitious and as well founded as his own had gone to wreck. It was the truest indication of his sagacity that he had avoided the acquisition of the smallest sum in a manner open to suspicion. He had few scruples. He was simply wise enough to be honest. And, furthermore, in this particular case he had foreseen the exact test to which Weldstone would submit him. And now to cancel part of his debt to the broker.

The paper was signed and Carter received the slip showing the amount to which he could claim credit in Weldstone's office.

"How high do you think it will go?" asked Weldstone when the transaction was closed.

"How high will what go?" returned Carter.

"Why, X. Y. Z., of course." There was an interval, during which the broker showed some astonishment and the Virginian looked at him steadily.

"Do you purpose buying X. Y. Z.?" asked Carter finally.

"Do I purpose? Why, of course. What else? I have bought already. Isn't that what you wanted the credit for?"

"Not exactly," returned the Virginian slowly. "I am going to sell."

It was a long interval this time. The necktie demanded much attention. But the broker's gaze was never removed from Carter's face. His own was blank for some minutes. Then a grin broke across it. He extended his hand across the table. Carter returned the grip in silence.

"I shouldn't care to confide my intentions to too many persons, Weldstone," said Carter at parting, and the other nodded his understanding.

Carter began his coup on Saturday. There was still no sign of life in X. Y. Z. Inert and safe, it hung suddenly at 98. The Virginian went about the brokerage offices as usual and placed some buying orders on the stock, distributing them judiciously. During the morning hours he ran into Gatz-Brown.

"There you are, Carter, my boy," hailed the manipulator. "Ever on the wing, I see. You must quit this and come out for an afternoon behind Tinkling Chimes, my new pacer. Ah, you youngsters! You will learn the value of conservation some day."

"I'd like to go," said Carter abstractedly, "but I've a big undertaking on at present."

"Well, well," returned Gatz-Brown, chuckling cheerfully. "I suppose you must have your fling. Good luck to you, my boy."

Closing quotations on Saturday showed X. Y. Z. up to par, and the unwonted move attracted some interest. Carter, who knew what to expect, had observed indications of considerable secret buying of the stock. He was not the only one to whom the tip had been passed.

Early on Monday X. Y. Z. moved to 102. Carter was watching the board at Lesser's when the figures ran from beneath the chalk. He dashed out into the maelstrom of Wall street. Dodging and squirming, he reached Weldstone's. There he negotiated with his credit slip and turned anxiously to the ticker in the inner office. Weldstone was absent at the Exchange. X. Y. Z. was climbing. Suddenly it jumped to 107. Carter sought the clerk and signed away the last thousand dollars which he had kept in reserve as margin. Then he hurried into the street without another glance at the ticker.

He lacked the courage to stay or to return to Lesser's. He let the crowd whirl him this way and that, retaining his cool, self-possessed pose through force of habit, but inwardly helpless in a gyrating confusion of brain. Had he missed? Had he read Gatz-Brown aright? Or had he merely bungled his own play by haste? He found himself outside the Exchange and stood staring at it. For nearly an hour he remained there with vacant, unseeing eyes.

When he finally pulled himself together a sense of the situation swept over him and he was seized with a pressing instant need to know, to end the uncertainty. In his agitation he passed a dozen offices where he might have found what he wanted and headed for Weldstone's. He had his foot on the lower step when an orotund thunderbolt crashed into him and he held to a fat arm to avoid being hurled to the gutter. He was about to dodge away with an exclamation when he caught a glimpse of a flaring tie.

"Great fish hooks, man!" a thin voice was wheezing at him. "What's the hurry? It's all over."

"What's happened, Weldstone?" cried Carter. "I've been out of it." The broker gurgled and mopped his shiny head.

"Not much," he answered, "only the bottom's dropped out of X. Y. Z. I went from 107 to [illegible]. I've made nearly a hundred thousand."

Carter presented himself at the office of Gatz-Brown after the market closed with X. Y. Z. at 84. The Virginian had covered himself at 85, well content. The financier looked up at him with an expectant smile.

"Well, my boy," he said cheerfully, "such are the chances of the game."

"Quite so," assented Carter gravely.

"I understand you were in pretty heavily."

"Not so heavily as I could have wished."

"Eh?"

"I was selling," said Carter casually. He waited a moment, then, bending closer, he added:—"By the way, how is that brother-in-law of yours you were telling me about the other day?"

Gatz-Brown looked thoughtful for the space of some three seconds, a fact afterward treasured by the Virginian. It was the only known occasion upon which the financier allowed himself to be seen stripped of his smile. There was a new expression in the eye he turned toward Carter with a redeeming chuckle.

"Well," he said, accepting the situation with full comprehension, "I can only repeat that invitation as to 'Tinkling Chimes.'"

Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

BURGLARS' TOOLS.

Most of Them Made by Supposedly Respectable Mechanics.

Every little while, said a detective recently, the police arrest a man with a set of burglar's tools in his possession, and one naturally wonders where they all come from.

It is easy to buy a gun of any description, and the most reputable person would not be ashamed to be seen purchasing the most wicked looking knife ever made. But who would know where to get a "jimmy" or a device for drilling into a safe or any of the many tools used by the professional burglar in the pursuit of his calling?

There are places in the large cities where these things are made and sold to the users, but such places are exceedingly scarce. It may seem a little strange to learn that most of the tools used in burglaries are made by mechanics who are looked upon as respectable men in the community.

When a burglar wants any particular tool made he goes to a mechanic who can do the job and pays him perhaps five times what it is actually worth for making the tool and keeping quiet about it. Many detectives can recall cases of this kind that have come to light.

One in particular occurred some years ago when an escaped convict named Williams went to a blacksmith and got him to make a lot of drills to be used in safe cracking. He personally superintended the tempering of the steel, but when the job was nearly completed it leaked out, and Williams was arrested. In this instance the blacksmith knew nothing of the use to which the tools were to be put. Most of the tools used by burglars are secured in the same way.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Shoemaker's Candles.

I well remember some seventy years ago seeing flat candles in use. To produce what was known as the flat candle, which was also sometimes called "shoemaker's candle," two newly made "dips" were pressed close to each other while soft and then again lowered into the hot fat, thus holding them together as one candle with two wicks. The size could then be increased if desired. This flat candle was most generally used by shoemakers and tailors, but was made use of in some households whenever an extra bright light for working or reading was required.—Cor. Dickensian.

Too Much Like Work.

"Haven't you a home?" asked the sympathetic citizen.

"Yep," answered Plodding Pete. "I had a nice house, but de first t'ing I knew it had a wood pile and a garden and a pump, and den it got so much like a steady job dat I resigned."—Washington Star.

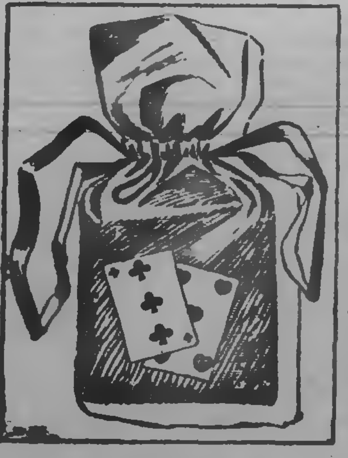
CHRISTMAS WORK.

For the Early Birds Who Begin Work Soon.

DESIGNS SENT FROM PARIS.

Many Varieties In Work Bags and Baskets—Trays and Picture Frames Covered With Decorated Silks and Satins—New Embroidery Case.

It is never too late to mend or too early to begin making Christmas presents. Illustrated you will find a new embroidery silk case that will be appreciated by all needlewomen. The cover of this is composed of a piece of art linen twenty-two and a half inches by thirteen inches, with the hem folded about seven-eighths of an inch wide all round and pressed with a hot iron. The outside and inside are then featherstitched, but the hem is not stitched until the case is put in the cover. The case is made of two pieces of white cotton duck. One is cut seventeen inches long by nine and one-half inches wide and the other is nine and three-fourths inches long by nine and one-half inches wide. Cut ten strips of white cotton tape seven-eighths of an inch wide and seventeen strips one-half inch wide to weave on this piece of duck. Bind the sides with tape. Place on the larger piece, middle to middle, and stitch them together.



CARD HOLDER.

The folding leaves are a part of the larger piece of duck. They are eight and three-fourths inches by three and one-fourth inches. One side has tape interwoven as described, three strips of the wide and fifteen of the narrow. The other side has three leaves of flannel notched for needles. Bind with narrow tape, place in the cover and stitch all round down the middle to the cover. A conventional design is embroidered on the outside of the cover, and the word "Silks" is worked on the outside. In families where card playing is a favorite amusement it often happens that when the game is suggested in the evening a great search has to be made for the pack of cards. The card holder seen in the cut if owned by such a family would obviate the trouble on the principle of a place for everything and everything in its place. It is merely an ordinary bag of silk or art fabric arranged with two pieces of cardboard the depth of the cards tacked back and front, as it were, of the receptacle. This support makes it easier to gather up the cards than when they are tossed in a floppy bag. To designate the holder for its purpose a playing card is embroidered on one or both sides, and the word "Cards" in fancy lettering is conspicuously displayed. The holder is drawn up with gold cord.

A novelty that is distinctly Parisian is the fashioning of all kinds of bags, trays, workbaskets, photograph frames, etc., of silks and handsome fabrics ornamented with sequins and tiny ribbon flowers. Spangled net is often mounted over silk or satin and further decorated with gold or silver lace. Toilet sets are, too, covered with brocade finished with fancy guimpe and are most effective on a dainty dressing table. The fabrics are attached to the pieces by means of a well distributed surface of photographer's paste.

Tasty Luncheon Dish.

Spread thin slices of toast with butter and anchovy paste. Put a poached egg on the top of each slice, turn over the whole a drawn butter sauce flavored with anchovy sauce and serve very hot.

Heat as a Healer.

Heat is one of the most important of stimulants to living cells. The hot bath is the commonest means of applying heat as a therapeutic agent and is useful in a great number of conditions, especially to plethoric individuals and in advanced tuberculosis. The usefulness of local applications of hot water is well known. The general hot douche is a remarkable means to bring blood to the surface of the body, to accelerate the circulation, etc.—Exchange.

TONIC TREATMENT FOR INDIGESTION

Remedies That Digest the Food Will Not Cure the Trouble—The Stomach Must be Fitted to do Nature's Work

The tonic treatment for indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach and gastritis is having remarkable success in curing obstinate cases and deserves attention from every sufferer.

Its principal is that remedies for indigestion that digest the food for the stomach give relief for only a short time. Ultimately they unfit the stomach to do its own proper work, because they make its already weak powers still weaker by disuse, while the remedy that strengthens the stomach makes it capable of digesting the food for itself, and thus benefit is lasting. A remedy that is not only a tonic for the stomach, but for the blood and nerves as well, invigorates the entire system and makes recovery from the painful weakening effects of indigestion rapid and thorough. Every sufferer from indigestion will find in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills just the tonic needed, as they enrich the blood, tone the stomach and thus enable it to do the work nature intended it should do. This has been proved in thousands of cases, and it is worth the while of every sufferer from stomach trouble to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. Mr. Edward Chatterton, Campbelltown, N.B., says;—"I have been a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble, and although I had treatment from several doctors, I did not find a cure until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony, and I seemed to have a a complete distaste for food. I had almost began to think my case incurable when I came across a pamphlet advertising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so, for I had not been taking the Pills long before I found them helping me, and in six weeks every symptom of the trouble had vanished. I can now eat heartily almost any kind of food, and no longer experience pain and discomfort after eating."

It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood that they cure such troubles as indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, headaches and backaches, St. Vitus' dance, and other forms of nerve troubles. They cure the irregularities of girlhood and womanhood, and bring ease, comfort and health to sufferers. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

30 Tons Pressure on a Bar of Soap

¶ Every bar of Taylor's Borax Soap is put under a pressure of thirty tons to drive out the moisture.

¶ When you buy Taylor's you get all soap—not a large percentage of water. It makes a saving of half in your soap expense.

¶ There's a big difference between "just soap" and Taylor's Soap.

¶ We use only the purest cocoanut oil from the Isle of Ceylon. Then we boil it doubly long and mix in the borax. While boiling we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap which carries away all impurities.

¶ Twenty-one days are required to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 people is represented in the cake.

Taylor's Borax Soap

¶ We put every bar through an ageing process equal to six months in your pantry. You don't have to age this soap.

¶ The bar is hard and firm. It wears much longer. The borax softens the water which also reduces the amount of soap by almost half that ordinarily required.

¶ This pure soap is utterly harmless to the skin—it leaves the hands whiter and softer, than ever before.

Making Money On the Farm

XVI.—Orchard Management

By C. V. GREGORY.

Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture"

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

FOR a few years after the young orchard is set out it will do better if it is cultivated. During these first few years, before the trees come into bearing, it is neither necessary nor desirable to let the land lie idle. Some cultivated crop can be grown between the rows of trees, thus utilizing the land and giving the orchard the needed cultivation. Corn is not a very good crop for this purpose, since it grows too rank, shading the young trees and depriving them of their share of the moisture supply. Potatoes are one of the best crops that can be grown in a young orchard. Squashes and cabbages also fit in well. It is often convenient to have the vegetable garden in the orchard during the first few years. Small fruit can also be profitably grown as a filler crop. Where bush fruits are used, however, they must be cut out as soon as the orchard comes into bearing. Whatever crop is grown it should not come within three or four feet of the young trees, as they need plenty of sunlight and moisture.

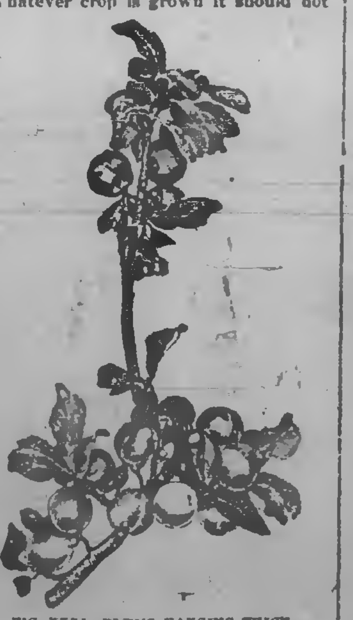

FIG XXXI—PLUMS HANGING THICK.

The filler crop should receive frequent and thorough cultivation. As soon as the land can be worked in the spring it should be plowed, unless this has been done the fall before. After plowing the disk or spring tooth harrow very effectively breaks up the clods and fines the surface. A final harrowing will complete the process of getting the soil in shape.

Cultivation.

There are two principal objects in cultivating the orchard. In the first place, cultivation, as explained in article No. 2, liberates plant food and so enables the plant to make a faster growth. It is a wasteful practice to apply fertilizers to the orchard until you have made the fertility that is already there available by cultivation.

The second reason for tillage is to conserve moisture and promote deep rooting. The upper layer of a cultivated soil is dry, and in consequence the roots will turn downward to seek a layer in which there is more moisture. At the same time the upward rise of water by capillarity is checked just at the dry layer, so that little is lost by evaporation. It is very important to make the soil a vast storehouse of moisture for orchard trees, since they must have large quantities if they are to produce profitably. A full grown apple tree gives off as much as 250 gallons of water a day through its leaves during the summer months.

Cover Crops.

As the trees come into bearing the growth of a cultivated crop between the rows should be discontinued. Some cultivation, however, will still be necessary if the best results are to be secured. One of the best means to give this is by plowing and preparing the soil in the spring and then sowing clover or some legume as a catch crop. This will supply the soil with nitrogen and humus and keep it in good physical condition. Calves, sheep or hogs may be turned into the orchard in the fall to eat the clover, or it may be plowed under the next spring.

The trees will be so large by this time that it will be impossible to cultivate close to them, nor is this necessary, since the feeding roots are farther out in the spaces between the rows. The space close around the trees may be seeded to blue grass or some other perennial.

As the orchard gets older it may be left in clover for two or three years at a time. An occasional plowing and reseeding will be necessary to renew the clover and to prevent the orchard from becoming sod bound. If used as a hog pasture the hogs will keep the soil loosened up sufficiently, at the same time adding considerable fertility. In such a case all the treatment that is necessary is an occasional reseeding. If well fed the hogs will do no damage to the apple trees. On the other hand, they will do a great deal of good by eating wormy fruit and thus destroying the worms.

Where it is not convenient to allow hogs or sheep in the orchard an occasional load of well rotted stable manure will be beneficial. Do not pile this around the trees, but scatter it evenly over the ground. Wood ashes are a good substitute for manure, but can seldom be obtained in sufficient amounts to be used to advantage.

If the orchard is properly attended to from the start little pruning will be necessary. It is much better to pinch off a twig occasionally than to cut off a branch as big as your arm a few years later. It takes but a little time to go over the orchard in the spring and clip off such twigs as do not seem to be needed. The object should be to produce an even, spreading, somewhat open head. If it ever does become necessary to remove large branches they should be cut close to the trunk and the wounds painted with white lead. It is better to do this severe pruning in the winter before the sap begins to run.

Spraying For Insects.

One of the most effective means of securing large crops of fruit is spraying. Fruit trees of all kinds are subject to many injurious insects and diseases, which if left to themselves will materially lessen the yields. There are two kinds of insects—biting and sucking. The former can be combated by means of poisons sprayed upon the leaves. The sucking insects, of which plant lice are the most common examples, cannot be killed in this way, since they drill into the plant and suck the juices. The most effective remedy for them is some insecticide which will kill by contact, like kerosene emulsion. This is made by dissolving half a pound of soap in a gallon of boiling water, adding two gallons of kerosene and churning the mixture violently until the oil is thoroughly mixed with the soapsuds. This is diluted with nine times as much water before using. It may be applied with a spray pump whenever the lice are troublesome and is a very effective remedy.

The biting insects are by far the most troublesome in the orchard. Of these the codling moth probably does the most damage. It is the larvae hatched from the eggs of the codling moth that cause wormy apples. The tent caterpillar and canker worm attack the leaves, sometimes stripping the tree bare. There is no better remedy for these insects than paris green dissolved in water at the rate of one pound to 100 gallons. Three pounds of freshly slaked lime should be added to prevent injury to the foliage. Paris green can also be used for the plum curculio and for the other insects which attack the plum and cherry. The foliage of these trees is more tender than that of the apple, however, and for that reason some less severe insecticide, such as arsenate of lead dissolved at the rate of three pounds to fifty gallons of water, is better.

Spraying For Fungous Diseases.

The most troublesome fungous diseases are apple scab, plum, pear and cherry leaf spot and peach leaf curl. The most efficient fungicide is bordeaux mixture. This is made by dissolving four pounds of copper sulphate and four pounds of lime in fifty gallons of water. The object of a fungicide is not to cure diseases, but to prevent them. These fungous diseases spread by means of spores, which are carried from leaf to leaf by the wind. When they alight on a leaf, especially if the surface is a little moist, they grow and produce another center of disease. If the leaf is covered with a thin coating of the copper sulphate mixture the spores are killed before they start to grow. Since fungicides are preventives rather than cures it is important that they be applied early. In order to save time paris green may be added to the bordeaux mixture at the rate of four ounces to fifty gallons or arsenate of lead at the rate of two pounds to fifty gallons and one spraying made effective for both insects and diseases.

If you have many fruit trees it will pay to send to the experiment station for a spraying calendar, which will give full directions concerning time and manner of spraying. For apples the first spraying should be given about the time the first leaves burst the buds, the second just before the blossoms open and the third just before they fall. If necessary, a fourth spraying may be given from ten to twenty days after the third. In late July or early August another spraying should be given for the second brood of the codling moth. The two most important sprayings are just before the blossoms open and just after they fall.

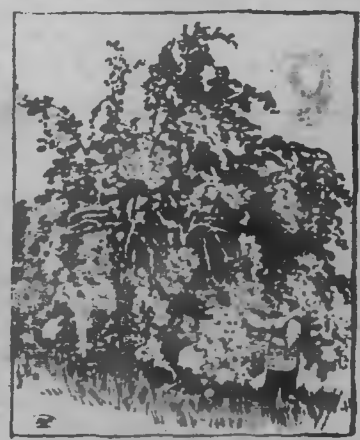

FIG. XXXII—HARVESTING APPLE CROP.

Boxes are better than barrels for marketing high class fruit, as the fruit can be presented more attractively in this way. There is an advantage in a small package, too, as people will often buy a box of apples when they would never think of buying a barrel.

The survey of the Hudson Bay Railway this year cost $92,427.

Orillia Council received a local option petition, and a by-law will be submitted.

EXPRESS TRAIN KILLS THREE MEN NEAR ST. CATHARINES

Unknown Pedestrians Going Along Track Just Outside City Limits Step From One Side to Avoid Train and Are Run Down by Another.

St. Catharines, Nov. 8.—Grand Trunk Express No. 19, westbound, struck and killed three men, about a mile and a half from the Great Western Station, just outside of the city boundaries, in the Township of Grantham, last night. All efforts to reveal the identity of the men have so far proved unavailing.

The train was due at the station at 8.07 p.m. Express No. 2 had left for the east at 8.03. The victims must have been walking along the eastbound track, for Engineer Fish of Toronto, who had charge of the westbound train, saw them just as they stepped in front of his train from the other track.. About a second later train No. 2, out of the way of which the men were getting, whizzed past him. The men did not have time to jump.

Knowing that he had struck them, the brakes were promptly applied, and the train came to a sudden stop. Immediate search for the victims was instituted by the train crew and some passengers. Two bodies were picked up, both lifeless, and were placed in a baggage car. The engineer declared he was positive the three men had been struck, and just then the body was noticed on the cowcatcher of the engine. The man was found to be still alive, and the ambulance was called for, but death ensued before it arrived. This man had no shoes, but wore a heavy pair of woolen socks. Later search nearby revealed a pair of house slippers and three hats.

Both legs of the three men were broken, and all suffered a fracture of the jaw. Not a cent of money was found on any of them, and the pockets contained very little except jack-knives and pipes. The men were all between 30 and 35 years of age. None had the real appearance of tramps. The younger-looking of the three had a small box of salve and a cheap-looking ruby ring in his trousers' pocket. In the pockets of this man was also found a portion of a pay envelope endorsed "T. Wright, Sept. 30, 1909, $25.80," and a real estate circular bearing no name, advocating the purchase of a house rather than paying rent.

In the pocket of one was found a clay pipe, the stem of which appeared to have been broken from the bowl in the mishap, though the bowl was found in another pocket.

The bodies will be prepared for burial, but will be held for a day or so to await identification.

In some quarters the victims are believed to be workmen of some of the local factories.

BOAT LOAD PAY DUTY

Women Held up by Customs Official on Excursion—Had American Goods

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 8.—Returning from a free trip to Sandusky, Ohio, on the new steamer Alfred, Clarke, 150 women, residents of Leamington, Kingsville and Pelee Island, were thrown into consternation in the middle of Lake Erie by the appearance of a Canadian customs official.

The trip was arranged to introduce the Alfred Clarke, which is to ply between Pelee Island and the mainland. The announcement did not please Leamington and Kingsville merchants, who have been complaining for some time that residents of the South Essex towns are allowed to make their purchases across the lake without paying duty. Some one sent the Windsor customs officers a tip, with the result that Peter A. McEwan and a woman officer also took in the trip.

McEwen remained in mufti until the boat was in the middle of the lake on the return trip. Then, donning his cap and badge, he made the women a neat little speech, assuring them that it would be useless to attempt concealment, as there was a woman searcher on board.

Cut glass, fancy leather goods, cotton and household novelties were in the collection on which the customs officer collected duty. One woman had three pairs of shoes and a suit of clothes stowed away. The duty collected amount to about $100.

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—"There is really nothing to say," said Sir James Whitney last evening. "I came down here to see Mr. Aylesworth about some business. I saw him and after that I called on Sir Wilfrid Laurier. That is all there is, I don't want to talk about it."

It is generally remarked here how well the Ontario Premier is looking. He left for Toronto this morning.

MILLINERS HAVE A GRIEVANCE

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Women's hats have grown so large that the wholesale milliners of Chicago protested against the rates charged for carrying them by the express companies, at a hearing before the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission here Saturday, contending that the companies did not have the right to charge for the size of the boxes, but only for the weight.

Toronto, Nov. 8.—This city for the next two weeks will be the centre of labor union activity. At Massey Hall the big convention of the American Federation of Labor opened at 10 a.m. to-day. It is the first time such a massive labor conference has been held in Canada, and for many reasons it may be the most noted convention of the A.F. of L.

In view of the fact that a prison sentence hangs over the heads of three of the most prominent officials of the federation there is every likelihood of much freer discussinn taking place in a Canadian city than in an American city. The criticism that will be handed out against Judge Wright and Judge Shepard will no doubt be pretty severe.

There has been considerable comment in various newspapers and among different labor men as to whether Samuel Gompers, who has practically been the big boss of the A. L. of L. since 1882, will have any opposition this year. T. L. Lewis, president of the miners; James Lynch, president of the printers, and Frank Hayes of the Illinois miners, have been mentioned as possible candidates against Gompers, but a most significant statement was made yesterday by President George L. Berry of the International Pressmen's Union as to the strength of Gompers.

"If Samuel Gompers," he said, "should be jailed in the farthest point in Asia he will be re-elected president of the A. F. of L. next year just the same."

That the American Federation of Labor will endorse the stand taken by President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison in the Buck Stove & Range Co. case is quite evident, and a resolution will be passed declaring that the sentence of imprisonment on these officers was unjust and that they had not violated their constitutional rights. Action on their point has already been taken by the Central Federated Union of New York City, and a request has been received by the secretary of the A. F. of L. that the convention instruct all locals, national and state bodies affiliated with the A. F. of L. to assist in the fight to have the sentence set aside. The New York body is also asking the convention to order an assessment on the 2,000,000 members of the A. F. of L. toward a fund for carrying the appeal against the decision to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Samuel Gompers arrived in the city Saturday morning with Vice-President James Duncan and John Mitchell, and Secretary Frank Morrison, and when seen last night Mr. Gompers was up to his eyes in work selecting the fifteen committees, each of which will be composed of fifteen of the best men chosen from the various organizations.

Some issues that will likely be discussed at length will be the internal struggle among the electrical workers, the question of independent political action, Gompers' report on European conditions, jurisdiction controversies between various international unions and probable contests for office.

The old jurisdictional controversies between the brewers on the one hand and the teamsters and firemen on the other, between the carpenters and woodworkers, between the plumbers and steamfitters, between the seamen and longshoremen, and other contests will be heard again.

There was a procession this morning, the large assemblage gathering at the Prince George at 9.30 and marching to Massey Hall. In carriages were the District Trades and Labor Council of Toronto, the Toronto Municipal Council, with the executive of the A.F. of L., and following them the fraternal delegates. A massed band of 100 pieces led the march. At Massey Hall they were welcomed by Sir James Whitney, Mayor Oliver, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, and others.

The general sessions for business opened in the afternoon.

MURDER ON HIGH SEAS

New Orleans, La., Nov. 8.—Passengers arriving on the steamer Parsimina, from British Honduras, tell of the scuttling of the Honduran gunboat Tatumbla and the murder of 18 of her crew, after she had overhauled a British steamer engaged in smuggling between Jamaica and Honduras.

Six days ago the Tatumbla overhauled the smuggler 59 miles out of Puerto Cortes and 20 of the gunboat's crew boarded the smuggler. The smuggler crew surrendered and the smuggler captain told Capt. Jelella that there was plenty of good rum in her hold.

Jelella ordered a celebration. The prisoners feigned intoxication and when the gunboat crew succumbed to the rum, they were flung overboard. The smuggler crew scuttled the gunboat and then escaped.

Two of the sailors who were flung overboard reached one of the floating life boats of the sunken Honduran vessel and reached Puerto Cortes with the story of the wholesale murder.

The scuttling of the Tatumbla deprives Honduras of her navy.

MADE ANOTHER POSTPONEMENT

Port Arthur, Nov. 8.—At the conclusion of argument before Judge McKay Saturday afternoon, his honor enlarged the application of James Conmee, M.P., for an injunction to restrain the council from signing the contract with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, until Thursday next before a high court judge in Toronto, on the city solicitor's undertaking, that council, in the meantime, will not take any action

LABORER STRUCK WITH A SHOVEL

Windsor, Nov. 8.—As the result of a fight in the Michigan Central Railroad yards in Sandwich West yesterday morning, Wm. Tyler, laborer, employed in the construction of the yard, is in a serious condition at Hotel Dieu, with a fractured skull, and Charles Wolf, another of the gang, is locked up at Windsor police station awaiting the outcome of Tyler's injuries. Tyler was hit with a shovel.

CARRIE NATION HITS BROADWAY

New York, Nov. 8.—After entering the cafe of the Hotel Knickerbocker and shouting that the men drinking were going "straight to hell," Carrie A. Nation, the redoubtable Kansas saloon smasher, was followed down Broadway by a hooting crowd Saturday night, until arrested and taken to the Tenderloin police station, charged with disorderly conduct.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF SCROLL

Brantford, Nov. 8.—Following a complaint from a leader of the local Hebrews that the scroll of the law had been stolen from their synagogue, the police made a search of the hall on George street, recovering the scroll from another faction.

A number of the latter will answer a charge of theft in the Police Court Monday.

Anti-Spitting In England.

London, Nov. 8.—It was announced at the Association of Municipal Corporations Saturday that the home office would grant bylaws against spitting in parks and pleasure grounds, buildings and vehicles, but that it would be unwise at present to press for legislation against spitting in the streets.

FIVE MILLION RAISED FOR THE C.N.R.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—A cablegram has just been received from London stating that bonds to the amount of five million dollars have been placed in London by William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, who is now in England, will enable the Mackenzie and Mann interests to build at least 500 miles of road yearly from this out.

In fact, it is stated officially that the coming year will be the busiest ever experienced by the builders of the C.N.R., and that by the end of 1910, every mile will be under contract from Montreal to the Pacific coast. This, of course, includes the section around the North of Lake Superior, as well as the British Columbia section, which will be started both at Edmonton and on the Pacific the week following the ratification at the polls of the bargain which was signed a short time since by Premier McBride and Dan Mann.

With this off their minds, it is understood that the next question will be the extension of the Atlantic section to Halifax.

TRAIN WRECKED FIVE ARE DEAD

New York, Nov. 8.—Five persons, four of them known to be railroad employes, were killed and six passengers seriously, and a score slightly injured Saturday in a collision between Pennsylvania Railroad train No. 104, from Philadelphia, and an engine running light on the elevated tracks of the railroad in Jersey City.

In some manner as yet unexplained, possibly because of a misplaced switch, the light engine and the passenger train crashed together, the engine sweeping the inbound train.

Practically all the injured passengers were in the smoking car, which was overturned.

The mail car of the wrecked train carried a consignment of gold said to amount to $1,000,000 from the Philadelphia mint to the New York subtreasury. The consignment remained intact.

QUEEN HELENA NO SUFFRAGETTE

London, Nov. 8.—Queen Helena of Italy has resolutely declined to receive a body of Italian women wishing to interest her in their agitation saying: "Politics inspires me nothing but dislike, since woman has truly one mission on earth—love. Women seeking to associate themselves with politics cannot be good mothers or daughters."

OPERATION ON BOARD LINER

New York, Nov. 8.—With the ship rolling in a heavy sea and plowing along at the rate of 21 knots, a successful operation for appendicitis was performed upon a passenger on the steamer Campania, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool. Charles Baxter, a steward, was the patient, and the operation was performed by Surgeon Robert Bruce of the Campania, assisted by Sir Alfred Keough, surgeon-general of the British army, and Dr. Owen Williams, a Liverpool physician.

It was thought that slowing down would make the ship roll more, and consequently the engines forced the big ship along at a 21-knot speed all the time the operation was in progress, a period of forty minutes. Baxter is convalescing satisfactory.

The steamer Odanab is ashore off Point Cheboygan.

COL. EDWARD E. BRITTON

New York, Nov. 8.—Colonel Edward E. Britton, president, and Frederick H. Schroeder, vice-president of the Eagle Savings and Loan Association, of Brooklyn, who were convicted of diverting $4,000 of the funds of that institution, and who appealed to the higher courts, must go to Sing Sing for the Court of Appeals reaffirmed the ruling of the lower tribunals.

The two convicted men were out on $5,000 bail each, and Schroeder was at once taken into custody. Britton, however, could not be found.

The sentences of the men, which were imposed by Justice Crane, of the Supreme Court, after conviction by a jury, were indeterminate, Schroeder getting from one to two years and Britton from two to three years.

QUICK WORK OF CHIEF CONSTABLE FOILES INDIANS

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 8.—The prediction that the smouldering discontent among the 4,000 odd Indians of the related Skeena River nations would break into open war upon the whites as soon as winter had sealed the waterway, is already proven not ill-founded, and but for a daring strategic move by Chief Constable Maitland Dougall Saturday the campaign against the whites would ere now have been begun.

Forewarning was received Thursday when the Indians attacked and captured the Government road camp in Kispiox Valley, north of Hazelton, devoting especial attention to the securing of the stores of dynamite. In this preliminary skirmish two Indians were wounded and another thrown into the Skeena, where he presumably drowned. Foreman James McCully and two others of the camp outfit were injured, McCully being slashed about the legs with an axe. All were ordered to leave the valley instantly under penalty of death, similar warning being given Hugh Taylor, the Government telegraph operator and resident teacher.

Yesterday fifty police, after a five hours' fight, captured Kispiox Village, and took seven prisoners. It is believed this will settle the trouble.

Fifty special constables, virtually the entire white population of the district, were sworn in, armed and marched from Hazelton in small squads in the dead of night, upon Kispiox, the capital. At 5 a.m. the village was rushed and the seven head chiefs and ringleaders seized.

DRAWN UNDER MOVING TRAIN

Iroquois, Nov. 8.—King Steacy, 15 years of age, son of William Steacy, was killed Saturday by the fast eastbound express. The boy, with his sister and another child, had been picking nuts in a grove north of the railroad. On their way home they stopped to see the train, which comes along very fast on the down grade. The little girls stood far enough away to be safe, but King was drawn in under the train by the suction and killed.

PROBABILITIES.

Fresh winds, clearing at night, a little cooler.

MRS. JAMES ROBINSON WILL HAVE TO SERVE TEN YEARS

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—At Saturday's meeting of the Cabinet it was decided to recommend to His Excellency the Governor-General that the death sentence passed on Mrs. Annie Robinson of Sudbury for the murder of her daughters' illegitime children be commuted to ten years' imprisonment. In view of the appalling circumstances that confronted the unfortunate woman and impelled her to commit the crime, the Cabinet promptly decided that the death penalty should not be exacted. It was felt, however, that it would not be in the interests of justice to recommend a full pardon, as the crime was undoubtedly one of murder, and that to set a new precedent of a full pardon after a conviction for murder, even though palliating circumstances all cried for the exercise of mercy, would be unwise. After all the facts of the case were carefully considered and notice taken of the general sentiment of the country, as expressed in the immense number of petitions received, it was decided that the claims of justice and of mercy would be best met by a limited term in the penitentiary.

TWO MORE LOCAL OPTION FIGHTS

Welland, Nov. 8.—The County of Welland will have but one local option vote in January, while a short time ago it was thought there would be three. In Welland town, action has been postponed for a year. The temperate and moral reform association in Bertie Township filed its petition on Oct. 30. On Friday the council struck off twelve names, as being ineligible, leaving 280, or three less than the required 25 per cent., so the bylaw will not be submitted.

The one vote will take place in Wainfleet Township.

Aged Parents Go to Funeral.

Fishkill Landing, N.Y., Nov. 8.—The parents of Uriah Wallace, who is dead here, although they are 94 years old, will make the trip from their home in Hillsdale, N.J., a distance of about a hundred miles to attend the funeral. Their son, who was a veteran of the civil war, died from pneumonia. He was 63 years old.

For a Turkish Navy.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The Turkish Ministry will urge upon the Ottoman Parliament, soon after it reconvenes, Nov. 15, the adoption of a naval program, providing for the expenditure with the next seven years of $100,000,000. It includes the purchase of seven Dreadnoughts.

MERGER WILL BE OPPOSED

Washington, D.C., Nov. 8.—The reported merger of telegraph and telephone companies into one great combination to control the transmission of messages over electric wire throughout the United States will be prevented by the United States Government if there is law sufficient to serve the purpose.

The proposed merger is already being investigated by officers of the Department of Justice.

$10,000,000 FOR MRS. ASTOR

New York, Nov. 8.—Counsel in the suit which Mrs. John Jacob Astor is reported to have brought against her husband, Col. Astor, for divorce, indicated yesterday that other than the decree of the court details of the testimony in the suit never will be made known.

Friends of Mrs. Astor say that no application for alimony was made and that Col. Astor made a settlement of $10,000,000 on his wife. The "woman in the case" is said to be Roberta Menges, the former "belle of Sheepshead Bay," a daughter of Morris Menges, the turfman. She has been twice married and divorced. She had a cottage at Newport through several seasons, and there frequently was seen riding with Col. Astor in his automobile.

BARRIE FIREBUG PLEADS GUILTY

Barrie, Nov. 8.—Richard H. Price, who has pleaded guilty to setting fire to the saw-mill of Hamilton Bros., at Glen Huron, on Thanksgiving Day, causing a $10,000 fire, wants to appear before the county judge for sentence, although he made his plea of guilty before Justice of the Peace Smith of Glen Huron.

Price was raised in the Township of Melancthon, the place that became famous for its firebugs a few years ago.

FARM LABORER ENDS HIS LIFE

Caledonia, Nov. 8.—Samuel Smith, an Englishman, who had been working on a farm near this place since June last, committed suicide with morphine. No motive is known for his rash act, though he had made an attempt about two weeks ago. He was 36 years old, unmarried, and had been in Canada about five years.

War on the Roller Towel.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 8.—The roller towel will have to go in Kansas. As a collector of germs and promoter of infectious diseases this ancient public accommodation, the State Board of Health declares, spreads more contagion among the people than anything else.

London, Nov. 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Board of Trade enquiry into the loss of the Allan liner Laurentian, off Cape Race last September, has ended in the suspension of Capt. Henry Imrie's certificate for three months. The judgment stated the wreck was due to the master altering her course towards land, in which direction it was carried by an unanticipated current, and continuing her at full speed through fog which became very dense.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

There never has been such a pronounced difference of opinion, regardless of party politics and political affiliations as in the case of the Laurier navy scheme. A large number of Liberals are breaking away from Sir Wilfrid and a large number of Conservatives from Mr. Borden on the issue.

The Canadian navy scheme will not go down. The people, as a body, seem determined to resist the attempt to saddle them with a useless expense. The plan devised is no credit to Canadian statesmanship. It is doubtful if it will ever come to pass, although every possible means is being used by way of drydock schemes, the loan of British cruisers, the training of Canadian seamen, etc., to give the impression that "the thing is already done."

PROTESTS BY THE PRESS

The constituency of Sir John A. Macdonald, the greatest leader that any party in Canada has ever had, is so pronouncedly against this Canadian-built navy that the wonder is that the present Conservative leaders do not harken to the message that goes forth to them from the old Chieftain's home. Has it no significance to them—no lesson, no warning!—Kingston Standard (Ind. Con.)

o—o—o

There is more truth than poetry in what William D. Haywood says that a Canadian-built navy would be built, manned and paid for by labor—that labor, in short, would be buffeted about for the sake of this navy. We do not always agree with Mr. Haywood but he certainly has spoken the truth in this matter. The people who will pay for a navy are the toilers of the land,—and it strikes us they have enough already to pay for.—Kingston Standard.

o—o—o

Of course the contractors and the ship-builders and the middlemen want a navy. Why shouldn't they! Think of what there is in it.—Kingston Standard.

o—o—o

If we contribute Dreadnoughts or an annual sum of money we can stop these contributions when the necessity seems no longer to demand it, or when we feel that we cannot afford it. On the other hand if we start building ships in Canada there is no stopping, and there never will be any stopping—until we have crippled ourselves financially. — Kingston Standard.

o—o—o

There are signs that the Government will have trouble in saddling a navy upon the people of Canada. All over the rural section of the Dominion the farmers are talking down the scheme, and there promises to be a big heap of trouble when Parliament meets. In many constituencies the people have given their representatives notice to oppose the navy project, and it is to be hoped that the silly, expensive and useless piece of tomfoolery will be throttled when it is introduced in Parliament. The farmers and townspeople seem to be determined that politics will not cut any ice in this matter, which will greatly simplify in the killing of the scheme. . . . In the meantime we would advise our farmer friends to line up and secure a line on the man who votes for them in Parliament and tell him that off goes his head if he supports a navy programme.—Orangeville Sun (Con.)

THE PROPOSED NAVY

The Labour men have come out in pronounced opposition to the proposed Canadian Navy. They urge that it is disastrous to Canada that she should embark upon a programme of naval expenditure and waste. They urge that it will mean the starving of the Canadian people—the mass of the people—in many ways. To provide a navy means that we shall have to go without much that we sorely need for our comfort and happiness.

The argument that favours a navy as a necessary means of protection proves too much. It proves that in order to protect ourselves and our commerce from the rapacity of others we must be able to fight, but it also proves that in order to protect ourselves adequately we must be in a position to beat our enemies. They no doubt feel the same, hence the prospect is one of continued straining after armies and navies. As a matter of fact this is the case in Europe just now.

At present Canada is more secure without a navy than with it. But if we must do something to help protect the empire let us do it. The Canadian navy idea is not the best way. THE CANADIAN NAVY IS FOUNDED ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT IT SHALL NOT TAKE PART IN IMPERIAL WARS UNLESS WE APPROVE OF THEM. Where, then, is the imperial character of our navy? It is not imperial at all. It is purely local, and we don't want a purely local navy. There are reasons. One reason is we can protect ourselves by learning to shoot. No enemy could invade and conquer us. Beyond that fact, fighting is pure bombast and bullying. A navy would not help us on land, and our navy would do very little for us on sea if we were attacked. It will be a monster waste, the inauguration of a policy that will land us in the mire of European debt and poverty. It will give rise to all sorts of privilege and bondage as a necessary consequence. All these things do. Let us contribute a ship or two to a central, centrally controlled and effective fighting force but as for a Canadian navy away with it! It threatens Independence. It exaggerates our autonomy to that of separate nationhood. It means burdens galore and deliberate waste. If Conservatives and Liberals unite on this policy there will be a third party in Canada. Whatever betides let us avoid this monumental and unnecessary folly.

EDITORIAL NOTES

By and by it will dawn upon somebody that so far from being penurious the Scotch are the most lavishly generous of people.

The new "Conservative Club" which has succeeded the Young Conservative Club, is worthy of every encouragement, and it is expected that Conservatives will make the rooms a habitual rendez-vous.

Associated Press Despatch.

Pekin, Nov. 5.—British Minister Jordan on behalf of his Government has raised objections to the manner in which China is suppressing the opium traffic. The objection is the result of the success of the anti-opium movement in China, which is causing a more rapid decline in the importations of opium from India than was provided in the British-Chinese agreement of 1907, which contemplated a gradual reduction of the importation. Consequently China is now confronted with the prospect of paying for Indian opium that she does not use.

This may lead to another opium war such as Great Britain waged against China in the '40's for the same reason. How would it do to divert some of our foreign missionary efforts to Great Britain. But probably this is the Liberal idea of FREE Trade. The example set by such work is utilized to excuse all forms of hypocrisy and crookedness the world over. It is too bad. It is just as if we, here in Canada, determined to wage war on the Indians for not drinking whiskey and thereby causing our revenue to lessen.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation if Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the French Physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Wm. Madill guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

TOO COMPLICATED.

The Reason We Say "You" Instead of Using "Thou."

The reason commonly given for the substitution of the second person plural for the second person singular, "you" instead of "thou"—that it originated as a fad of courtesy—may explain its origin, but its universal adoption is due to a deeper reason—namely, that the second person singular of the verb is a complicated and difficult form, while the second person plural is simple to the last degree.

With every principal verb in the language and with every auxiliary except "must" the pronoun "thou" requires a special change in the form of the verb, which is often the only break in an otherwise uniform series. Thus in the present tense of every verb, with the single exception of the verb "be," the pronoun "you" employs the unchanged root form of the verb, as "you love, have, can do, shall, will," etc., while "thou" requires a change of form, as "thou lovest, hast, canst, dost, shalt, wilt," etc.

In every such choice the unchanged root form has always the right of way. Thus "you" has become everywhere current in the busy activities of life, while "thou" is carefully laid up in the museum of antiquity or the shrine of religion.—James C. Fernald in Harper's Magazine.

PETERBORO LOST TO T. A. A. C. NOW OUT OF THE RUNNING

Toronto Team Got Early Lead and Won Out 10-5—Locals Had Better of Play Towards Finish of the Game.

Any chance Peterborough had of winning the championship of the senior series of the O.R.F.U. was obliterated on Saturday afternoon, when the T.A.A.C. team of Toronto defeated the locals at Riverside Park. The score was 10—5. The Peterborough team has now lost three games and won none. They will play the last game of the season in Toronto next Saturday, when they will meet the Parkdale Canoe Club fourteen. The boys have done well when it is taken into consideration that they were late in turning out to practice and that the majority of the players were making their debut in senior company. Dr. MacPherson has done good work in coaching the team and has paved the way for a first-class aggregation for 1910. There is no lack of good football material in the city now, and it is only a matter of time before Peterborough will have a rugby team that will hold its own with the best of them.

"DOC'S" GOOD WORK.

From a local standpoint Saturday's game was featured by the appearance of Dr. MacPherson on the back division. He got into the game without practice, but despite this fact, he made a fine showing and was the best man on the field. His presence gave his team mates confidence, and the way they went after the visitors in the last half was good to behold. The former Peterborough and 'Varsity star played left half, and time and again made big gains for the locals. The centre half position was held down by "Bill" O'Brien, who made a good showing on his first appearance in the senior ranks. He punted strongly and with good judgment, and with a little more experience will take his place among the good ones. Len. Giroux, another junior, played an excellent game in the scrimmage. His tackling was good all the way through. The same can be said of Harvey Staunton, who pulled down some of the fleet-footed visitors in fine style. Lundy was also much in the play. Allan Campbell at quarter was right in the going from start to finish, and did a clever bit of work when he circled the end and planted the ball behind the line for a touch in the last quarter. Vincent Corkery was good in the second half, in fact, the whole Peterborough team took brace towards the finish and had the T.A.A.C. on the run.

The Toronto club did not send down their strongest team, as they expected an easy victory over the Petes. They were without the services of MacCrimmon, their star punter, whose work was largely responsible for the trimming the T.A.A.C. gave the Parkdale team a week ago Saturday. In the absence of MacCrimmon the bulk of the kicking was done by DeGruchy, who demonstrated that he was a first-class punter. Reid was the star of the visitors' back division. He ran back the ball in sensational style, the locals finding him as slippery as an eel to down. He twisted his way through the Peterborough ranks like a Salome dancer might do, making repeated gains of twenty and thirty yards. Holden was prominent on the visitors' wing line, which was more effective than that of the home team. It was seldom that the locals were able to break through.

GOT EARLY LEAD.

The T.A.A.C. got the advantage in the first quarter, when they piled up seven points, while Peterborough failed to score. There was no scoring in the second quarter, leaving the score 7—0 at half time. The visitors added three more points in the third quarter, while the locals still held onto the goose egg, although they were having the big end of the play. Five minutes before time was called Peterborough had the ball ten yards from T.A.A.C. line and Campbell went around the right end for a touchdown. The Peterborough team were going great guns about this time, and in a minute they had the ball within a few feet of the T.A.A.C. line again. Another touch looked probable, and the rooters were making a big noise. An off-side play gave the ball to visitors, however, and there was nothing to it. Referee Allen Brown came in for a good deal of criticism for his decision on this point, but as he is regarded as a fair official, it is not likely that he tried to rob the home team of a chance to even the score.

The home team lacked dash in the first half, but they wakened up in the latter part of the game, and put it all over the visitors. They had much the better of the play, and if the game had gone ten minutes more it is reasonably safe to say that T.A.A.C. would have been defeated. Gladness reigned in their camp when the whistle announced that the game was over. If the homesters had played in the early stages of the game like they did towards the finish they would have had no trouble in pulling out a victory. However, the milk has been spilled and regrets are useless.

About 500 people saw the game, the weather being perfect for football.

PERCY SELLEN WON THE TEN MILE INDOOR EVENT

Fred Simpson was defeated in the ten mile event at Brock street rink Saturday night by Percy Sellen, of Toronto, the fifteen mile outdoor champion of Canada, before a fairly large crowd of spectators. The winner's time was 54 minutes 55 seconds, but it can hardly be compared to Simpson's record time made at Riverdale rink, or his work on other occasions as the distance the two men travelled varied somewhat. Sellen never went the distance before on an indoor track. The race was not particularly exciting, as the winner led the greater part of the time. Starter A. Spenceley sent the two men off with Sellen taking the inside position and the lead. Simpson kept right at his heels until the fourth mile. When he sprinted ahead, Selle slipped and fell, but again headed the Indian on the next lap. The first five miles was finished in 26 minutes. In the sixth mile, Simpson forged ahead again, but his rival, did not allow him to hold the position long. He shot past the Hiawatha runner and in the eighth mile began to gradually draw away and at the finish had gained a lap, all but about ten yards. Both men appeared to be fresh, but Sellen looked in better shape to go a longer distance.

PETERBORO' A GOOD CENTRE FOR WINTER RACE MEETING

A Half Mile Track Second to None in the Country—The Horsemen and Horses of the City—Interesting Article From "Canadian Sportsman."

The following is from the Canadian Sportsman:—

The race promoters of Peterborough as a central city have come to the conclusion that they are now too big for a kindergarten class, and, like their brethren at Lindsay, are contemplating holding a real meeting the week following the Lindsay dates. While there is no reason why either one should not be successful if given alone, the fact that each place is to give a meeting where $400 and $500 purses would prevail should guarantee the success of each meeting as the inducement would be such that horsemen from distant points could afford to take a chance on even a long journey as they would be assured of at least two first class meetings with liberal programmes for each.

Peterborough is a city of 16,000 inhabitants, is centrally located, has both C.P.R. and G.T.R. connections besides branch lines and is a natural point for a race meeting. Winter racing weather is always assured after New Year's Day as the climate is considerably colder than at Toronto, where meetings have been held the first week in January in years past. It is but one hour's run from Lindsay, which makes a short ship indeed, and which would be quite advantageous to horsemen.

It appears that there has been a little friction among those who have at different times been responsible for the race meetings at Peterborough, but the trouble is apparently more imaginary than otherwise, so the present seems to be the opportune time for all those connected with harness horse affairs to get together, form a united body that will give a meeting befitting the prosperous city.

The half-mile track at Peterborough is second to none in this country and is but a short distance from the central part of the city with street cars run direct to the track, giving a perfect service for the patrons.

The hotel accommodation for visitors is of the very best, which is a strong point in favor of Peterborough. There are many enthusiastic horsemen in the city who strongly support harness horse racing and it remains only for these men to get together, frame up and announce their programme for the winter meeting when they will receive the support necessary to make the meeting the best ever held in the city.

HORSEMEN AND HORSES

It was in Peterborough that the fast pacing mare Maud Keswick, 2.03 3-4, that for several years ranked as the fastest mare ever foaled in Canada, first became prominent. Here, where the big mare drew a livery buggy and also a cheese wagon and changed hands several times at figures much less than the average price of a good road horse and it was here where that astute horseman, Mr. O. B. Sheppard, of Toronto, bought her for about one-tenth of what she later on proved to be worth, for she not only won many races on the Grand Circuit for her popular owner, but won the historic Tennessee stake for pacers at Lexington the same year, establishing a new record for the event, 2.03 3-4, which stood for years and also a new record for Canadian-bred mares, which stood until reduced by Darkey Hal this year at Syracuse, N.Y., to 2.02 1-4.

One of the more prominent of the active horsemen is Dr. Thos. Johnston, V. S., who owns the inbred Baron Wilkes stallion Queen's Baron, 2.18 1-4, a brown horse by Baron Bell—Queen of the West, by Baron Wilkes. Bettrine, the dam of Baron Bell, was also by Baron Wilkes, which gives to Queen's Baron a strong infusion of the blood of George Wilkes' most famous son. While Queen's Baron can no longer be termed a young horse, he is still up to a good race, and will be found doing battle with the best on the ice this winter. The doctor also owns the black gelding, Harry Direct, 2.17 1-4, a pacer by Directum, out of a mare by Whirlwind. This well known pacer was not asked to do much racing during the past season, but is now in excellent fettle and will be to the races again this winter.

The pacer Patterson, 2.22 1-4, owned by Mr. Eddie Jones, will also be out again this winter for glory and dollars. Patterson is a shifty sort of pacer and is considerably faster than his record would indicate. The war horse, Martin Connors, and his favorite campaigner, Lady Gothard, 2.21 1-2, a pacing mare by St. Gothard, are prominent among the horsemen and horses of Peterborough and they form a combination hard to beat. They have been on the job for some time, and are none the worst of wear and are always ready for an argument, either on the road or on the track.

Mr. Connors also owns a two-year old colt, a trotter, by Queen's Baron, out of a mare by Tariff that is promising.

Dr. Pilkinghorn, one of the new comers in the harness horse circle, is a natural born horseman, as his father, who is well-known at Elora, is well-known throughout Canada as the one-time owner of the noted Clear Grit stallion Sir John (now dead), sire of the fast mare Flora Coffee, 2.05 3-4, etc. The doctor owns the well-bred mare May Sphinx, 2.20 1-4, and derives a great amount of pleasure from her by taking in the smaller fairs.

Mr. George N. Graham, who is noted as one of the best judges of carriage horses in this country, has several on hand, three and four-year olds, that look like high class animals. Mr. Graham has the faculty of picking out the diamonds in the rough and develops them into high actors. Besides the high-class horses George has an equally high-class collection of black reds and greys with which he challenges any one in America to a chicken dispute. He does not draw the color line or any other line. In fact, George is so incensed at Ketchel for not beating the big smoke that he has about made up his mind to challenge him himself.

Many of the Peterborough horsemen were away from home during the writer's visit, notably Messrs. Alex. Elliott, R. J. Munro, and Donald Fraser. Mr. Munro was at Seattle, while Messrs. Elliott and Fraser were out in the north country rusticating. However, Mr. J. M. Brooks and Mr. A. Rountree, of the old guard, were in town, and are both eager for Jack Frost to come in earnest so that they may don their war paint.

One of the most notable horses in America is the old gelding, Holland Boy, by Fairlawn Medium, owned by Dr. Leach. This old-timer, for he is now twenty-two years old, reduced his record from 2.22 1-4 to 2.21 1-4 last year, which, in itself is a feat almost unknown in equine history, and to show his real calibre the old gelding stepped to his new record several times during the season just closed. Holland Boy is to-day as frisky as a two-year-old and shows little sign of the wear and tear he has been subjected to during his many years of activity on the turf.

Mr. Thomas McIvor owns the pacing mare Lulu Chimes, by Hawley Chimes, dam by Jack the Barber. This mare is without a record, but is some pacer just the same. She has been raced a little during the past season and will be light going and raced during the coming winter.

It would not be fitting if I failed to mention the excellent crop of colts in and around Peterborough that were got by Queen's Baron. These youngsters are extra good lookers, and each one is a credit to its sire.

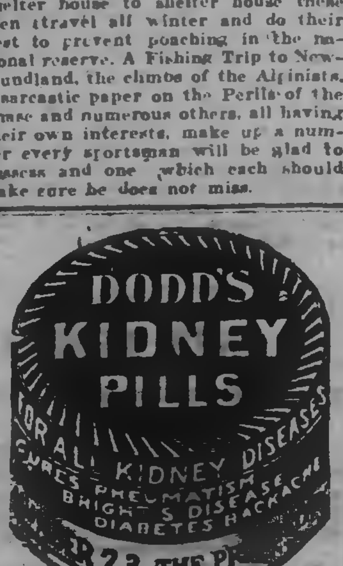
The November "Rod and Gun"

While notable for the variety and range of its contents, the November number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont., is accordance with the season has no less than seven hunting stories. In addition, the opening one, descriptive of an official visit to the Indian reserves for the purpose of paying the treaty money, will attract much attention. An account of a Trip to Nipigon, after an absence of twenty-eight years, contrasting conditions then and now, bring forcibly home to readers the advances made in Canada in the last quarter of a century. A Winter's Trip Through the Algonquin Park: the great National play ground of Ontario, by the Superintendent, shows how well the public interests are guarded by those in charge. From shelter house to shelter house these men travel all winter and do their best to prevent poaching in the national reserve. A Fishing Trip to Newfoundland, the climbs of the Alpinists, a sarcastic paper on the Perils of the Chase and numerous others, all having their own interests, make up a number every sportsman will be glad to possess and one which each should make sure he does not miss.



RUGBY

Lindsay's Juniors were defeated Saturday by the Central Y.M.C.A. rugby team of Toronto by 10—5.

Varsity won the Intercollegiate by defeating Queen's of Kingston. The score was 21—9. The feature of the game was Lawson's run in the last quarter. Securing the ball he started from his own 25 yard line, plowed through the whole opposing line and secured a touch down.

Ben Simpson was laid out three times in the Hamilton-Ottawa game which was won by the Tigers by a 30—5 score.

It was in many respects a memorable game. While at times the play on both sides was loose, there were also some very brilliant features, and the excitement was intense from beginning to end. The crowd was the largest that ever witnessed a game in Hamilton. Extra accommodation had been provided by the management, and the arrangements were of the best, but it was not possible for all who wished to witness the struggle. The playing field was completely surrounded with stands, and not an inch of space was wasted. There were fully six thousand people present, and half as many again went away disappointed when they discovered that they could not get a place from which they could see what was going on.

Should the Tigers defeat the Argonauts next Saturday, both Hamilton and Ottawa will be on an equal footing for the championship and this will necessitate a play-off.

BREAKFAST FRUIT.

The Best Said to Be Oranges, Grapes and Fresh Olives.

Of all breakfast fruits the orange is deservedly the most popular. It is a food that is distinctly health giving. Orange juice aids greatly in reducing the amount of putrefaction found in the intestines of nearly all persons who are submitted to clinical laboratory tests.

Grapes are another fruit that should always be eaten freely when obtainable. Apples are preferably eaten before retiring, and two are about twice as good as one. The apple habit, persisted in, often works rather surprising results with persons who are naturally listless. Lemons can hardly be eaten as a fruit, but lemonade is a valuable beverage. When used as a laxative fresh figs should form the dessert. When not obtainable the dried figs form a good substitute.

Of the value of bananas there seems some reasonable doubt. Many persons complain that they find them indigestible. They are quite likely to reach this conclusion if the banana be eaten frequently as the needless complement of an already hearty meal. On the other hand, there can be no doubt that the growing popularity of the fresh olive is fully deserved. It surely ranks with the orange and the grape and is, of course, much ahead of either in cases of sluggish intestines or constitutional thinness.—H. Irving Hancock in Good Housekeeping.

A Joke of Mark Twain's.

Probably few people are aware that the theatrical godfather of that famous actor Mr. William Gillette was Mark Twain, who was a fellow townsman and a friend of his father. Mark Twain in referring to the matter said that when he used his influence to get young Gillette on the stage he thought he was playing a great joke on the management, for he did not think Gillette had the slightest aptitude for acting. But it turned out to be no joke after all. "I don't know," said Mark Twain, "which I like better—having Gillette make a tremendous success or seeing one of my jokes go wrong."

Cantaloupes.

Chill them.

Refrigerate overnight.

Serve them cut in halves.

Unless you're a crank, that is.

Then have them brought in whole.

This is absolutely the only way in many instances.

Otherwise they will be filled with cracked ice.

In average hotels the ice is simply taken out for "the crank."

Needless to say, the flavor of a good cantaloupe is spoiled by putting ice in it.

No doubt places where many are served insist because of lack of refrigerator space.

There's one way ice can be useful—place the half of a luscious cantaloupe in a bed of ice.

In spite of all, servants and others go on filling them with ice. Even one supposedly wise woman's magazine blithely advised this course.

Restful Combinations.

Treat yourself (for it will prove, indeed, a treat) to plain French linen window and door hangings if your room rejoices in a bouquet wall paper. Reverse the thing in favor of a printed English chintz for the hangings showing on its surface a crawling vine or even a peacock design should your wall be but a plain tint. The tinted wall is no longer rare in houses that have benefited by the art of the modern decorator, but it is seldom found in the less expensive rented house.

The figured wall is sometimes quite possible even from the decorator's viewpoint. A great part of the work of this genius among men is "making the best of things," and with plain hangings and polished floors or one tone rugs the worst of wall papers is not always odious.

Easy.

William the Conqueror had just landed.

"I had no trouble!" he cried. "The English were all looking for Germans."

Herewith he took the throne.—Puck

MEMORIAL TABLET WAS UNVEILED

At St. John's to Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot—The Rector's Tribute to Deceased Worker

A brass memorial tablet to the late Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot was unveiled in St. John's church yesterday afternoon. The tablet in placed in the east wall of the church over the baptismal font.

Rev. Canon Davidson, the rector said the unveiling was a high appreciation of the life and work of Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot in the parish, especially in Christian fellowship, and works of charity and mercy.

She was president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the church for two years, and was most successful in that office, and for a short time was leader of the choir, of which she was a most useful member. She also inaugurated the World's Fair, held in connection with St. John's, at which the building fund for the new rectory was started. Canon Davidson dwelt on the many praiseworthy qualities of Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot, who had been a warm-hearted worker in the parish.

Special prayer were offered at the communion service in the morning, and in the evening the rector made further reference.

Mr. Eardley-Wilmot came from Perth for the ceremony and a number of Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot's friends were also present.

SOME ARGUMENTS—AGAINST LOCAL OPTION ANSWERED

And Shown by Actual Results to be Empty and Utterly Unconvincing—Ex-City Clerk Conron Proves What a Good Measure the By-law Has Been for West Toronto—No Conjecture in This Address.

One of the most practical and pointed addresses given in Peterborough on the subject of local option was delivered at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon by Mr. William J. Conron, for some years city clerk of West Toronto. Mr. Conron made his appeal strictly on economic grounds and his views appeared rational and convincing.

To a great extent the prime object of his address was to show the absurdity of the remarks made against local option as the producer of a "dead" town commercially, and as a measure that would encourage illicit traffic and the operation of dives. West Toronto in a civic and business way and as far as the home was concerned had profited immeasurably by the introduction of local option, the speaker stated.

There was a large audience at the opera house and it showed its appreciation of Mr. Conron's remarks by frequent and spirited applause.

Rev. J. G. Potter was in the chair and the George street choir was on the stage and led in the singing under Mr. McCann's direction. The ladies' quartette of the choir sang a selection with splendid effect and Mr. Myles was heard to advantage in a baritone solo. Prayer was offered by Mr. Jos. Batten.

The city was taking an interest in the affairs that benefitted the community, Mr. Potter said, and he called upon Ald. Gillespie to introduce the speaker.

LOCAL OPTION A GOOD THING

It was reasonable that in the consideration of a measure that there should be the fullest information given on the question before the ratepayers could be expected to use their franchise to have it introduced. There was a social, moral and religious side to the one under discussion to such an extent at the present time—the Local Option By-law. It had proven successful in communities where it had been tried.

Premier Asquith of England said on the introduction of the license reduction bill in 1896 that the Government meant to preservere in the course it had taken as it had behind it all the influences for the refining and uplifting of national life. A brilliant writer had stated that he believed that in fifty years time no man would be able to raise to any position of prominence in business life unless he was a teetotaler.

FOUNDATIONLESS OBJECTIONS

The speaker took the various objections advanced against local option and dealt with them one at a time and by the employment of sound counter arguments held them to be without foundation and prompted by the mercenary motives of the liquor niterests. Mr. Conron told of the great struggle of the advocates of local option in his own municipality to have the by-law carried, but the reward of their efforts had been most encouraging.

Local option in West Toronto had proven highly successful. Its opponents had tried to have it repealed but their efforts in this respect showed that the people were satisfied with it and the vote in favor of it on the repeal measure was larger than the one registered for the by-law, when it was originally adopted.

FACTS THAT PROVE

By cold, hard and undeniable statistics the speaker showed that the town of West Toronto had greatly benefitted since local option had been introduced. The business prosperity had been marked by a splendid growth, the population had increased and drunkenness had decreased to a most appreciable extent.

The finances of West Toronto had improved since the introduction of local option and the taxes had been much more promptly paid by the citiens. The sales of lands for the arrears of taxes had been wonderfully reduced.

In referring to the hotelkeeper Mr. Conron stated that he ought to be one of the most estimable men of the community—a man who would courteously looked after his guests and the stranger within the gates and do what he could to offer them every convenience and protection. It was not against the hotel that the speaker had anything to say. It was against the bar.

DRAIN ON THE COMMUNITY

The bar was a bad thing for any community from an economic standpoint. The butcher, the baker and the grocer would find out that the men from whom they couldn't collect their bills were to the greatest extent the ones who spent their money over the bar.

Speaking of West Toronto Mr. Conron proved by the statements of the heads of the firms that the manufactoreis in that place were thoroughly pleased with local option as it had reduced drunkenness among the employees till there was practically more with the coming in of local option the bars on the corners had been wiped away, and the workingmen instead of cashing their cheques in the bars and wasting their money were taking it home to their wives and families. New content in the homes and the opening of bank accounts was the gratifying result, and Mr. Conron gave incidents which had come under his own direct notice which quite distinctly showed that the speaker's contention in this regard could not be successfully disputed.

A significant feature in connection with local option in West Toronto was the fact that many who were against it before it was passed were converted in their views since they had seen the great advantages that had resulted from the passing of the by-law.

C. P. R. BELIEVE IN INFLUENCE OF BEAUTY

Packages of Bulbs Being Sent Out to all Stations of the Company—An Item in Expansion and Development Policy.

The Floral Department of the Canadian Pacific is keeping pace with the other branches of the Railway Company in the great work of expansion and development. Twice a year packages of seeds, bulbs, plants and shrubs are sent out all over the system to agents, sectionmen and other employees to cultivate flowers on the company's property. In the springtime 50,000 packages of seeds, in each of which are twenty-nine varieties, are distributed, and in the autumn over 2,000 packages of bulbs are sent out, to the 1,500 gardens which beautify the line between St. John, N.B., and Vancouver Island. This year bulbs have been placed in some of the Company's Atlantic Steamships, and it is confidently expected that at Christmas time C.P.R. passengers will have the novelty of seeing C.P.R. flowers from C.P.R. bulbs grown in C.P.R. vessels, decorating C.P.R. dining saloons on the ocean. This floral work, according to Mr. N. S. Dunlop, who has charge of the department, is growing rapidly, and is interesting an army of employees in yearly increasing numbers, who find in it a labor of love. Great strides have been made during the past thirteen years, both in the extent of the work and in the interest and enthusiasm displayed in floral cultivation by C.P.R. men. Before many years every station over the large system, it is evident, will be beautified by neat gardens in which will bloom the rose, the lily, the tulip, the crocus and a score of other varieties of flowers.

NO WATER FLOWED IN THE TRENT

Unique Condition From Crowe Bay to Trenton "Oldest Inhabitant" Was Beaten Out

The dryness of local option was accentuated at Campbellford yesterday when the Trent river was not a river for the time being. The Seymour Power Company were making some repairs to their plant above the town and to accomplish the work they had to have the river free from water. This condition was secured by shutting off the water with stop-logs at Crowe Bay. The result was that the river was practically free from water all the way from Crowe Bay to the outlet at Trenton. A Peterborough man, who was at Campbellford over Sunday describes the scene as remarkable. People were walking across the river, or rather the place where the river should have been. A large number of fish were left high and dry when the water went out and many of the boys of the town and surrounding country took advantage of the opportunity to gather a "string." The bed of the river presented a strange sight with the numerous logs and other material that have gone to the bottom since the lumbering industry was commenced nearly a century ago. The "oldest inhabitant" of Campbellford stated that the bed of the river had not been exposed in the last fifty years.

President Gompers Attributes Separation of Canada and U. S. Labor Interests to Ulterior Motives

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 8.—At the opening of twenty-ninth convention of the American Federation of Labor, which has two million members and is one of the biggest organizations in the world, President Gompers declared those who sought to separate the Canadian Union from the international body were actuated by ulterior motives, not in the interests of labor as a whole. The body in the United States did not desire Canadians to give up their loyalty to Canada. All labor organizations, including the State Federations of Ohio and Iowa, and the cities of Philadelphia and Detroit that had admitted outlawed electrical workers were refused seats at the covention.

MISS ROBSON SANG AT STIRLING

Stirling, Nov. 6.—At the Shredded Wheat Banquet, given here under the auspices of St. Andrew's church, Miss Jean Robson, soprano soloist, of Knox church, Peterborough, sang. Miss Robson delighted her audience with her songs, which showed careful selection. Possessing as she does, a voice of excellent quality, she sang with a naturalness that was delightful The audience showed their appreciation by repeatedly encoring her. This is not the first time Miss Robson has sang in Stirling, and we shall gladly welcome her again.

CAPTIVATED THE AUDIENCE

Triumph of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir at Massey Hall

In an unqualified, enthusiastic appreciation of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir, the most eminent of Canadian writers, Mr. E. R. Parkhurst, expresses in a lengthy reference in the Toronto Globe his high approval of the choir's magnificent singing. He also praises the soloists for their excellent work.

The choir sang at Massey Hall, Toronto, on Saturday night, and must have strongly appealed to the audience, judging from the following clipping from the introduction of Mr. Parkhurst's criticism.

Apart from the musical excellence of the concert of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir at Massey Hall on Saturday night the occasion was in the nature of a patriotic function for our Welsh citizens, a large representation of whom were present. When the concert closed it was a difficult thing to get the audience to go home, so eager was the desire of the majority not to leave without greeting the musical director, Mrs. Hughes Thomas. The caretaker of the hall had finally to turn off the electric light to clear the auditorium.

THEATRICAL

The Lily and the Prince

One of the most satisfactory and interesting plays of the season, "The Lily and the Prince" was given at the Grand Opera House Saturday afternoon and evening to highly pleased audiences. The period represented by the play was the romantic and picturesque sixteenth century and the required atmosphere was excellently imparted by the beautiful costumes and settings. The presenting company was of uniform ability and all the parts were splendidly taken and the story of the play is one that holds the interest of the auditor every moment of the presentation.

Miss Lucy Blacke as Angela Di Cavelli is an actress of considerable dramatic power and technical skill, and Mr. Claude E. Kimball gave a remarkably able reading of the part of the Prince of Colora. All the other roles were capably filled.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

ADMITTED THAT HE HAD TAKEN POISON WHEN IT WAS TOO LATE

William Ellis, a Young Englishman Swallowed Dose of Paris Green With Fatal Effects—Was Employed by John Clysdale, Dummer—Died at Three O'Clock This Morning.

What the motive was that prompted William Ellis, a young Englishman of 24 years, employed by John Clydesdale, a farmer living in Dummer, about six and a half miles from Warsaw, to commit suicide is a mystery. He took Paris green, two teaspoonful's of it, he admitted, when he was beyond medical aid. At the time the family residing at the farm—Mr. and Mrs. Clydesdale and their two daughters—were at church. The poison was taken after Ellis had had his dinner, and apparently between 12 and one o'clock. After suffering from then till three o'clock this morning he succumbed to the fatal effects of the self-administered draught.

Shortly before the young man died he confessed that he had taken the Paris green, which he mixed in a shaving mug and drank. Until the time of this admission it was thought by the members of the household that he had simply a rather severe attack of ordinary stomach trouble, occasioned by eating something that had not agreed with him.

After he had taken the Paris green Ellis went out to the barn, where he was found vomiting in the straw mow. He was asked to come into the house and did so.

As his illness continued, Ellis was asked around midnight if he would like to have a doctor.

He said he would. Mr. Wm. Clydesdale, a son of Mr. John Clydesdale, and a next-door neighbor, was dispatched for a physician and went to Warsaw to see Dr. Monroe. The doctor was feeling very much fatigued, just having come in from a call to Apsley, and upon being advised that Ellis' complaint appeared to be an attack of common stomach trouble, gave a stomach sedative to Mr. Clydesdale to take back with him.

About three o'clock Mr. Clydesdale again called on the doctor, and this time stated that Ellis had confessed to having taken Paris green. When the doctor reached the Clydesdale home Ellis was dead, having passed away at three o'clock.

LEFT WILL AND LETTER

The deceased was somewhat morose and melancholy at times, and there was believed to have been some family affairs that worried him. Outside of this any cause for the suicide is a matter of conjecture. There was no local reason as far as can be found out.

Ellis left his will and a letter to his family in England. Both were probably written on Sunday. In the letter he said he hoped his people were well and stated he was well himself. He also remarked on the fact that they hadn't acknowledged the receipt of some money he had forwarded them.

In the will he stated he was sorry for what he had done, and also made statements to that effect to those around the bedside.

Ellis was of steady habits, and used to remit money to his family. He had been in Canada for about two years, and worked for Mr. Clydesdale during the time of his Canadian residence.

The facts in connection with the case were made known to Coroner Dr. Gray by Dr. Monroe, and Dr. Gray decided it was quite apparently a case of deliberate suicide, and that no inquest would be necessary.

GREAT EXCITEMENT AMONGST FRENCH-CANADIANS OVER COMING OTTAWA CONGRESS

La Patrie Says That the National Future of the French is at Stake—"Aggressiveness" to be the Watchword of the Future.

The following editorial (translated) from La Patrie, shows which way the wind is blowing amongst the French-Canadians:

"The movement undertaken by the Congress of Education of the French-Canadians of Ontario is, in truth, national, but it is, before everything and specially, provincial. For the French-Canadian there can scarcely be a more important business than that of education. His social and national future is bound up in it. And why? The French-Canadian population of Ontario will be in the future what the present and future generations will have made it. If, then, it remains apathetic, as in the past, if it does not rise up as one man to avenge its trampled-upon rights; if it does not try by every means in its power, etc. . . . . . "In Canada by the constitution of 1867, was it not solemnly promised that citizens had a right to their own schools, assisted out of the public treasury? Is French taught in the schools of Ontario? No. They teach it as they teach German or any other modern language." . . . "The great Congress of Education will show that French-Canadians are full of life." . . . . "Let them (our enemies) beware!"

FISH THAT WALK.

Climbing Perch Travel Over Land From Water to Water.

It may seem absurd to speak of fishes as walking. The flying fish is well known, but its flight looks much like swimming in the air. We naturally think of fishes as living always in water, as being incapable, in fact, of living anywhere else. But nature maintains no hard and fast lines of distinction between animal life which belongs to the land and that which belongs to the water. If we can believe the accounts of naturalists, there are fishes that traverse dry land.

It is reported that Dr. Francis Day of India has collected data of several instances of the migration of fishes by land from one piece of water to another.

A party of English officers were upon one occasion encamped in a certain part of India when their attention was attracted by a rustling sound in the grass and leaves. Investigation showed it to be caused by myriads of little fishes that were making for one direction and were passing slowly on. There were hundreds of them moving by using their side and small fins as feet, now upright, now falling down, squirming, bending, rolling over, regaining their finny feet and again pressing on.

These fishes were the famous climbing perch, and they were passing over the country to avoid a drought. When the stream in which they have been spending the season dries up they scale the banks and, directed by some marvelous instinct, crawl to another.—Pearson's Weekly.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

The girl withdrew a puzzled gaze from Mulready's face (it was apparent to Kirkwood that this phase of the affair was no more enigmatic to him than to her) and drew aside a corner of her cloak, disclosing the gladstone bag securely grasped in one gloved hand.

"I have it, thanks to Mr. Kirkwood," she said quietly.

Kirkwood chose that moment to advance from the shadow. Mulready started and fixed him with a troubled and unfriendly stare. The girl greeted him with a note of sincere pleasure in her surprise.

"Why, Mr. Kirkwood! But I left you at Mrs. Hallam's!"

Kirkwood bowed, smiling openly at Mulready's discomfiture.

"By your father's grace I came with him," he said. "You ran away without saying good night, you know, and I'm a jealous creditor."

She laughed excitedly, turning to Calendar. "But you were to meet me at Mrs. Hallam's?"

"Mulready was good enough to try to save me the trouble, my dear. He's an unselfish soul, Mulready. Fortunately it happened that I came along not five minutes after he'd carried you off. How was that, Dorothy?"

Her glance wavered uneasily between the two, Mulready and her father. The former, shrugging to declare his indifference, turned his back squarely upon them. She frowned.

"He came out of Mrs. Hallam's and got into the four wheeler, saying you had sent him to take your place and would join us on the Alethea."

"So-o! How about it, Mulready?"

The man swung back slowly. "What you choose to think," he said after a deliberate pause.

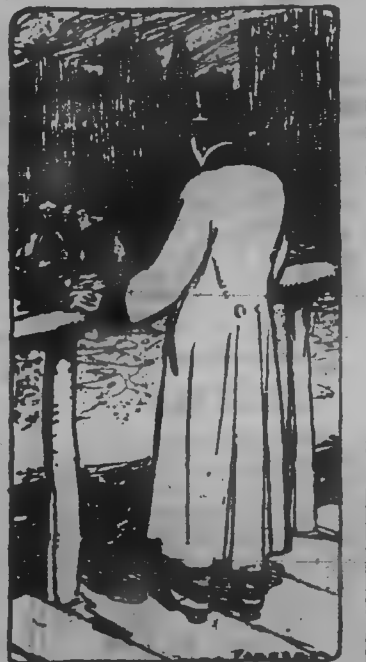
"Well, never mind! We'll go over the matter at our leisure on the Alethea."

There was in the adventurer's tone a menace, bitter and not to be ignored, which Mulready saw fit to challenge.

"I think not," he declared. "I think not. I'm weary of your addle pated suspicions. It'd be plain to any one but a fool that I acted for the best interests of all concerned in this matter. If you're not content to see it in that light I'm done."

"Oh, if you want to put it that way, I'm not content, Mr. Mulready," retorted Calendar dangerously.

"Please yourself. I bid you good evening and—goodby." The man took a step toward the stairs.



The boat dropped away, the oars lifting and falling.

Calendar dropped his right hand into his topcoat pocket. "Just a minute," he said sweetly, and Mulready stopped. Abruptly the fat adventurer's smoldering resentment leaped in flame. "That will be about all, Mr. Mulready! 'Bout face, you bound, and get into that boat! D'you think I'll temporize with you till doomsday? Then forget it. You're wrong, dead wrong. Your bluff's called, and"—with an evil chuckle—"I hold a full house, Mulready—every chamber taken." He lifted meaningly the hand in the coat pocket. "Now, in with you!"

With a grin and a swagger of pure bravado Mulready turned and obeyed. Unnoticed of any save perhaps Calendar himself the boat had drawn in at the stage a moment earlier. Mulready dropped into it and threw himself sullenly upon the midships thwart.

"Now, Dorothy, in you go, my dear," continued Calendar, with a self satisfied wag of his head.

Half dazed, to all seeming, she moved toward the boat. With clumsy and assertive gallantry her father stepped before her, offering his hand—his hand which she did not touch, for in the act of descending she remembered and swung impulsively back to Kirkwood.

"Good night, Mr. Kirkwood. Good night. I shan't forget."

He took her hand and bowed above it, but when his head was lifted he still retained her fingers in a lingering clasp.

"Good night," he said reluctantly. In a sudden flush of daring he turned and nodded coolly to Calendar. "With your permission," he said negligently and drew the girl aside to the angle of the stairway.

"Miss Calendar"— he began, but was interrupted.

"Here—I say!"

Calendar had started toward him angrily.

Kirkwood calmly waved him back. "I want a word in private with your daughter, Mr. Calendar," he announced, with quiet dignity. "I don't think you'll deny me. I've saved you some slight trouble tonight."

Disgruntled, the adventurer paused. "Oh, all right," he grumbled. He returned to the boat.

"Forgive me, Miss Calendar," continued Kirkwood nervously. "I know I've no right to interfere, but"—

"Yes, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"But hasn't this gone far enough?" he floundered unhappily. "I can't like the look of things. Are you sure—sure that it's all right—with you, I mean?"

She did not answer at once, but her eyes were kind and sympathetic. He plucked heart of their tolerance.

"It isn't too late yet," he argued. "Let me take you to your friends—you must have friends in the city. But this—this midnight flight down the Thames, this atmosphere of stealth and suspicion, this"—

"But my place is with my father, Mr. Kirkwood," she interposed. "I daren't doubt him, dare I?"

"I suppose not."

"So I must go with him. I'm glad—thank you for caring, dear Mr. Kirkwood. And again good night."

"Good luck attend you," he muttered, following her to the boat.

Calendar helped her in and turned back to Kirkwood with a look of arch triumph. Kirkwood wondered if he had overheard. Whether or no, he could afford to be magnanimous. Seizing Kirkwood's hand, he pumped it vigorously.

"My dear boy, you've been an angel in disguise. And I guess you think me the devil in masquerade." He chuckled, in high conceit with himself over the turn of affairs. "Good night and—and fare thee well!" He dropped into the boat, seating himself to face the recalcitrant Mulready. "Cast off, there!"

The boat dropped away, the oars lifting and falling. With a weariful sense of loneliness and disappointment Kirkwood hung over the rail to watch them out of sight.

Somewhat wearily the young man released the railing and ascended the stairs. "And that is the end!" he told himself, struggling with an acute sense of personal injury. He had been hardly used. For a few hours his life had been lightened by the ineffable glamour of romance. Mystery and adventure had engaged him. He had served a fair woman and been associated with men whose ways, however questionable, were the ways of courage, hedged thickly about with perils.

Disconsolate and aggrieved, he gained the street. He was miles from St. Pancras, foot weary, to all intents and purposes lost.

In this extremity chance smiled upon him. The cabby who at his initial instance had traveled this weary way from Quadrant mews, after the manner of his kind, ere turning back had sought surcease of fatigue at the nearest public. From afar Kirkwood saw the four wheeler at the curb and made all haste toward it.

Entering the gin mill, he found the cabby, soothed him with bitter and, instructing him for St. Pancras with all speed, dropped, limp and listless with fatigue, into the conveyance.

CHAPTER IX.

FROM the commanding elevation of the box "Three 'n' six!" enunciated the cabby, his tone that of a man prepared for trouble, inclined to give trouble a welcome. His bloodshot eyes blinked truculently at his alighted fare. "Three 'n' six," he iterated aggressively.

An adjacent but theretofore abstracted policeman pricked up his ears and assumed an intelligent expression.

"Bermondsey Ol' Stairs to Sain' Pancras," argued the cabby assertively, "seven mile by th' radius—three 'n' six!"

Kirkwood stood on the outer station platform, near the entrance to third class waiting rooms. Continuing to fumble through his pockets for an elusive sovereign purse, he looked up mildly at the man.

"All right, cabby," he said, with pacific purpose; "you'll get your fare in half a shake."

"Three 'n' six!" croaked the cabby, like a blowsy and vindictive parrot.

The bobby strolled nearer.

"Yes?" said Kirkwood, mildly diverted. "Why not sing it, cabby?"

"Lor' lumme!" The cabby exploded with indignation, continuing to give a lifelike imitation of a rumpled parrot. "I 'ad trouble enough wif you at Bermondsey Ol' Stairs—hover that quid you promised, didn't I? Sing it! My heye!"

"Quid, cabby?" And then, remembering that he had promised the fellow a sovereign for fast driving from Quadrant mews, Kirkwood grinned broadly, eyes twinkling, for Mulready must have fallen heir to that covenant. "But you got the sovereign? You got it, didn't you, cabby?"

The driver affirmed the fact with unnecessary heat and profanity and an amendment to the effect that he would have spoiled his fare's sanguinary conk had the outcome been less satisfactory.

The information proved so amusing that Kirkwood, chuckling, forbore to resent the manner of its delivery and, abandoning until a more favorable time the chase of the coy sovereign purse, extracted from one trousers pocket half a handful of large, English small change.

"Three shillings and sixpence." He counted the coins into the cabby's grimy and bloated paw and added quietly: "The exact distance is rather less than four miles, my man—your fare, precisely 2 shillings. You may keep the extra 18 pence for being such a conscientious blackguard—or talk it over with the officer here. Please yourself."

He nodded to the bobby, who, favorably impressed by Kirkwood, smiled at the cabby a cold, hard smile, whereupon the latter, smirking in unabashed triumph, spat on the pavement at Kirkwood's feet, gathered up the reins and wheeled out.

Restoring 2 shillings and a few fat copper pennies to his pocket, he entered the vast and echoing train shed. In the act his attention was attracted and immediately riveted by the spectacle of a burly luggage navvy in a blue jumper in the act of making off with a large folding signboard, of which the surface was lettered expansively with the advice, in red against a white background, "Boat Train Leaves on Track 3."

Excitedly Kirkwood touched the man's arm with a detaining hand. "Boat train?" he gasped, pointing at the board.

"Left ten minutes ago, thank you sir."

"Well, but— Of course I can get another train at Tilbury?"

"For yer boat? No, sir, thank you sir. Won't be another tryne till mornin', sir."

"Oh-h!"

Aimlessly Kirkwood drifted away, his mind a blank.

Some time later he found himself on the steps outside the station, trying to stare out of countenance a glaring electric mineral water advertisement on the farther side of the Euston road.

He was stranded.

Distracted, he searched pocket after pocket, locating his watch, cigar case and cigarette case, matchbox, penknife, all the minutiae of pocket hardware affected by civilized man, with old letters, a cardcase, a square envelope containing his steamer ticket, but no sovereign purse. His small change pocket held less than 3 shillings—two and eight, to be exact—and a brass key, which he failed to recognize as one of his belongings.

And that was all. At some time during the night he had lost (or been cunningly bereft of?) that little purse of chamois skin containing the three golden sovereigns which he had been husbanding to pay his steamer expenses and which, if only he had them now, would stand between him and starvation and a night in the streets. If Brentwick were only in town! But he wasn't and wouldn't be within the week.

"No good waiting here," he concluded. Composing his face, he re-entered the station. There were his trunks, of course. He couldn't leave them standing on the station platform forever.

He found the luggage room and interviewed a mechanically courteous attendant, who, as the result of profound deliberation, advised him to try his luck at the lost luggage room across the station. He accepted the advice. It was a foregone conclusion that his effects had not been conveyed to the Tilbury dock. They could not have been loaded into the luggage van without his personal supervision. Still, anything was liable to happen when his unlucky star was in the ascendant.

He found them in the lost luggage room.

A clerk helped him identify the articles and ultimately clucked with a perfunctory note, "Sixpence each, please."

"I—ah—pardon?"

"Sixpence each, the fixed charge, sir. For every twenty-four hours or fraction thereof, sixpence per parcel."

"Oh, thank you so much," said Kirkwood sweetly. "I will call tomorrow."

"Very good, sir. Thank you, sir."

"Five times sixpence is two and six," Kirkwood computed, making his way hastily out of the station lest a worse thing befall him. "No, bless your heart—not while two and eight represents the sum total of my fortune."

He wandered out into the night. He could not linger round the station till dawn, and what profit to him if he did? Even were he to ransom his trunks one can scarcely change one's clothing in a public waiting room.

Somewhere in the distance a great clock chimed a single stroke freighted with melancholy. It knelled the passing of the half hour after midnight, a witching hour when every public shuts up tight and gentlemen in top hats and evening dress are doomed to pace the pave till day (barring they have homes or visible means of support)—till day, when pawnshops open and such personal effects as watches and hammered silver cigar cases may be hypothecated. What was he to do? An hour passed. Through this long hour Kirkwood walked without a pause.

Another clock somewhere clanged resonantly twice. The world was very still. And so, wandering foot loose in a wilderness of ways, turning aimlessly, now right, now left, he found himself in Frognall street.

Kirkwood identified it with a start and a guilty tremor. He stopped stock still in an unreasoning state of semipanic, arrested by a silly impulse to turn and fly, as if the bobby whom he descried approaching him with measured stride, pausing now and again to try a door or flash his bullseye down an area, were to be expected to identify the man responsible for that racket raised ere midnight in vacant No. 9.

At the corner he swerved and crossed, still possessed of his devil of inspiration. It would be unfair to him to say that he did not struggle to resist it, for he did, because it was fairly and egregiously asinine; yet, struggling, his feet trod the path to which it tempted him.

"Why," he expostulated feebly, "I might as well turn back and beat that bobby over the head with my cane!"

But at the moment his hand was in his change pocket, feeling over that same brass door key which earlier he had been unable to account for, and he was informing himself how very easy it would have been for the sovereign purse to have dropped from his waistcoat pocket while he was sliding on his ear down the dark staircase. To recover it meant, at the least, shelter for the night, followed by a decent, comfortable and sustaining morning meal. Fortified by both he could redeem his luggage, change to clothing more suitable for daylight traveling, pawn his valuables and enter into negotiations with the steamship company for permission to exchange his passage, with a sum to boot, for transportation on another liner—a most feasible project, a temptation all but irresistible!

But then—the risk. Supposing, for the sake of argument, the customary night watchman to have taken up a transient residence in No. 9, supposing the police to have entered with him and found the stunned man on the second floor, would the watchman not be vigilant for another nocturnal marauder—would not the police now, more than ever, be keeping a wary eye on that house of suspicious happenings?

Decidedly to re-enter it would be to incur a deadly risk. And yet undoubtedly, beyond question, his sovereign purse was waiting for him somewhere on the second flight of stairs, while his means of clandestine entry lay warm in his fingers—the key to the dark entry, which he had by force of habit pocketed after locking the door on leaving the house with Dorothy.

He came to the Hog-in-the-Pound. Its windows were dim with low turned gaslights. Down the covered alleyway Quadrant mews slept in a dusk, but fitfully relieved by a lamp or two round which the friendly mist clung close and thick.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more; it decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments, and oftimes rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

M-I-O-N-A is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure or money back. The price of a large box of Mi-o-na Tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

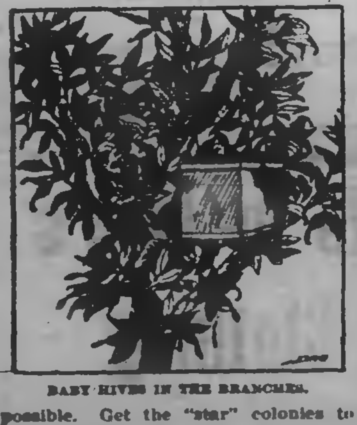
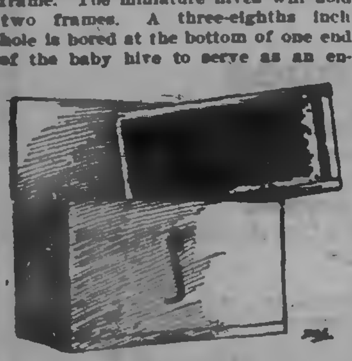
LESSONS IN HONEY CULTURE

Mating Queens With Baby Hives Suggestions For Apiarists.

There is a great difference in the surface storing abilities of the colonies in an apiary. Some colonies are disappointing. After an apiarist has the desired number of colonies, swarming generally is suppressed as much as possible. Get the "star" colonies to swarm, so that the queen cells can be saved and the queens introduced into poor colonies. Such queens must first have mated, and that requires extra hives. If the queen cells are allowed to hatch inside of cages, these virgin queens may be fertilized by only a handful of bees in suitable small hives. Use small frames of such size that four will fit into a regular brood frame. The miniature hives will hold two frames. A three-eighths inch hole is bored at the bottom of one end of the baby hive to serve as an entrance for the bees. The cover works with leather hinges.



BABY HIVES IN THE BRANCHES.



HOME OF THE BABY BEES.

The frames are filled by cutting pieces of worker comb to fit into them. When four of the little frames have been wedged into a regular brood frame they are hung in an upper story to be filled with honey.

To stock the little hives with bees smoke well, preferably, the bees of a queenless colony and get them to fill themselves with honey. After the bees are well subdued shake them into a small box or basket. Then dip about a teacupful of bees and empty into each little hive. Quickly turn down the cover. The small entrances should already have been closed, so the bees will be imprisoned. Leave them five or six hours, then pull out the plug and smoke well again. Use a little tobacco in the smoker. Then run in a five or six day old virgin queen, blowing some smoke after her. Leave the bees imprisoned another twenty-four hours, then pull out the plug.

If the weather is favorable the queen will commence to lay in a few days. The bees will kill the queens, no matter how much you smoke them. For this reason it is better to brush out all of the bees from the little hives and restock them the same as at the start.

On account of the few bees the baby hives are liable to be robbed out if precautions are not taken. Have the little hives scattered among shrubs and bushes or perched in trees and always place them a way off from the main apiary.

WATERING HORSES.

What a Well Known Veterinarian Has to Say on the Subject.

Where the water is brought to the horse in a bucket the vessel should be a large one, so that the horse is certain to get enough, and if there is any doubt it should be refilled, says Dr W. R. Gilbert, a well known veterinary writer. Horses that are allowed a free supply or that are worked at frequent intervals drink relatively less than those receiving water at long intervals or that get an irregular supply. When the chance is provided they make up for the deprivation often with disastrous results that tend to give water a bad name with unthinking men as a cause of disease.

Unless quite used to a free supply the quantity of water should be limited or withheld for a time when horses are excessively heated; also when first stabled after doing a hard day's work in particularly cold weather. It must, however, be understood that there is a vast difference as regards danger between a drink of water that has been exposed for some time and raised to the temperature of the atmosphere and one of water freely drawn from a deep well or cistern.

With regard to the time of watering, the necessity of giving it before the grain should be obvious when the small size of the horse's stomach is borne in mind and the process of digestion considered. Water given on a comparatively empty stomach does not remain in the organs, but is almost immediately conveyed to the large intestines. If it is withheld till after feeding it is almost physically impossible for both food and water to be retained in the stomach together, and a portion at least of the food is carried by water into the intestines undigested, where it, besides a loss of nutriment to the animal, is a source of irritation.

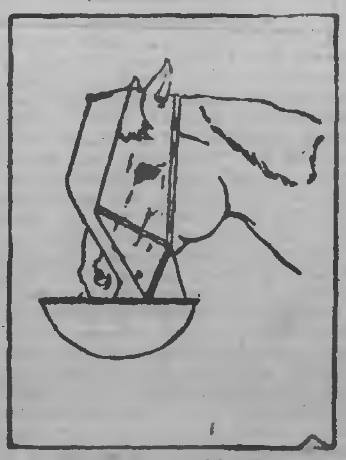
Of all the common faults, and there are many in the alimentation of horses, that of giving water after a full meal of grain is the worst. This, unlike hay, has to undergo gastric digestion in the stomach, where its nitrogenous elements have to be dealt with, not in the intestines, and if grain is washed with water from the stomach before the albuminoids are dissolved out and digested they are lost.

The excess of cold water afterward causes vascular congestion and violent muscular contractions, lowers the temperature and by interfering with digestion tends to disorders of a dangerous character, and, as we have seen, even a big drink of water of moderate temperature is full of peril.

Always allay thirst before the grain is given, and if any water is allowed after it should be merely a mouthful until the lapse of an hour or two has given time for gastric digestion.

A Fountain Feed Bag.

The nose bag shown in the illustration is of recent invention and is designed to overcome the trouble most horses have in trying to eat their noonday meal from the old style feed bag. The feed supply is contained in a reservoir which is secured to the bridle and is suspended between the animal's eyes. The feed flows down of its own weight into a saucer-like receptacle which is held under the animal's mouth. The feed is always in reach, and there is no loss by spilling.



RESERVOIR FOR THE FEED.

Sacrificing Good Horses.

Many thin horses are leaving the country now. They have done a hard season's work putting in oats and corn and are being cashed in to save feed. Some of these horses are not worth fattening, but scattered among the offerings coming to market are many good animals which are virtually sacrificed by going off the farm in this condition. Thin horses have been bought under dealers' eyes in the horse market, given two months' feeding and sold for double the money to the same men who let them slip past their hands, says the Breeder's Gazette. It is needless to say they are good horses. Their first price looks good, but the profit in feeding them is enormous. It shows what is possible for a man that knows good horses in the rough. Now, no man has such a chance to learn the excellence of any animal as its feeder. The man who raises, feeds and works a horse has the inside track and is in position to know as no other man can possibly guess the good qualities in his horse. If he sells a good horse thin he is dropping easy money out of his very hand.

Early Shearing Recommended.

In general I approve of early shearing, says a successful breeder. A flock that has had good shelter may well be shorn in March. After shearing carefully dip both ewes and lambs. In August the ewes may again be shorn if it is desired to get them to breed early. The cooling off that shearing brings often so invigorates the ewes that they come naturally in heat.

Keeping Bread.

It is said that bread keeps in a wooden box even better than in one of tin, and, while this is interesting, it is not to be supposed that careful housewives will immediately discard their old standbys, the square tin boxes, to take up with the newer one of wood. After all, the tin may be more easily washed and dried and has no pores which may collect the germs. Perhaps the old fashioned way is best.

It is a very good idea, however, to always wrap the loaves of bread in a clean white cloth, whether they be kept in a wooden or tin box. This will keep the bread absolutely fresh, and if the cloth is changed frequently it will be found that the loaves can be kept far longer than when they are placed in the box with nothing but the tin cover over them.

Freshening Black Silk.

Black silk may be very successfully freshened by rubbing it with hot vinegar.

MR. MAC-BETH AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Large Congregations at the Morning and Evening Service-Meetings all This Week

At St. Paul's church yesterday the services were of deep impressiveness. The large auditorium was crowded both morning and evening and in the afternoon the Sunday school and Bible classes had a splendid attendance and much interest was manifested. Meetings were announced to be held every night this week, concluding on Friday. Mr. MacBeth will speak each evening on subjects of special importance and the excellent choir under the direction of Mr. Crane, with Miss Davies as soloist, will lead the service of song. The congregation has taken firm hold of the work and results manifested are highly gratifying to Mr. Pogue, and all who so zealously and earnestly prepared the way for this mission. Yesterday morning and evening at the request of the missioner, Mr. MacBeth, the elders and others passed the cards of confession and promise through the congregation and about eighty professed a desire to become connected with the church in Christian life and work for the first time.

Yesterday Mr. MacBeth spoke in the morning from the text in Matthew 10, where Jesus says:—"Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall I also confess before my Father which is in heaven, but whosoever shall deny me before men, him shall I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." This sounded like a hard saying, but it comes from the loving heart of Jesus and hence was kindly meant. To those whom we love, we speak plainly when we feel it to be for their good. Jesus warns us here against the delusion of thinking that we can be neutral in relation to Him. We are either for or against Him and must make the choice. The speaker took up in detail the reasons given by people for refusing to come into fellowship with Jesus and analyzing them closely, showed their weakness. He appealed to all to make the great decision for Christ.

In the evening Mr. MacBeth took the text Jeremiah 8, 22.: "Is there no physician there? Why not then is the health of my people recovered?" The speaker followed closely the analogy between the ills of the body and the sin-sickness of the soul. The prophet saw an epidemic of sin and asked why it was not stayed. Mr. MacBeth said that sin was swift in its progress contagious and fatal and that Christ was the Great Physician. If men were not cured, it was because they were not, through delusions, co-operating with the Physician and alone they were no match for the miasma of their sinful hearts and surroundings.

At St. Andrew's Church

St. Andrew's church was filled at both services yesterday. In the evening a full male choris led the singing and Mr. Downey gave a beautiful rendition of "My Mother's Prayer."

Rev. Mr. Atkinson took as his text; "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee life." This illustration, the speaker said, was a very natural and very effective one as sleep rendered us unconscious to all around us. There were many people asleep when they should be awake, because they were too lazy and slovenly to arise. Those people missed the beauties and joys of nature. They were dead to the world and all around them. There was also a class of people who were spiritually asleep, he grew dead to the joy and beauty of Christ and His life. There were also people who were indifferent, people who liked to go to church to hear the preacher, but they were indifferent to the message from Christ and were dead to the happiness to be derived from that message. They were in an indifferent slumber. There was also another class who became so engrossed in the work of the church, attending meetings, social functions, etc., that they see only the outside, and neglect the all important part, viz., to love Christ and to live in Him. This class was compared to the sleepers who are narcotics. The narcotics of the spiritual life and worldliness, and covetousness were there. There is no more dangerous thing in the world than narcotics.

Rev. Mr. Atkinson concluded with an appeal to all to shake off the slumber and to come to Christ and live in Him.

Knox Church

Large congregations greeted Dr. Farquharson, of Durham, at the Evangelistic services on Sunday, and in the evening especially the ushers had their hands full in supplying seating accommodation.

The theme of discourse in the evening was "The Sinner in His Struggle with Infinite Love," and the scripture on which it was based was the narrative of Jesus and Judas, from the text, "He then, having received the sop, went immediately out, and it was night."

We never know sin till we see it in the light of God's love, was the opening sentence of a striking and heart-searching message. Only when the heart is awakened with the radiance of God's love is there presented the power that lifts to a new life. The story of Judas is the vision of a soul dragged down by self, yet all the way followed by a love that never tires. This gives the pathos and the power to the narrative. So the speaker followed out the lines of the life battle answering the questions of how such a man ever joined himself to the company of Jesus; how he fell from his high estate, and how love still struggled and never tired. He took the view that Judas was not from the first a conscious hypocrite, though in the good soil there still remained the thorns that choked the word. The story of his fall he held to be the human tale of distrust in God. He was not content with the gifts a Father in his love bestowed, and so he yielded to the cravings of avarice. His ambition craved a higher place than that assigned him, and so he chafed at the restraints, and when reproved, went away to make overtures to the chief priests. His avarice gets a self-justification in the feeling that his ambition had been thwarted. Everything now turns to ruining him and the double life can no longer be hid. He must either confess and repent or go down. It is the universal rule that where there is the double life the baser one is the real heart's expression, and Judas went out into the darkness. But through the darkness love followed him. The parting appeal was one to his conscience, that he might yet turn. He goes out from the company to work his base designs, but love follows him. Heavier and heavier fall the blows on his heart if perchance he might awake. His sin makes him do the basest work. He must betray his Master with a kiss. Did ever the lips seem so hot! At last the money is paid, but the money awakens the fire within. He does not keep it. His tempters become his tormenters. The money is thrown into the inner temple, and he seeks to flee from himself and from his sin, but his pursuer's are swifter than his steps, and away he goes into the darkness, the shadow of love still hovering over him. There has been some questioning as to which finally won, but we are left in the dark. It is not a question as to whether there be a hell. "There may be heaven; there must be hell." The question is, Did Judas repent? He is said to have repented, to have confessed. I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood, but whether it was the repentance of life unto life, or the repentance of death unto death, we are not finally assured.

Dr. Farquharson will speak this evening on "The Old Gospel." A large congregation is expected.

MANY HEARD REV. MR. ATKINSON AT Y.M.C.A.

Yesterday afternoon after Sunday school, Rev. Mr. Atkinson, who is conducting the evangelistic meetings in St. Andrew's church, addressed a meeting of boys and young men in the Y.M.C.A. There was a good attendance and much interest was manifested. The subject of the address was, "The Friendship of Christ." The speaker referred to the way in which boys formed their friendships at school and elsewhere and of the influence these friendships had upon their lives. He then went on to show how Christ had offered to be our friend according to a text taken from John, "Hence forth I call you friends." The speaker appealed to those present to avail themselves of the proffered friendship of Christ and speak to Him often of their joys and sorrows.

THE WINTER MENU.

Add These Recipes to Your Collection of "Favorites."

A pretty garnish for a consomme is the white of hard boiled eggs and sweet red peppers cut into small balls or some other shape.

A favorite dessert in a certain household is the following coffee and pineapple cream: Prepare a pineapple jelly. Decorate the bottom of a mold with almonds and candied pineapples or cherries. Arrange the almonds in circles to simulate the petals of a daisy. In the center of each daisy place a cherry or bit of pineapple. Pour enough of the jelly, before it hardens, over the flower barely to cover it—no more or the decoration will begin to float. Place on ice and let it stand until the jelly sets and the decoration is firmly imbedded in it. Then mask the sides of the mold with more of the jelly and fill with a coffee Bavarian cream. If preferred, the cream and the jelly may be arranged in two layers.

A decorative suggestion for a potato salad is to soak hard boiled eggs, after shelling, in beet juice until they are a deep pink or red. Then slice them and add to a potato salad placed upon a bed of lettuce. The salad is particularly pretty if the lettuce is the russet kind with tints of red in it.

An attractive dessert is a pyramid of various perserved fruits. Place this in the center of a dessert platter and decorate with a border of lady fingers alternated with rosettes of whipped cream. Drain all superfluous juice from the fruit. Two or three preserved pears, as many peaches and plums, a few spoonfuls of berries and cherries make a good combination. The whipped cream may be flavored with maraschino.

Instead of using fresh fruits in a fruit jelly try preserved fruit for variety's sake, with a champagne jelly as a foundation.

Fold Damp Clothes.

Some housekeepers when wash day comes prefer to take down the plain clothes when still a little damp, so as to do away with the necessity of sprinkling before ironing. The starched pieces of course need sprinkling and should be allowed to dry thoroughly.

One clever housewife finds it a great time saver if in taking down the plain clothes from the line they are folded then and there.

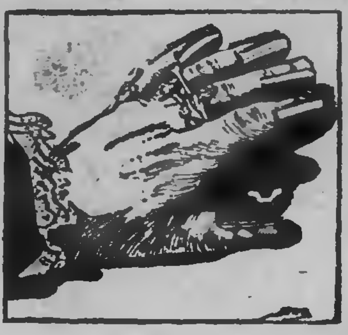
She says that if they are crowded into the basket carelessly there will be innumerable wrinkles that might have been avoided, and so the time spent in ironing will be materially increased.

Then, too, there is a saving of time in not having to handle the clothes a second time in the house to make them ready to iron.

The same housekeeper sees to it that the large pieces are put in the basket first, thereby saving time in sorting.

To Preserve Beauty.

Frenchwomen are known for the care they take of their beauty and the hardships they undergo to preserve it. The latest devices in the beautifying line are a rubber mask, which is tied at night over the chin and throat in order to prevent the appearance of wrinkles, and metal finger clasps, which are worn to diminish the size of the finger tips, causing a tapering of the finger and to give fine shape to the nails.



STEEL CLASP TO PRODUCE TAPERING FINGERS.

A Domestic Problem.

A young housekeeper whose finances permit the luxury of only one maid is undecided whether or not to take back her treasure of last winter. The treasure aforesaid is pretty, young, always looks attractive and gives good service, but her "privileges" have grown almost beyond the bounds of reason. She has by pleading and subterfuge acquired them one by one, and their sum and substance is as follows:

One extra night out each week for a dancing class, posting letters frequently, which takes two hours for a twenty minute round trip; girl callers every afternoon and triweekly kitchen receptions, for which cake odors float upward, although for the family all cake is bought. Her work is perfectly done, but the entertaining below stairs makes a gap in the storeroom, and the noise of even quiet company is apparent. It seems to be a case of comfort versus discipline, and if a happy medium can only be agreed upon the treasure will rule again.

Made in a Bottle.

A very easy way to prepare French salad dressing, especially where a large quantity of it is needed, is by shaking the ingredients together in a rather large, well corked bottle. Put in the oil and vinegar, four times as much of the oil as of the vinegar, and add salt and paprika. If mustard is used add it. Now shake the bottle until the contents are well mixed and form a sort of emulsion. It is most easily done by clasping each end of the bottle with the hands and shaking sideways rather than up and down.

Northumberland and Durham Counties will have an exhibit at the Toronto Horticultural Show.

WAS GOOD YEAR FOR LABOR ACCORDING TO FEDERATION

President Samuel Gompers Opens Annual Convention at Toronto — Hon. Mr. Reaume, Mayor Oliver, and President Glocking Among Speakers.

Toronto, Nov. 9.—Labor's big convention has captured Toronto. Not by conspicuous display of pageantry or violent denunciatory harangues, but rather by the quiet business-like manner in which the delegates have inaugurated their first meeting on Canadian soil. Sir James Whitney, through the medium of Hon. Dr. Reaume, extended the greeting of the Provincial Government, and Mayor Oliver beamed welcome on the labor delegates. In one short day the convention has already won golden opinions by the progress which it has made.

Following the usual preliminaries inside the hall, the addresses of welcome from Toronto and Ontario by the mayor and the representative of Sir James Whitney and the representative of Canadian unionism, President Samuel Gompers, the president of the federation, now under sentence by a United States court to serve a term in prison for contempt of court, opened what is generally conceded as the most important conference in the history of the labor movement in America.

Mayor Oliver, in the course of a trenchant speech, pointed proudly to the fact that the municipality of Toronto paid union wages.

Hon. Dr. Reaume proved an able substitute for Sir James Whitney, his witty remarks delivered with a strong French accent provoking considerable amusement.

President Wm. Glockling of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada hoped that the visit of the labor convention would offset any threatened division of Canadian union forces.

Then arose President Samuel Gompers to reply to the addresses of welcome. He placed his propositions in a nutshell, and delivered his plans for the amelioration of the working classes and the spread of unionism in short, pithy sentences.

But when he concluded his speech, laying stress on the fact that unionists, unlike manufacturers, had nothing to hide, the pent-up enthusiasm of the delegates broke loose. Again and again they cheered the speaker, who seemed overcome with the warmth of his reception.

Opposition was evinced before the credential committee's report was adopted. The committee recommended the unseating of the delegates of the electrical workers, who have come under the ban of the Federation of Labor for refusing to expel workers from local councils.

The opposition, however, was swept aside and the following delegates were unseated: John P. Egan and L. O. Pouchet, Ohio State Federation of Labor; James B. Drake, Birmingham, Alabama, Central Labor Body; Henry H. Betchie, Davenport Central Labor Union; R. G. Stewart, Cedar Rapids, Ohio, Central Labor Union; David Healy, Detroit, Mich., Federation of Labor.

In contrast to this address were the short, business-like speeches of Secretary Morrison and Treasurer Lennon, who submitted their statements for the approval of the sub-committees.

Secretary Frank Morrison presented a report showing that the financial condition of the federation was never better. At the close of this fiscal year $167,393.46 is in the treasury, the highwater mark in the history of the American Federation of Labor. Of the amount on hand, $115,877.14 is in the defence fund for local trade and federal labor unions.

Osborne, and unanimously resolved, "That the board of directors place on record their high appreciation of the zeal and loyalty of and the efficient services rendered by the general manager, the mining engineer, the district mine superintendents, and the mine managers and other officials of the company during the difficult and trying times of the labor trouble, from which the company has just emerged, and that the suitable recognition of such services be left to the executive commttee to be dealt with."

QUEER PROOF OF DOCTRINE

New Orleans, Nov. 9.—J. C. Wilson, formerly of Boston, Mass., a disciple of Mrs. Eddy's Christian Science doctrine, threw himself in front of a trolley car to prove his faith, and the fact that he is still alive convinces him that the strange test has justified his belief. He suffered concussion of the brain and was a mass of bruises. When he recovered consciousness yesterday in the hospital he declared that he was not suffering any pain and said he hoped to be well enough soon to give further demonstration of his faith in the doctrine. He says he contracted tuberculosis and was cured by Christian Science in Denver. Wilson was born 29 years ago in Sherman, Texas.

It would take a team of horses three weeks.

GERMAN INTEREST IN THE DOMINION

London, Nov. 9.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that the German Government is considering the advisability of establishing a new consulate-general at Ottawa, which will be almost ambassadorial in its scope and character. Plans already have been suggested for the erection of a building in which a record and museum of German manufactures and products suitable for the Canadian market might be accommodated.

Subsidy Renewed.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The Department of Trade and Commerce has renewed for one year with the Canadian Pacific its steamship subsidy arrangement for a service between Halifax and St John and London. The company gets a subsidy of $15,000 for a ten-trip service.

THE WOMAN A DEGENERATE

Belleville, Nov. 9. Frances Beaverstock, the woman arrested in Tyendinaga Township on Friday charged with infanticide, will appear before Magistrate Mason next Monday for a preliminary hearing. She is 30 years of age and of four children born, only one is alive, a six-year-old boy, who smokes and chews tobacco like an old man. The woman herself appears to be a degenerate. She admits having given birth to a child last July in the woods, which she buried at once. Her mother says she saw another baby that had apparently been choked to death.

The family have lived in a slovenly way, in a rudely constructed shanty. About ten years ago, the father of the accused served a prison sentence for incest.

PROBABILITIES.

DESPATCHES SAY THE SKEENA RIVER OUTLOOK IS SERIOUS

Indians Are Reported to be Assembling Their Braves and Settlers Have Dug Trenches For Purposes of Defence.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 9.—A special despatch from Hazelton, B.C., says that the trial there of the seven Indian ringleaders in the Skeena River district revolt was opened yesterday, and adjourned pending the arrival of witnesses from the Kispiox Valley.

The natives are sending out runners to the mountains to gather in the fighting men, and meetings are being held in all villages.

The Indians are able to muster fully 500 able-bodied and fully armed men.

Serious trouble is anticipated. Settlers are sending in their families to Hazelton for protection. An armed guard has been placed on the jail to prevent the escape or rescue of the prisoners.

Several trenches were dug yesterday in which guards are posted.

The people of Hazelton are fearful for the safety of ranchers scattered through the country, who may be pounced upon and killed in revenge for Saturday's attack by police. Recently an Anglican missionary was so bounded by Indians that he was forced to make preparations to move out, but before this was accomplished, his house was set afire, and what was not burned was stolen by natives.

The present trouble really originated some two years ago, when, owing partly to the enforcement of the game and fishery laws, the natives were so reduced in their winter supplies of game and dried salmon that they came near to starvation. Afterwards, their discontent was fanned by agitators headed by Chief Joe Capjilano, and they served notice that they claimed the entire Skeena Valley as their domain, and held that all whites were trespassers. Commissioner Stewart went to hear their grievances in September, when they declined to recede from the position that the Canadian or British Government has no jurisdiction over their country, maintaining that title could only rest upon conquest, purchase or passage by treaty, each of which is denied.

The Government decline to seriously consider their preposterous claims, and it was then declared by old residents that the Indians would nurse their grievance until the river froze, when they would have the scattered white inhabitants at their mercy. The Dominion Government was asked to send in a sufficient force of mounted police to prevent trouble, but ridiculed the suggestion. Numerous residents then sent out their women and children for safety's sake.

Subsequently, trouble arose over the railway traversing an ancient Indian burial ground, the natives demanding consolation on a graduated scale of from $100 for a baby interred up to $750 for every chief. The Government ordered the railway company to provide a new cemetery, transfer the bodies with respect and give the tribe $1,000 in a lump for compensation.

Another Version.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 9. C.P.R. press despatches state: The stories telegraphed from here of an expected Indian rising in the Skeena River district are given denial by officials of provincial police, and Indian departments here. In a telegram to Superintendent Hussey of the provincial police, Constable Maitland McDougall, says that following the arrest of six Indians in a raid on Kispiox Village on Saturday morning for stealing railroad stores nothing has happened which could be construed as indicating an outbreak. In a subsequent message he telegraphs "The situation is satisfactory."

Canada's revenue for October was $3,553,766, an increase of $1,084,050.

The loss to the Big Four Railway by the defalcations of C. L. Warriner, local treasurer of the road at Cincinnati, will ultimately amount to about $500,000, according to a statement issued yesterday.

High school pupils in Cleveland object to morning and afternoon sessions, because an afternoon session takes away the chance of schooling from those who must work half the day to earn their education.

The premature explosion of a blast in Victoria, B.C., sent a boulder crashing through a third storey window in the residence of Dr. O. M. Jones, while others struck Contractor J. R. Williams. He may die.

TWO MEN WERE NEARLY LYNCHED

Stanstead, Que., Nov. 9.—William Wilson and Leroy Button, arrested on suspicion of having assaulted the seven-year-old daughter of A. H. Tiffin, were nearly lynched when they were being taken from court after having pleaded not guilty. A mob of over 400 farmers, with a rope and weapons of every description, attacked the constables, and, had it not been for the help rendered by U. S. officials at Rock Island, just across the boundary, there would certainly have been a hanging. Later Button confessed that he and Wilson committed the assault.

PRESERVE THE LAND SAYS PRES. EDIOT

New York, Nov. 9.—Dr. Charles W. Ediot, as president of the National Conservation Association, yesterday issued a statement on the danger of the monopolistic control of the sources of power in this country, which is declared to be urgent. The statement says in part:

"The great coal fields of Alaska, estimated to contain fifteen billion tons, still remain the heritage of the people. But bad as is the general coal land law of the United States, that of Alaska is even worse, for there the Government is absolutely limited to a charge of $10 an acre, which, according to a public statement by the directors of the U. S. Geological Snurvey, is less than one-tenth of the real value of these coal lands.

"There are already about 900 entries in the Alaska coal fields. It is true that the field was recently withdrawn from entry, but the legality of that withdrawal has been questioned."

THIS THEFT HAS PROVED COSTLY

Toronto, Nov. 9.—It developed in the Police Court yesterday that the theft of $3.75 from the G.N.W by George Warring, a messenger boy, may cost the company $10,000. At least his tearing up a cable message that was entrusted to him and pocketing the charges resulted in a loss of $10,000 to a large wholesale house, who were ordering a consignment of goods from England, the price of which has advanced to that extent since then. They may press the telegraph company to make this good.

Warring was sent to jail for sixty days on this charge, and for the theft of a c.o.d. of $13.25 from Routery & Walker, Bay street tailors, in May, 1908.

MONK AT MONTREAL SAYS THE NAVY IS NOT NEEDED

Member For Jacques Cartier Declares That to Decide on Matter Without Referring it to the People Would Be a Flagrant Violation of Trust.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—F. D. Monk, M.P. for Jacques Cartier, and the French Conservative leader, was the guest of honor at a banquet given last night by the electors of Jacques Cartier, at Lachine, and in a very important speech, expressed his views in no uncertain manner in regard to the Government's policy for the construction of a Canadian navy.

Mr. Monk declared at the outset that the Government's policy for the construction of a navy and participation in defence of the Empire was an entirely new departure in Canadian policy, and to decide such a question, without first submitting it to the electors, would be a flagrant violation of our free institutions.

Mr. Monk referred to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attitude on the question at the Colonial Conferences, and the sudden change that had taken place in his views, and also scored the Government for not submitting to the Canadian public the report of the delegates to the recent conference in London.

As to the actual merits of the question, Mr. Monk maintained that, from a financial point of view alone, Canada cannot, at the present moment, undertake to build a navy, that the expense of such an undertaking is quite beyond our resources and our means.

Mr. Monk estimated that the maintainance of a navy would cost $20,000,000 a year. He also maintained that Canada herself needed no navy at the present time, that the program, as far as being of any use to the Mother Country, in order to maintain her naval supremacy, would be useless, and that such an obligation did not exist for Canada, its national obligation as an autonomous and self-guarding country being a duty of defence for our own commonwealth.

THREE STUDENTS GET RUSTICATED

Toronto, Nov. 9.—Prompt and summary justice in the form of rustications and fines has been meted out by the Caput of Toronto University to the five students whom it has succeeded in convicting of participation in the disturbances of Hallowe'en.

While to some the penalty imposed may not seem to be as drastic as might have been expected, it must be borne in mind that rustication is in reality a very severe punishment, and is felt by the students as such, meaning as it does in the case the loss of an entire year of a man's academic course, in addition to the disgrace which goes along with the infliction of the penalty.

BARRED WINDOWS PREVENT ESCAPE

New York, Nov. 9.—Iron barred windows prevented the escape of eight workers from death by fire in Robert Morrison & Son's comb factory on Columbus street, in Brooklyn yesterday.

The eight, while they tugged and tore at the barred windows, were burned to death, and five others were probably fatally injured in the panic.

William Morrison, son of the owner of the plant, also lost his life in the flames while trying to reach the safe and close its doors. His father was among the injured.

There were only forty employes in the factory when the fire broke out, but the spread of the flames in the inflammable comb material was almost instantaneous. Many jumped from the third floor windows and were injured. Those who rushed to the rear found the windows barred and there they met their doom. Nearly all were Italians.

Cook, the Brooklyn explorer, who recently returned to New York from the west is now working on his data for submission at Copenhagen at a "quiet place away from New York," a statement issued last night by his lawyers, says because "Dr. Cook's time was so invaded while in New York and he was under such surveillance."

GOVERNMENT SALARIES ARE ILLEGALLY PAID

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The first volume of the Auditor-General's report is ready for Parliament. Mr. Fraser criticizes both the Senate and the Commons for giving leather trunks to a few officials when the service generally get no such perquisites. He also finds fault with increases in salary in contravention of the act. In the case of the Senate they have been blocked. The Commons had paid them a refund or legalizing legislation is demanded.

A complaint about indemnity being paid to three Senators who did not attend, brought the explanation that they are ill.

TUESDAY, NOV. 9, 1909.

THE GLOBE RAMPANT

The Globe accuses Mr. Roblin of being a traitor in "a nest of traitors" for opposing the "Canadian Navy" scheme, and of wishing to supersede Mr. Borden as leader of the party. It cites the famous parliamentary resolution of last March, which carried without the expressed disapproval of any member of the House.

Notwithstanding the Globe's tirade it will be seen that those who oppose the absurd "Canadian Navy" scheme are not in any way bound by that resolution, which was as follows:—

"This House fully recognizes the duty of the people of Canada, as they increase in number and wealth, to assume in larger measure the responsibilities of national defence.

"The House is of the opinion that under the present constitutional relations between the mother country and the self-governing dominions the payment of regular and periodical contributions to the Imperial Treasury for naval and military purposes would not, so far as Canada is concerned, be the most satisfactory solution of the question of defence.

"The House will cordially approve of any necessary expenditure designed to promote the speedy organization of a Canadian naval service, in co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy, along lines suggested by the Admiralty at the last Imperial Conference, and in full sympathy with the view that the naval supremacy of Britain is essential to the security of commerce, the safety of the empire, and the peace of the world.

"The House expresses its firm conviction that whenever the need arises the Canadian people will be found ready and willing to make any sacrifice that is required to give to the Imperial authorities the most loyal and hearty co-operation in every movement for the maintenance of the integrity and the honor of the Empire."

This resolution approved of taking steps regarding a "naval service." To accuse Conservatives of being belated in their objections is to ignore the fact that Liberals, also, in large numbers, are opposing the Laurier navy. In fact Canada is divided, but not politically in this matter.

However, embarking upon the suggested navy scheme seems to us little less than criminal, at present, and altogether unnecessary. Lord Northcliffe, who is travelling through Canada, ridicules the "Canadian Navy" idea, as he does the Intercolonial Railway. Is he a traitor to anything or anybody? It is a bad cause that carries abuse with it.

FRENCH-CANADIAN ACTIVITY

The sensational character of the French-Canadian Congress shortly to assemble at Ottawa is apparent without the testimony of the French-Canadian journals. The object of all this activity is to demand recognition of the "right" to use French in the schools of Ontario. Just as our teachers and pupils use their mother-tongue here, when the number of French-Canadians shall at all warrant it. In short the struggle between the races has begun in earnest, for the possession of Canada. All that has occurred the past is but child's play in comparison with what is now contemplated in this invasion of Ontario. An absolute equality of the French and British language over all Canada means that the British did not win Canada for the British Crown, but that the battle for supremacy was drawn. It means continued strife and hatred and useless expense. No one objects to the French-Canadian's speaking what he likes, believing what he chooses and dreaming as his fancy prompts him, in his own home, but why should he ask British-Canada to ignore the fact this is a British country as he does when he proclaims his SEPARATENESS IN PUBLIC AS WELL AS IN PRIVATE LIFE. Is this as much a French country as a British? Are the rights of the different races equal? Has Britain no constitutional rights as the winner (we will not say conqueror) of this country?

It would be better to divide this country in two than to perpetuate this absurd racial animosity. Let us be one people not two. British-Canadians invite unity. What can be the object of our compatriots in declining? It is idle to ignore the fact that there is bitterness between French and Irish Roman Catholics also. The bitterness has reached an acute stage. Perhaps there is such a thing as racial insanity.

WHAT AILS THE CHURCH?

The Montreal Witness.

What is the matter with the churches? is the question that was asked a number of prominent clergymen in the United States by the editor of the "Delineator." The Rev. Dr. Strong contributed some facts giving warrant for the question. The Protestant churches in the United States had certainly gained on the population during the past century. From including, in 1800, about a fourteenth of the population, they included in 1900 about a quarter of it. This is a very good showing till it is analyzed, when it is found that most of the gain was in the first half of the last century, and that the gain of the church membership on the general population continually diminished during the second half, till it reached the vanishing point at 1900, and since then the church has, in proportion to the population, been actually losing ground. Some of the replies simply lament the lack of Pentecostal life in the Church and the introduction of false teaching, which causes unbelief; but most of the replies regard the falling off as due to a state of transition for which the churches do not find themselves equipped. The work of Christianity is, they say, going on outside of the churches, which, though they have been the inspiration of all these humanitarian methods, are, owing to the conservatism of religious ways, failing to take the lead in the religious movements of the time. On this subject we quote to-day the words of the Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of the Baptist Temple in Philadelphia. Dr. Aked, of New York, another leader among the Baptists, sees that one of the needs of the day is a different ministry. Instead of the more strenuous occasion calling forth stronger men, there is complaint everywhere that there are fewer men than ever entering the ministry. There was a time when it was easier to be a preacher. The doctrines of religion were fixed. They were easily learned and, given adequate fervor, easily recited. The machinery of the Church was also established and simple, and an appeal to usage practically settled questions of practice. All this has changed. A minister now needs to be a master in questions of the right and wrong in all the relations of life; he needs to be leader who can lead in everything that Christian faithfulness demands of his people. Yet, on the average, we do not pay a minister, with all the social claims he has to meet, to say nothing of the leadership we look for, and which is at such a premium in secular life, the wages of the foreman of a shop. We give Dr. Aked's reply in full. Perhaps strongest and most succinct of all the replies, one which would probably be adopted without change by most of the Christian contributors, and that of Rabbi Hirsch, of Chicago, which we also give in full."

The churches are now doing all they can to reach up to the times. The clergy are everywhere the most active of the forces for the world's good. Men and women have grown utterly tired of theology. It has so little to do with the practice of what it preaches (indirectly) that "the people" have no patience with it. There was a time not long gone by, when churches were being fiercely attacked for being the hot-beds of hypocrisy.

The clergy were condemned as sycophants, as begging for the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table. The attack was withdrawn. At any rate it resulted in a different state of things. The clergy are no longer the guileless innocents they used to be. They are, now, great vital forces in the make-up of the world. They believe in practical Christianity, in state-wide Christianity. Pragmatical religion has succeeded theory. In our opinion very little "ails" the churches, if by "the churches" is meant the clergy. It is now up to "the people."

EDITORIAL NOTES

It cannot be charged against the Examiner that it is endeavoring to help on the local or national ship of state by blowing on the sails or otherwise showing its colours. It disguises its "discreetness" by trenchant attacks on stray oyster cans or a series of platitudes on "Cauld Kale Het Up Again."

Hogs.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 6 were 2625 cattle, 2350 sheep and lambs, 2650 hogs and 1100 calves. The offerings for local consumption this morning consisted of 2700 cattle, 1625 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 475 calves.

A weak feeling prevailed in the market, and prices since this day week show a decline of fully ¼c to ½c per lb. for cattle, which is attributed to the heavy supplies of northwest ranch stock that came forward at the latter end of last week and the very large run again to-day, coupled with the wet and unfavorable weather for keeping beef. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, but even at the above reduction in prices they did not show a disposition to operate freely, as the impression was that still lower prices would be in order before the day was out, if holders wanted to make a clearance. As it was, drovers and dealers complained very much about the prices ruling, and they stated that considerable money would be lost them. There was some demand for Ottawa and Quebec account, and several carloads were bought for shipment to these points. Choice steers sold at 4¾c to 5c; good at 4c to 4½c; fair at 3½c to 3¾c, medium at 3c to 3¼c; canning bulls at 2¼c to 3c, and cows at 1¼c to 1¾c per lb.

There was little or no demand for cattle for export account, owing to the fact that cable advices received from Liverpool stated that the weather was mild and very slow, which created a weaker feeling in the market, and prices for Americans and Canadians since this day week, show a decline of ½c; cows and heifers ½c to 1c, and ranchers 1c to 1½c per lb.

There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, prices being steady on account of smaller offerings, and a continued good local demand for the same; consequently, an active trade was done in these lines. Sheep sold at 3½c to 3¾c, and lambs at 5½c to 6c per lb.

Supplies of calves were small, for which the demand continues good, and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

An easier feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices ruled about 10c per 100 lbs. lower than this day week. The supply was not excessive, and the demand was only fair, as packers in some cases had fair stocks on hand. Sales of selected from west of Toronto were made at $8.65 to $8.75, and from east of Toronto at $8.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

REPORT OF INSTRUCTOR WARD FOR SEASON 1909

Below is the complete report of Dairy Instructor R. A. Ward for the Peterborough district for 1909, presented at the dairy meeting at Peterborough on Wednesday, Nov. 3rd;

Gentlemen, It is with pleasure that I make this report of my eleventh season's work in Peterborough section, as Dairy Instructor and Sanitary Inspector.

It is gratifying to me to look back over these years, and be able to note the change and improvements that have been made.

Improvement has been more marked for the last few years under our new laws and system of instruction.

A number of factors have contributed no doubt to these improvements, but one I wish to make special mention of is these meetings held in connection with the factory business meetings at the close of the season, and I am sure we all appreciate the assistance we have had from the Governments both at Toronto and Ottawa.

I have found the officers, patrons, owners and makers, almost without exception ready to co-operate with me in bringing about the necessary improvements, which have made the work more pleasant for me, and the success of it greater, more permanent and lasting.

The dairymen of Peterboro section I know must be well pleased with the results of the past season's operations.

A good demand for their product at a very uniform good price, coupled with a good supply of milk up to the closing day of the season.

I have had under my charge this season 36 cheese factories and one creamery and am very pleased to be able to state as a whole the milk has reached the factories this season in better condition than ever before.

I think it is up to us as instructors and makers to sit up and do some good hard thinking, for the thought has been forced on my mind for the last two seasons that the patrons as a whole were making more improvement than we were as a whole.

We cannot sit down and rest on past laurels won.

The streamer on the vat at the factory is a good indicator of the general condition of the milk.

The less sediment, dirt, and hard cream we find on it, the better the results in the manufacture.

The old rusty cans are nearly all discarded and the very few that are left should be.

Do not use rusty tinware of any kind in storing or handling milk.

To every patron of every cheese factory and creamery let me say, make provision for cooling, and the proper storing of milk and cream for the season of 1910.

I would say to the patrons of every cheese factory meet the owners of them on the question fo expense, and have cool airing rooms installed.

The value of holding cheese at a cool temperature has so well proven that I need say no more.

The aim of the producer should be to produce a first class article at the least cost possible.

I think it was H. H. Dean, B.S.A., who said Breed, Feed and Weed. There is probably more in this than we see at first glance.

Good cows, liberally fed: properly cared for, and then if they do not show right performance at the pail weed them out.

I have noted and have been pleased to see more corn growing this year than usual.

With silos and alfalfa hay the cost of feed should be materially lessened.

For weeding there is nothing better than weighing and testing the individual cow, in fact the only thing; so I would advise to make use of the cow testing associations that have been placed within the reach of all.

Your cheese factories on the whole are very well equipped and managed, and kept quite clean and sanitary, but there should be a determined effort made to exclude the flies.

There is more trouble in the surroundings at the whey tanks than from any other cause.

Let me suggest that the tanks be kept clean and cement platforms installed connected with underground drains for loading the whey on.

Every cheese factory, to my mind, should be equipped with alkali test curd or fermentation test lactometer and babcock test, and all milk paid for by butter fat test.

In my group of 36 factories there are 14 that pay by B. F. test.

The make and the quality of the cheese on the whole for the season has been very good.

Probably the greatest mistake made in the manufacture was in the fore part of the season by not having the curd sufficiently firm in the whey resulting in dim color, short sandy texture, weak body, and not as close as they should be.

I believe 90 per cent of the faults in manufacture would be traceable to this one source.

We are liable to run into these conditions every year under certain conditions of weather and feed but this year it seemed to be more pronounced than usual.

Let me say to the makers, keep close watch of curd while in whey, and if properly firmed when you have right amount of acid for removal, the quality of your cheese is pretty well assured.

I cannot close this paper without a word on the starter question.

I would like to see, and think that every maker should attend a dairy school, and if they did I do not think they would use ordinary sour milk as a starter, and take chances of all the wrong fermentations it may contain.

I most strongly advise that every factory be equipped for carrying a pasteurized starter prepared from a pure culture and then used intelligently and in moderation.

I have a few makers, but am pleased to tell you that they are very few, that are doing their patrons serious harm by the too free use of sour milk.

I hope and trust that there will be greater effort put forth by all next season than ever before, for the uplifting and placing of this great industry, dairying, on sure and right footing where it rightfully belongs on account of its importance in the agricultural industry of this country.

BURNED TO DEATH

Terrible Fate of Woman and Five Children at Warroad on the C.N.R.

Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 9.—A terrible tragedy occurred at Warroad on the Canadian Northern, east of here. Nelson Jensen was lighting a stove with gasoline when it exploded and the house was soon in flames. The rest of the family were in bed. Two daughters jumped from the window and escaped. Mrs. Jensen and five children were burned to death, one a week old baby.

"RED CROSS" TITLE USED ILLEGALLY

As the result of a discovery made yesterday by the Provincial Secretary's Department, the use of the words "Red Cross" in drug stores, on medicines and in other ways will be prohibited, and all kinds of complications may follow. Legal action may have to be taken. It was learned that it is illegal to use the words "Red Cross" unless they are used by the official Red Cross Society.

The discovery was made when the Cobalt Hospital asked permission to be known as the Red Cross Hospital of Cobalt. Officials of the Department, in looking up the law on the case, discovered that under the Treaty of Geneva, and subsequently an Act of the Dominion Parliament, the title Red Cross cannot be used at all, except by the official Red Cross Society.

There are scores of drug stores and medicine firms using the title Red Cross, and an interesting situation may arise as a result of the discovery.

SHOOTING AT THE ARMOURIES

A. and B. Company Members Make Good Scores

The 57th Regiment commenced musketry practice in the shooting gallery at the armories last night, gallery ammunition being used. The evening was assigned to A and B companies, and there was a fine turnout of the members. The shooting was above the average, several fine scores being made. Captains Hounsell and Mills were the officers in charge. C and D companies will shoot to-night and a large turnout is requested. Captains Watt and Cluxton will be the officers in charge.

HARD TO SECURE GOOD LOCATION

Few Rentable Places in Central Part of the City.

To secure a good business stand in Peterborough at the present time is a very difficult matter. This is especially true as regards the central part of the city, where practically every foot of the store space is being utilized. A gentleman informed the Review to-day that he has been unable to secure premises for a store in the centre part of the city although he has been trying to secure a location for nearly two weeks.

SPORTING NEWS

THE TURK BROUGHT OUT TO BEAT GOTCH WAS THROWN

In Slow Bout at Sohmer Park—Eberle, the German, Got One Fall on Sultan's Man and Then Quit—The Crowd's Disapproval.

Special to The Review.

Sohmer Park, Montreal, Nov. 9.—Stormy scenes marked the debut of the wrestlers brought over from Turkey by George Kennedy when they took the mat at Sohmer Park last night for their first matches on American soil. The main bout of the evening brought together the heavier of the two Turks, Pengal, and Eberle, a 265-pound German. After a long dispute and some riotous scenes, Eberle won the first fall in 57 minutes, and then refused to go on and finish out the match. He demanded police protection from the wrestling mat to the dressing rooms, and when he got there put on his street clothes and made a hasty exit from the park.

Chaakir, the smaller man of the new wrestlers, made his debut under more favorable circumstances. After Billy Saxon, the Welsh lightweight, had disposed of Bob Sommerville, the Englishman, in a fast go marked by very clever wrestling, Chaakir took the mat with Carl Abs, the German. Abs outweighed the wrestler from the Balkans slightly, the latter weighing in the neighborhood of 180, but it was Chaakir all the way through a short go. He won the first fall in four minutes and the second in two. He is a fast, gingery wrestler, and made a good hit with the crowd from the start.

The main bout between Pengal and big Eberle followed. It proved dull sport for the crowd until near the end. Eberle, over thirty pounds the heavier played a defensive game, stretching himself out flat on the mat, offering a resistance that Pengal could not solve. The Turk, in contrast to Chaakir, appeared to be in poor shape physically. He lacked the snap and ginger Chaakir had shown, and although he was three-quarters of the time behind Eberle, he did not show what had been expected of him. He lacked speed except in brief flashes. For minutes at a time the pair lay on the mat, with Pengal on top, but Eberle doing nothing but stretching out flat and Pengal doing little more in offense. The spectators grew restless, and were not backward in handing out criticisms to the wrestlers.

The climax of the bout came after the pair had been on the mat over 50 minutes without either gaining a fall. Dr. Gadbois, the referee, had had trouble with Eberle whenever the wrestlers went outside the canvas. Eberle thought that he was given the worst of the decisions. Once when the Turk landed close to the footlights, outside the ropes, in a mix-up with the German, Dr. Gadbois gave the Turk the top position when they were brought back to the centre. The crowd hooted the decision, but Dr. Gadbois maintained, with some justice, that when they left the canvas the Turk had the hold and so was entitled to the upper position, however he landed.

At the far side of the mat the wrestlers finally went outside the canvas once more. Eberle secured a wicked toe hold on the Turk when the pair were being told to get back to the centre. He refused to let go and Dr. Gadbois tried to pull him off. The German then grabbed Dr. Gadbois by one leg. The referee shook himself free and administered a couple of kicks to the German in his effort to get them to break.

Eberle, when he got up at first was for leaving the mat altogether. He appeared likely to do it until George Kennedy, the local promoter, stepped in. Kennedy talked to the German quietly and then, when he would not listen to reason, pushed him bodily into the ring. Eberle claimed that he had been kicked in the ribs, but he did not shew any outward signs of being in distress. He tried to execute a flank movement from the far corner of the ring over the rear stage seats in his effort to get to his dressing room, but Kennedy was over the chairs in a flash, faced the German again and by threat and force more than by persuasion, got him back on the mat.

The pair started off again amid considerable excitement among the crowd. Five minutes later the wrestling ended. Pengal, who had been on top most of the time, was badly caught in a roll, half-Nelsoned and turned over on his shoulders. The time was 57 minutes.

Eberle, instead of making for the dressing rooms, advanced to the front of the stage. There he stood arguing with a policeman drawn below for a long time before the policeman and the crowd in front finally gathered that he wanted police protection to his dressing room. Three of the blue coats then jumped on the stage and to the amusement of the crowd the giant was escorted to his quarters in the rear of the stage.

As the crowd settled down after the usual intermission to wait for the wrestlers, Dr. Gabois appeared and announced that Eberle would not continue. At the same moment a shout from the rear of the hall attracted the crowd's attention, and Eberle was seen making for the exit by the main door.

To finish up the evening's sport, Chaakir was brought out for an exhibition with Pengal. Pengal won the fall after some good wrestling in 17 minutes. Chaakir made a good impression by the speed and snap of his work, and it looks as if he and Beell will put up a fine match. He was however, too small for big Pengal.

George Kennedy was not disappointed over Pengal's failure against Eberle. The big fellow, he says, was very ill all the long trip from Constantinople, twenty-five days, and for the last ten days he had been very dejected and listless. Kennedy is confident that after a rest and some work on the mat he will surprise those who found him disappointing last night.

THE VILLAGE BURGLAR

Under the spreading gooseberry bush
The village burglar lies.
The burglar, a crafty man is he,
With whiskers on his eyes,
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Keep off the little flies.

He goes on Sunday to the church
To hear the parson about,
He puts a shilling in the bag,
And takes a sovereign out.
And when he reaches home again,
He smiles without a doubt.

And going home, one wintry night,
He sees an open door;
An overcoat hangs in the hall,
And he creeps along the floor;
A moment later out he comes,
And the deed is o'er.

However, a policeman, passing along,
With measured beat and slow,
Has seen the burglar's little game,
And quickly lets him know,
And he takes him to the prison cell,
When the evening sun is low.

Boozing, borrowing, burglarizing.

Have told an awful tale,
And now at leisure he repents,
With many a mournful wail.
Something attempted, something done,
He earned six months in jail.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

For the past year the Review has been urging upon the City Council and the citizens generally a greater degree of attention to the "future" of Peterborough. The city is destitute of a comprehensive power and industrial policy. There seems to be some effort, but little success in that direction. One local interest appears to conflict with another to the extent that we are getting neither industries nor railways. The consequence is apparent. The usual rate of building has outstripped the needs of the city. The meeting to-night in the Collegiate Institute hall is open to all taxpayers. Anybody with a good suggestion is welcome. If Peterborough does not succeed in adopting and developing a "policy" it will be a serious matter for all concerned. It must strike the thoughtful citizen as odd that we have no plan for power, no policy for the acquisition of the C.N.R. or the Georgian Bay railway, or for any new lines that might be suggested. Have those who have gone before left no successors? It is only by urging and by energy, WITH A SINGLE EYE TO THE CITY'S INTERESTS that the future of the city can be assured. Few are aware of the recent adoption of plans all along the lake shore for the use of power and the development of municipalities. We are in great danger of being left behind.

LAKEFIELD TO HAVE A BIG INDUSTRY.

The Siemon Company, Limited, with a capital of $1,000,000, has been formed under the laws of the Province of Ontario, to take over as going concerns the business of three well-known successful lumber manufacturers, and to acquire very valuable timber limits. The businesses and plants referred to are the Lillicrap-Tate Lumber Company mills at Lakefield, the Geo. E. Niebergall mills at Wiarton, the Geo. E. Niebergall & Son mill and Veneer Plant at Parry Sound a timber limit of 3,588 acres in British Columbia, and a block of $100,000 preference shares of Siemon Bros., Limited, manufacturers of Hardwood Flooring at Wiarton. The new company propose erecting a large factory in connection with the Lillicrap-Tate Co's. saw mill for the purpose of manufacturing hardwood flooring, furniture, etc., for the eastern market. The demand for hardwood flooring is greater than the supply and orders can be contracted for the entire output of the company for a year ahead. Large tracts of hardwood timber have been secured in the back country by the company, so that an ample supply is assured for a great many years. The new factory will mean a great deal to Lakefield, as it will be in operation the entire year, and will give employment to a great many hands. Messrs J. F. Lillicrap and E. R. Tate have been elected on the board of directors. J. C. Siemon, of Toronto, is President, and W. R. Tudhope, of Toronto, is Vice-President of the new Company.—Lakefield News.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

It is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

NO SMALLPOX IN CITY AND SCARLET FEVER TENT REMOVED

M. H. O. Reported to Board of Health—Considerable Business Considered—How Would You Like to be the Iceman?

The Board of Health had quite a number of matters to consider at their regular meeting this morning. The members of the Board present were:—Dr. Burnham, Chairman; Mayor Rush and Messrs. Murty and Edgar.

The minutes of the last meeting were adopted as read.

A letter was read by City Treasurer Adams re the amount overpaid on account of S. Mitchell.—Received.

The milk report for September was received.

A letter from O'Connell & Gordon was read re a claim of Louis LeBar for rent, and of Mrs LeBar for furniture destroyed in the house after she had smallpox. A communication from E. H. D. Hall on the same claim was also read.

Edward Green asked that the Board extend the time for him to connect Nos. 322 and 332 Water street with the sewer.—Received.

On motion of Mr. Murty and the Mayor the claims of Louis LeBar and Mrs. LeBar were left in the hands of the Medical Health Officer with power to act.

It was carried, on motion of Messrs. Murty and Edgar, that several accounts presented the Board be paid, and that the account of Mann & Co. for $283.83 be paid when certified by the Sanitary Inspector.

Messrs. McKee and Weir were heard in regard to the need of a sewer on Donegal street, from Brock street north to the creek. The request was granted on motion of Messrs. Edgar and Murty.

The Board concurred in the view of the Medical Health Officer that it would be well to have all doctors report all cases of typhoid fever, and the secretary was instructed to notify the physicians of the city that all cases of typhoid fever must be reported in accordance with the Public Health Act.

The M.H.O. reported that there was no smallpox in the city and that the scarlet fever hospital tent had been taken down, although there were still some cases of scarlet fever. There had been forty cases of smallpox.

Mr. Edgar thought that on account of the amount of sewage going into the Little Lake that the ice firms should not be allowed to take ice out of the lake. It was stated that ice had been tested and found to be pure, although the water wasn't. The cause of the sliminess on the logs it was explained was due to the discharge of oil and refuse from the gas works. Canoes and boats were also discolored and dirtied by this discharge.

Mr. Edgar thought a resolution should be passed prohibiting the sale of ice from the lake. Dr. MacPherson thought the ice was all right for cooling purposes, but not for other purposes.

On motion of Messrs. Edgar and Murty, it was decided to leave the matter regarding the ice and discharge from the gas works in the hand of the M.H.O. to report at the next meeting of the Board.

GAGLIORDI ALLOWED OFF ON SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Foreman, Whom It Was Alleged the Italian Attempted to Stab, Could Not Say Positively That His Assailant Had a Knife in His Hand at the Time.

Antonia Gagliordi, the Italian who was arrested Tuesday night at the new waterworks dam, where it was alleged he attempted to stab a foreman, was given a hearing before Magistrate Edmison at the County Police Court yesterday afternoon on the evidence given. His Worship entered a conviction of common assault, but allowed the Italian to go on suspended sentence on his payment of the costs. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused.

Peter Kavanagh, the foreman, under whom the Italian was working at the time, testified that he was on duty at the dam on Tuesday night. He instructed Gagliordi to quit work about 9.30 o'clock, but he refused, stating that he (Kavanagh) was not his boss, as it was Morrison who sent him there. Witness said the Italian rushed at him and struck him several times. He drew something from his pocket, but witness couldn't say positively that it was a knife.

DEATH OF AN AGED RESIDENT OF MADOC

Madoc people and others who now reside in Peterborough will read with interest the following account of the death of James Whytock, sr., taken from last week's North Hastings Review published at Madoc;—

After a brave effort against the "grim reaper" for several weeks, death yesterday morning claimed one of Madoc's sturdiest and oldest citizens, in the person of James Whytock, sr., in the 77th year of his age. He had been in declining health for the past year or two, and a complication of severe stomach troubles during the past few weeks hastened the end. Only his wonderful vitality and bodily strength kept him alive for many days past, but it had been his boast that he had never been ill a day in his life.

Mr. Whytock was a rugged representative of that forceful race that has helped to maintain British supremacy and dominates trade and commerce throughout the world. He was born at Barnhill, Perthshire, in Scotland, June 20th, 1833, son of John and Margaret Whytock, and came to Canada at an early age, settling eventually in Madoc in the early sixties. He married Miss Miller, who survives him. From small beginnings his business grew to one of the most extensive in the County of Hastings. He had a wonderful mind for business details, and could work out problems in his head, easier than many could with pencil and paper.

He served that village in a public capacity faithfully and well for many years, first as councillor and afterwards as reeve and member of the County Council. He was never averse to a "fight" in municipal politics, and many opponents succumbed to his popularity at the polls.

Surviving him are his widow and grown-up family of 11 children, James, jr., Charles and Walter, of Madoc, and David, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Miller, of Toronto; Mrs. Shrigley, of Peterborough; Mrs. Fox, of Prince Edward County; Mrs. Alex. MacGregor, Mrs. W. J. Hill, Miss Martha and Mrs. H. Connor, Marmora.

The funeral service was held in St. Peter's Presbyterian church on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, and were conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. S. Graham. The remains were carried to the grave by the six sons-in-law of the deceased.

LADIES' DIVISION OF AMBULANCE CLASS

There will be a meeting of the Ladies' division of the St. John's Ambulance class, at St. John's, in the usual place and at the usual hour eight o'clock, to-morrow evening, Wednesday. A large attendance is desired as a new subject will be presented at this meeting.

Cornelius Blomfield was sentenced at London to two years for bigamy.

Strong Help For Weak Kidneys

"Fruit-a-tives" Is the Best Kidney Medicine in the World.

If people only realized the danger of Weak Kidneys, and the value of "Fruit-a-tives", there would be practically no Kidney Disease in Canada.

When the kidneys become congested (too full of blood) or strained from overwork, they can quickly be made well and strong again by taking a box or two of "Fruit-a-tives".

Pain in the back, frequent headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, coated tongue, constant desire to urinate—these are the common symptoms of congestion of the kidneys.

The only possible way to relieve this congestion, is to force the bowels and skin to rid the system of more waste matter and thus allow the inflamed kidneys to rest and grow strong again.

"Fruit-a-tives", being fruit juices, intensified, soothes and stimulates the kidneys, and at the same time rouses the bowels and skin to healthy action.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their prompt action on bowels and skin, almost instantly relieves the intense pain in back and promptly takes away every trace of Kidney Disease.

If you are suffering with your kidneys, begin at once to take "Fruit-a-tives" and you will quickly realize the value of these tablets.

At dealers—50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c—or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BREAKFAST.

It Should Be a Substantial Meal, Says a Physician.

It is customary to make the first meal of the day slightly the lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before or to insufficient exercise the preceding day and is no indication that the body really requires less food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any other meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

Another popular delusion in regard to the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that widespread subterfuge, the "continental breakfast," consisting of a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single roll. This is a very pretty breakfast as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far, and the sole basis for its adoption on the continent is that it is only intended as a temporary tide-over until the real breakfast of meat, eggs, fish, etc., which is taken at about 10 or 11 o'clock, like a very early luncheon. If you haven't got a good appetite for breakfast make it your business to go and get one instead of allowing yourself to be blinded in this morbid state of affairs and deciding that all you really need is a cup of coffee and a roll or an orange.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Woman's Home Companion.

ZAM-BUK CURED HER BABY

Mothers will find the following statement of more than passing interest, showing, as it does, how Zam-Buk ends the skin-diseases of children, even when ordinary remedies have completely failed. Mrs. C. W. Bowerbank, of 129 Harden Avenue, Toronto, says:—

"Not long ago my baby's face broke out in an eruption. The spots would crack and be very irritating and sore. At other times they itched fearfully, and caused the child to scratch and rub, thus making the sores very inflamed and painful. I tried all sorts of ointments and salves, but they somehow did not seem able to remove the trouble. Zam-Buk proved very different, and a few applications gave the child relief. The sores are now healed completely.

"Since that time my little daughter has had occasion to use Zam-Buk for skin trouble. She broke out in blotches on her hands and arms, and in her case also Zam-Buk affected a cure.

"We now keep Zam-Buk handy as a household balm, and do not intend to be without it.

"Not only for skin diseases, but for cuts, burns and bruises, I find it a fine remedy. The other day I burned my hand badly. An application of Zam-Buk seemed to take the fire out of it at once, and it soon healed. In the course of my experience I have tried pretty nearly all the salves and ointments obtainable, but there is nothing to come near Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a sure cure for pimples and eruptions, eczema, ring-worm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, poisoned wounds, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and Stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against cheap and harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

There would be none to see.

Skulking, throat swollen with fear, heart beating like a snare drum, Kirkwood took his chance. Buttoning his overcoat collar up to his chin and cursing the fact that his hat must stand out like a chimney pot on a detached house, he sped on tiptoe down the cobbled way and close beneath the house walls of Quadrant mews; but, halfway in, he stopped, confounded by an unforeseen difficulty. How was he to identify the narrow entry of No. 9, whose counterparts doubtless communicated with the mews from every residence on four sides of the city block?

He almost lost his head when he realized that escape was already cut off by the way he had come. Some one or, rather, some two men were entering the alley. He could hear the tramping and shuffle of clumsy feet and voices that muttered indistinctly. One seemed to trip over something and cursed. The other laughed. The voices grew more loud. They were coming his way. He dared no longer vacilate. He dived into the nearest black hole of a passageway and in sheer desperation flung himself, key in hand, against the door at the end. Mark how his luck served him who had forsworn her! He found a keyhole and inserted the key. It turned. So did the knob. The door gave inward. He fell in with it, slammed it, shot the bolts and, panting, leaned against its panels, in a pit of everlasting night, but saved—for the time being, at all events.

CHAPTER X.

INDOORS Kirkwood faced unhappily the enigma of fortuity, wondering if this by any possibility were No. 9.

The key had fitted, the bolts had been drawn on the inside, and, while the key had been one of ordinary pattern and would no doubt have proved effectual with any one of a hundred common locks, the finger of probability seemed to indicate that his luck had brought him back to No. 9.

In spite of all this, he was sensible of little confidence. Though this were truly No. 9, his freedom still lay on the knees of the gods; his very life, belike, was poised, tottering on a pinnacle of chance.

In the end, taking heart of desperation, he stooped and removed his shoes, a precaution which later appealed to his sense of the ridiculous in view of the racket he had raised in entering, but which at the moment seemed most natural and in accordance with common sense. Then, rising, he held his breath, staring and listening. About him the pitch darkness was punctuated with fading points of fire, and in his ears was a noise of strange whisperings.

He went forward gingerly, feeling his way like a blind man on strange ground. Ere long he stumbled over a doorsill and found that the walls of the passage had fallen away. He had entered a room, a black cavern of indeterminate dimensions. Thence, progressing over complaining floors through what may have been the servants' hall, a large room with a table in the middle and a number of promiscuous chairs (witness his tortured shins), he finally blundered into the basement hallway.

By now a little calmer, he felt assured that this was really No. 9 Frognall street and a little happier about it all, though not even momentarily forgetful of the potential police and night watchman. However, he mounted the steps to the ground floor without adventure and found himself at last in the same dim and ghostly hall which he had entered some six hours before. The mockery of dusk admitted by the fanlight was just strong enough to enable him to identify the general lay of the land and arrangement of furniture.

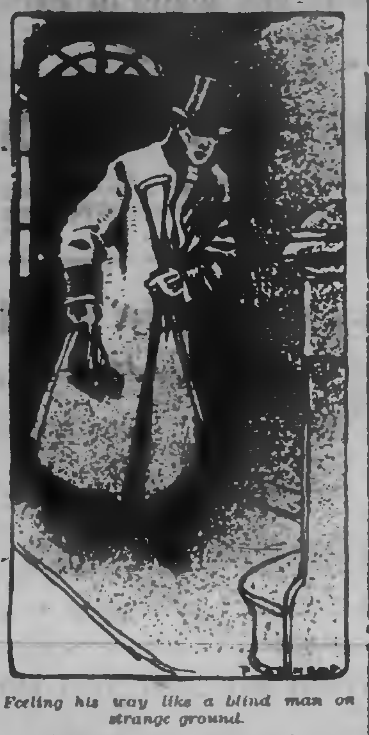
More confidently with each uncontested step he continued his quest. Elation was stirring his spirit when he gained the first floor and moved toward the foot of the second flight; approaching the spot whereat he was to begin the search for the missing purse. The knowledge that he lacked means of obtaining illumination deterred him nothing. He had some hope of finding matches in one of the adjacent rooms, but, failing that, was prepared to ascend the stairs on all fours, feeling every inch of their surface if it took hours.

And thus it fell out that, at the instant he was thinking it time to begin to crawl and hunt, his stockinged feet came into contact with something heavy, yielding, warm—something that moved, moaned and caused his hair to bristle and his flesh to creep.

We will make allowances for him. All along he had gone on the assumption that his antagonist of the dark stairway would have recovered and made off with all expedition in the course of ten or twenty minutes at most from the time of his accident. To find him still there was something entirely outside of Kirkwood's reckoning. He would as soon have thought to encounter, say, Calendar—would have preferred the latter, indeed.

"Poor devil!" murmured the young man. "He must be in a pretty bad way for sure!" He knelt, compassion gentling his heart, and put one hand to the insentient face. A warm sweat moistened his fingers. His palm was fanned by steady respiration.

Immeasurably perplexed, the American rose, slipped on his shoes and buttoned them, thinking hard the while. What ought he to do? Obviously flight suggested itself—incontinent flight, anticipating the man's recovery. On the other hand, indubitably the latter had sustained such injury that consciousness, when it came to him, would hardly be re-enforced by much aggressive power. Moreover, it was to be remembered that the one was in that house with quite as much warrant as the other unless Kirkwood had drawn a rash inference from the incident of the ragged sentry. The two of them were mutual if antagonistic trespassers. Neither would dare bring about the arrest of the other. And then—and this was not the least consideration to influence Kirkwood—perhaps the fellow would die if he got no attention.



Feeling his way like a blind man on strange ground.

Light upon the subject, actual as well as figurative, seemed to be the first essential. His mind composed, Kirkwood set himself in search of it. The floor he was on, however, afforded him no assistance.

After some momentary hesitation he went upstairs, his ascent marked by a single and grateful incident. Halfway to the top he trod on an object that clinked underfoot and, stopping, retrieved the lost purse.

The rooms on the second floor were bedchambers, broad, deep, stately, inhabited by seven devils of loneliness. In one, on a dresser, Kirkwood found a stump of candle in a china candlestick. The two charred ends of matches at its base were only an irritating discovery, however—evidence that real matches had been the mode in No. 9 at some remote date. Disgusted and oppressed by cumulative inquisitiveness, he took the candle end back to the hall. He would have given much for the time and means to make a more detailed investigation into the secret of the house.

Since his latest entrance his vision had adjusted itself to cope with the obscurity to some extent, and the street lights, meagerly reflected through the windows from the bosom of a sullen pall of cloud low swung above the city, had helped him to piece together many a detail of decoration and furnishing, alike somber and richly dignified. Kirkwood told himself that the owner, whoever he might be, was a man of wealth and taste inherited from another age. He had found little of meretricious today in the dwelling, much that was solid and sedate and homely and—Victorian. He could have wished for more. A box of early Victorian vestas had been highly acceptable.

Making his way downstairs to the stricken man, who was quite as he had been, Kirkwood bent over and thrust rifling fingers into his pockets regardless of the wretched sense of guilt and sneakishness imparted by the action, stubbornly heedless of the possibility of the man's awakening to find himself being searched and robbed.

In the last place he sought, which should, he realized, have been the first—to wit, the fob pocket of the white waistcoat—he found a small gold matchbox packed tight with wax vestas and, berating himself for crass stupidity—he had saved a deal of time and trouble by thinking of this before—lighted the candle.

As its golden flame shot up with scarce a tremor, preyed upon by a perfectly excusable concern, he bent to examine the man's countenance. The arm which had partly hidden it had fallen back into a natural position. It was a young face that gleamed pallid in the candlelight, a face unlined, a little vapid and insignificant, with features regular and neat, betraying few characteristics other than the purely negative attributes of a character as yet unformed, possibly unformable, much the sort of face that he might have expected to see, remembering those thin and pouting lips that before had impressed him. Its owner was probably little more than twenty. In his attire there was a suspicion of a fop's preciseness, aside from its accidental disarray.

"I can't make him out at all!" declared Kirkwood. It was most exasperating, the incongruity of the boy's appearance assorted with his double role of persecutor of distressed damsels and nocturnal housebreaker.

Kirkwood bent closer above the motionless head, with puzzled eyes striving to pin down some elusive resemblance that he thought to trace in those vacuous features, a resemblance to some one he had seen or known at some past time somewhere, somehow.

"I give it up. Guess I'm mistaken. Anyhow, five young Englishmen out of every ten of his class are just as blond and foolish. Now let's see how bad he's hurt."

With hands strong and gentle he turned the round, light head. Then "Ah!" he commented in the accent of comprehension, for there was an angry looking bump at the base of the skull.

Kirkwood let the head down and took thought. Recalling a bathroom on the floor above, thither he went, unselfishly forgetful of his predicament if discovered, and, turning on the water, sopping his handkerchief until it dripped. Then, returning, he took the boy's head on his knees, washed the wound, purloined another handkerchief of silk, with a giddy border, from the other's pocket and of this manufactured a rude but serviceable bandage.

Toward the conclusion of his attentions the sufferer began to show signs of returning animation. He stirred restlessly, whimpered a little and sighed. And Kirkwood in consternation got up.

"So!" he commented ruefully. "I guess I am an ass, all right, taking all that trouble for you, my friend. If I've got a grain of sense left, this is my cue to leave you alone in your glory."

He was lingering only to restore to the boy's pockets such articles as he had removed in the search for matches—the matchbox, a few silver coins, a bulky sovereign purse, a handsome plain gold watch, and so forth. But ere he concluded he was aware that the boy was conscious; that his eyes, open and blinking in the candlelight, were upon him.

They were blue eyes—blue and shallow as a doll's and edged with long, fine lashes. Intelligence of a certain degree was rapidly informing them. Kirkwood returned their questioning glance, transfixed in indecision. His primal impulse to cut and run for it was gone. He had nothing to fear from this child, who could not prevent his going whenever he chose to go, while by remaining he might perchance worm from him something about Dorothy.

"You're feeling better?" He was almost surprised to hear his own voice put the query.

"I—I think so. Ow, my head! I say, you chap, whoever you are, what's happened? I want to get up." The boy added peevishly, "Help a fellow, can't you?"

"You've had a nasty fall," Kirkwood observed evenly, passing an arm beneath the boy's shoulder and helping him to a sitting position. "Do you remember?"

The other snuffled childishly and scrubbed across the floor to rest his back against the wall.

"Why-y, I remember fallin', and then I woke up, and it was all dark, and my head achin' fit to split. I presume I went to sleep again. I say, what're you doin' here?"

Instead of replying Kirkwood lifted a warning finger.

"Hush!" he said tensely, alarmed by noises in the street. "You don't suppose"—

He had been conscious of a carriage rolling up from the corner as well as that it had drawn up (presumably) before a nearby dwelling. Now the rattle of a key in the hall door was startlingly audible. Before he could move the door itself opened with a slam.

Kirkwood moved toward the stairhead and drew back, with a cry of disgust. "Too late," he told himself bitterly. His escape was cut off. He could run upstairs and hide, of course, but the boy would inform against him and—

He buttoned up his coat, settled his hat on his head and moved near the candle, where it rested on the floor. One glimpse would suffice to show him the force of the intruders and one move of his foot put out the light; then—perhaps—he might be able to rush them.

Below a brief pause had followed the noise of the door, as if those entering were standing, irresolute, undecided which way to turn, but abruptly enough the glimmer of candlelight must have been noticed. Kirkwood heard a hushed exclamation, a quick clatter of heels on the parquetry, pattering feet on the stairs, all but drowned by swish and ripple of silken skirts, and a woman stood at the head of the flight—to the American an apparition profoundly amazing as she paused, the light from the floor casting odd, theatric shadows beneath her eyes and over her brows, edging her eyes themselves with brilliant light beneath their dark lashes, showing her lips straight and drawn and shimmering upon the spangles of an evening gown, visible beneath the dark cloak which had fallen back from her white, beautiful shoulders.

CHAPTER XI.

"MRS. HALLAM!" cried Kirkwood beneath his breath.

The woman ignored his existence. Moving swiftly forward, she dropped on both knees by the side of the boy and caught up one of his hands, clasping it passionately in her own.

"Fred!" she cried, a curious break in her tone. "My little Freddie! Oh, what has happened, dearie?"

"Oh, hello, mamma!" grunted that young man, submitting listlessly to her caresses and betraying no overwhelming surprise at her appearance there. Indeed, he seemed more concerned as to what Kirkwood, an older man, would be thinking to see him so endeared and fondled than moved by any other emotion. Kirkwood could see his shamefaced, sidelong glances and despised him properly for them.

But without attending to his response Mrs. Hallam rattled on in the uneven accents of excitement. "I waited until I couldn't wait any longer, Freddie, dear. I had to know, had to come. Eccles came home about 9 and said that you had told him to wait outside, that some one had followed you in here and that a bobby had told him to move on. I didn't know what"—

"What's o'clock now?" her son interrupted.

"It's about 3, I think. Have you hurt yourself, dear? Oh, why didn't you come home? You must have known I was dying of anxiety!"

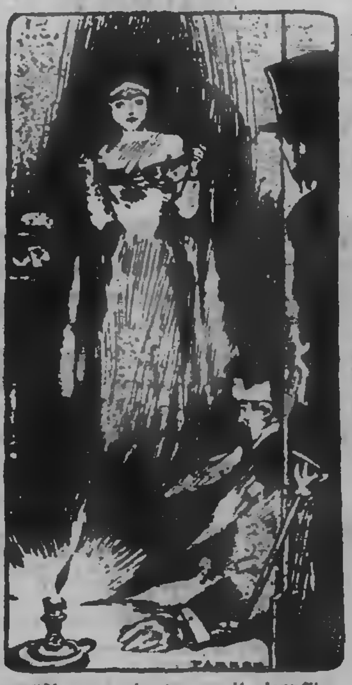
"Oh, I say! Can't you see I'm hurt? Had a nasty fall and must 've been asleep ever since."

"My precious one! How"—

"Can't say, hardly. I say, don't paw a chap so, mamma. I brought Eccles along and told him to wait, because—well, because I didn't feel so much like shuttin' myself up in this beastly old tomb. So I left the door ajar and told him not to let anybody come in. Then I came upstairs. There must 've been somebody already in the house. I know I thought there was. It made me feel creepy rather. At any rate, I heard voices down below, and the door banged, and somebody began hammerin' like fun on the knocker."

The boy paused, rolling an embarrassed eye up at the stranger.

"Yes, yes, dear!" Mrs. Hallam urged him on.



"Have you hurt yourself, dear?"

SIMON BOLIVAR.

Stormy Career of the Man For Whom Bolivia Is Named.

Bolivia, the South American country, gets its name from Simon Bolivar. The land has had as stormy a history as did the liberator who assisted in making it a republic in 1825. Bolivar had been writing his name large in South American history for a long time before that date, however, earning for himself the title of the "Washington of South America." Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1783 of a noble and wealthy family. He studied law in Spain, traveled much in Europe, married and returned to his native country. In 1809 he visited the United States on his return from another journey to Europe. It was at this time that he became an enthusiastic admirer of republics and made up his mind to free Venezuela from Spanish despotism. From that time on war was his portion.

In 1813 he entered Caracas as conqueror, was hailed as the liberator of his country by the people and made absolute dictator in civil and military affairs. He met with reverses, however, at the hands of the Spaniards, and it was during a period of defeat on the continent that he convoked a congress in Haiti, instituted a government and abolished slavery there. That was in 1816. Thereafter he was successful against the Spaniards in South America, and in 1819 at Angostura, Venezuela, he was chosen president with the power of dictator. When New Granada united with Venezuela he was made the first President. By 1822 the new republic was completely cleared of royalist troops.

Bolivar was summoned the same year to help the Peruvians and in 1824 was named dictator of Peru. By 1825 the Spaniards were driven out of Peru also, and Bolivar, calling a congress at Lima, formally resigned the dictatorships. Soon after that the southern part of Peru was erected into a separate state and named Bolivia, and he could have been dictator for life. However, troubles in Colombia kept him busy. Venezuela broke away from the rest of Colombia in 1829. Bolivar was denounced for his ambition, and he was virtually forced to retire to Cartagena. He died in 1830.

The Gift of Prowling.

Prowling, according to a magazine writer, is not exactly strolling, for strolling practically assumes an absolute and utter lack of purpose. On the other hand, prowling differs from anything that implies sightseeing; for while it has a subconscious purpose, there is nothing brisk or businesslike or suggestive of duty about it.

To prowl, in fact, is to go forth into the highways and byways of any interesting place, either in the city or in the country, in a perfectly irresponsible fashion, with one's mind in a state of genial receptivity, but not of acute acquisitiveness; with a readiness to enjoy every possible impression of life in all its phases; not exactly an alertness, but with a bland and friendly openmindedness that never loses sight of anything.

The person who is capable of prowling, in this special and technical sense of the word, must have a touch of the Bohemian in him. He must be able to take things as they come, to extract the last drop of humor from every possible occurrence, to have no large ideas of his own importance, to be tolerant and wholly free from priggishness, and to see the amusing and interesting side of even the insignificant.

The gift of prowling is perhaps most truly valuable to the traveler in foreign lands. Any one can go about and see the ordinary sights. Any one can read his Baedeker and absorb from other sources the second-hand emotions of those who have gone before him. But it is only the exceptional person who can adequately and intelligently prowl.

Waratah, which is the name of the liner missing for so long, is also the name of the national flower of Australia.

Walking or riding through the Australian bush, the traveler will occasionally come suddenly upon a burnt-out ridge, where a scrub-fire has swept away the undergrowth. Among the charred trees, still standing, tongues of flame seem to lick. These are the waratahs, each stem about 6 feet high, and bearing a single burning-red flower, shaped like a heart, and the size of a man's closed hand.

This flower is difficult to rear in a garden, but some have succeeded in growing plants from seed that has been first roasted.

A Seaside "Find."

Dover, Eng., has been chuckling over a hoax, either played by or on a local newspaper, which published the following paragraph:

"A very fine specimen of a water otter was caught on the slope at the root of the Eastern Arm this week by one of the workmen. It is being kept in a tub near the scene of its capture."

Interested students of nature who proceeded to the scene of the alleged curious capture beside the new National Harbor works discovered the "water otter" to be a rather battered specimen of the family kettle.

Lack of Judgment.

"So Cayuse Charley met his fate at the hands of a posse?"

"Yep," answered Three Fingered Sam.

"What was the trouble?"

"His immejit difficulty was a lack of judgment as to speed. He helped himself to a horse, but didn't pick one that was fast enough to keep ahead of the party as went after him."

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.

CHARIVARIS A SURVIVAL OF BARBARISM AND LAWLESSNESS AND SHOULD FIND NO PLACE IN 20TH CENTURY CIVILIZATION

To the Editor of the Review.

Hall's Glen, Nov. 8.—Dear Sir,—It seems that some misrepresentations are abroad with reference to the rowdyism carried on by the charivariers at the home of Mr. Lazarus Payne of Dummer, on Sept. 22nd, on the occasion of the wedding of his daughter, Lena, to Mr. R. Northey, of Smith. We received a few hints that the charivariers might make some trouble, but we did not arm, or make special arrangements to defend ourselves against them. On the contrary we received them courteously outside the house as the night was warm, and the bride and groom went out and shook hands with them, while the guests and waiters seated at the third table were finishing their supper, after which we carried out a large quantity of pies and cakes and even bride's cake, and fed them well, and gave them tea and water to drink. As soon as they were through eating they asked to see the presents, which was only an excuse to get inside, as we had heard that they had other plans to carry out if they once gained entrance. As there was about 75 guests present and two long tables, seating 30 persons in the dining room; the unreasonableness of the demand was apparent. Besides, some of them were dressed indecently and others with dirty old clothes stuffed with hay, corn, browse, etc., and wearing many sorts of hideous masks and I understood there was between 40 and 50 of them in the gang.

When refused admittance they made a rush for the dining room door, worthy of the savage Indian under Pontiac, but it was locked. They then rushed for the side door, where we carried out the provisions for them; three of them getting ahead of me in the rush. They got inside the first door but one of my sisters called out to another sister who was ahead of the charivariers, to lock the inside door, which was done. Three of them then began to sit down on the floor of the washroom to wait us out; when, not knowing at the time that they had been drinking liquor; I told them that when they were used like gentlemen they ought to act like gentlemen. They said something about having asked to get in. I told them gentlemen would not go into a house unless they were allowed. Whereupon one of them jerked off his mask and gripped me by the throat injuring it so that I had to visit two doctors; Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield, and a throat specialist, Dr. Buchanan, of Peterborough; costing me between $4 and $5. He banged my head into a looking-glass hanging on the wall, smashing it, and cut or scratched my head so that the blood ran down my face. Two or three men attempted to stop him but as he was very strong they were also roughly handled. He assaulted several other persons, including some ladies, and most of the time using awful language to us, not fit to be repeated, both vile and profane. On the earnest solicitation of my sisters, and others, to give a chance to settle it out of court; and not knowing at the time that it was illegal to do so, I promised to give a chance. So we agreed to let the offender off if he apologized to each person he assaulted or attempted to assault, and pay damages, and the doctor bill. He did the rest, except the doctor bill, paying only $5 to my father and $5 to me, as we did not want them to think we were trying to make money out of him; and when I wanted to speak to him about the doctor bill, he refused to listen to me and gave me vile abuse; so I sent the bill by mail, but he refused to pay it, but instead, some of the ruffians disturbed and probably intended to molest us one night soon after, between one and two o'clock at night; but we were on guard, and part of the disturbers are known. The roads in the vicinity of the scene of the wedding, on the following morning, bore evidence of the hasty retreat of the charivariers in such profusion that it reminded one of the hasty flight of the Syrians, from the siege of Samaria.

It was represented that I was fighting, but I deny the charge, as I am not a pugilist and never have been one. It was said by some that there there was something the matter with my neck before the row, but there was nothing serious the matter with it so far as I know, and neither of the doctors said there was anything wrong with it, except the injury caused by the grip on my throat. I know parties tried to intimidate me with threats but I wish it clearly understood that if such threats had any effect on me it was to make me more determined than ever to bring such miscreants to justice in future; insead of making me a coward as they evidently take me to be. They were so utterly ungrateful for the mercy shown them that they even talked of having me hauled up; because I did not prosecute them; so in future I hope they will not have another chance of laying such a charge; and I think every fair-minded person will commend such a course.

It was not fear in the least that made me drop the case; but my promise given, which I hold sacred even if I suffer for it. Is it not time such doings as charivaris were frowned down on and abolished, when they engage in such lawlessness? We had a very pleasant time till they arrived; when they spoiled the rest of the evening for us; thanks partly to the beer kegs shipped to Warsaw, of which I heard they had been drinking before they came to the charivari. Thanks also partly to the beer stored (according to reports) at a certain farm

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM F. PAYNE,
Hall's Glen.

P.S.—We, the undersigned wish to issue the following warning to all whom it may concern; that any person or persons found on the premises of either of our farms, uninvited, during any future wedding at our homes do so at their own risk or peril.

Signed,
WILLIAM F. PAYNE,

A MAMMOTH CARGO FROM THE QUAKER OATS MILL

Midland, Nov. 8.—"Ofler," the largest grain boat on Canadian waters, arrived in Midland harbor this morning from Fort William, with 537,000 bushels of oats, for the Quaker Oats Company, of Peterborough.

This is the largest cargo that has ever been unloaded at a Canadian port. The entire cargo will be taken to Peterborough by the Grand Trunk, and will pass through Lindsay with Lindsay crews. This purchasing of this entire cargo of oats, gives the public some idea of the enormous output of the Quaker Oats Company.

The moving of this huge cargo will be commenced at once, which will necessitate the use of about 405 large grain cars and 32 engines, or 16 doubleheaders in all.

AIRRIESS CONVICTED ON BOTH CHARGES OF THEFT

A conviction in both charges of theft against Jesse Airriess was made by His Honor Judge Huycke at the county court to-day, but sentence was deferred until to-morrow morning.

The evidence for the prosecution in the charge of the theft of the gold watch and spectacles from room 21 in the National hotel during the night of the fire, was similar to that given at the police court.

Three witnesses, Chief Roszel, P.C. Meagher, and Mrs. A. P. Poussette corroborated the evidence given by P. C. Newhall and Mr. Poussette, in all but a few exceptions.

For the defence three boarders of the hotel testified that Airriess had been asked by them to enter the hotel for the purpose of securing some of their belongings, and had done so.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Luke's Church

There was a good meeting in St. Paul's last night, the attendance being considered excellent for a Monday. In making the announcements the pastor, Mr. Pogue, expressed the joy he had felt at the response made by the people to the efforts put forth in connection with these special services. He urged during this closing week that all would continue praying for a special blessing to attend the meetings. The meetings will conclude Friday night. There will be a special meeting on Friday for boys and girls of the schools in St. Paul's at 4.15, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance for this meeting.

Mr. MacBeth took for his subject last night third epistle of John v. 2: "Beloved I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health even as the soul prospereth." John had evidently been inquiring about the man to whom he especially wrote this letter, and the letter throws a beautiful light on the life and customs of the early Christians. When one asked for the welfare of another, it was evidently understood as referring first of all to his spiritual condition and not to his material circumstances. If we are anxious for the Kingdom, and for those for whom we are inquiring, this will still be the case with us. But it is not always so in this material age. As soon as John had ascertained how well Gaius, the man after whose welafre he had asked, was flourishing in health of soul, he thought it then safe to pray for his business success and for his good health of body and mind. There good health of body and mind. This is in accordance with the mind of Christ. We are to put first things first. He said; "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." The Health of the soul is the first consideration. Once that is assured, we can safely trust that soul with the control of health and wealth. In such a case health and wealth will be used for the glory of God, and for the good of humanity.

In closing the speaker told how Jesus, the Great Physician, would regard the low state of health in which many souls are, even amongst professing Christians, and for them He would prescribe suitable Spiritual food, exercise in religious work, and a dwelling in the atmosphere of the Cross.

At St. Andrew's Church

In St. Andrew's church Rev. Mr. Atkinson delivered an eloquent address, taking the following as his subject, Acts 16, "The story of Lydia and the Philippian jailer," Paul says in one of his letters that there are diversities of operations but the same God worketh. This story is an illustration of that principle. We see how the same God through the same spirit and by the same grace works on utterly diverse characters. Lydia, a refined, cultured, and spiritual woman. The jailer a coarse, cruel and Godless man. The Church of Christ to-day should learn this lesson from this, that Christ works the extremes of character. Mary of Bethany and Mary Magdala, Nicodemus and the dying thief.

Next was noted the diversity of operation by the spirit of God. Of Lydia we read her heart the Lord opened. Jesus says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man open the door I will come in." So simply and quietly he approaches the spirits of men. He holds out His hand and asks for our friendship. Can we refuse Him. In 99 cases out of 100 this is conversion accomplished. On the other hand God sometimes departs from the ordinary and makes use of the exceptional. He uses the earthquake of a sudden temptation, of a great fall, of a severe trial, of a shattering blow to faith, so that in the midst of some catastrophy to hope and love when all is darkness, men cry "What must I do to be saved?" and the answer comes "Believe on Jesus Christ."

Knox Church

"The Old Gospel," was Rev. Dr. Farquharson's theme last evening, based on the words of Mark 1. 1, "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ." Knox church had a good congregation, and all were impressed by the service. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt was present and led in prayer. He also added a few very effective remarks at the close of the address.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt remarked that if we were to look at the reality of the gospel we must go to its source. We must see it as presented by the Saviour Himself. How did it impress Peter and John and others? They were struck by His teaching, but that was not the key. Behind that was a wonderful personality that revealed itself when dealing with individuals, such as Nicodemus, Mary Magdalene and Zacchaeus.

Then there was His death, followed by His resurrection. There were marvellous facts that held hold and changed the disciples. But even these did not complete the gospel. Not until these disciples became possessed by the personal presence of the Master did they realize what it fully meant. That same gospel is for us. We learn how to get its benefit, by opening our hearts to it; by trusting to it.

An earnest appeal was made to all who had not accepted Christ to allow Jesus to take possession of their lives.

To-night "Seeing and Believing" will be the subject. Everyone is made welcome. This afternoon a mothers' prayer meeting is being held at the home of Mrs. Morrison, 270 Reid street. There will be a men's prayer meeting in the church at 7.45 p.m.

MONSTER BLACK BEAR WAS SHOT IN EAST HARVEY

East Harvey, Nov. 5.—For some little time past it has been known that bears were around. Their tracks have been seen, and occasionally a bear has been seen. On Saturday last Allan Irwin's eldest son William, and his second youngest, Alfred, with a companion, Charlie Freeborn, decided to have a roam around and find what there was in the woods anyway. Alfred and Charlie are young fellows, about sixteen, and William is older, and they got their rifles and cartridges and went off east of Buckhorn road, towards Mississaugua Creek. After awhile William said he would take a tour around as he was acquainted with the woods, and make his way home, while the other two, with a little spaniel dog, would follow an old lumber road, and so work out to the Buckhorn road. Will had not left them long when the two boys were attracted by a peculiar frightened yelp from the dog, and in a moment the pup came tearing down a knoll, followed closely by a black cyclone roaring through the fallen leaves. It gave the boys a start at first, but they instantly braced themselves to receive cavalry, and opened fire. Each of them let fly, but the pup yelped a little more scared, and the cyclone came on. Bang! bang! again, and still the roaring fury came down through the mass of dry leaves. The scared pup leaped behind the boys for protection, and the huge black bear was within twelve feet, when the boys, with cool, calm nerve, levelled again and sent in another volley. That settled it. The bear dropped dead almost at their feet. He was a dandy, black as night, weighed 340 pounds, and fat as butter. They were four miles from home, and they had a great time getting him out. On Monday Allan Irwin went to Bobcaygeon, taking a hundred pounds of the meat and the pelt, disposing of the meat to C. Edgar, the butcher, and the pelt to Robt Kennedy, the storekeeper.

Matter appearing in this column so far as relates to the Local Option campaign, is supplied with the approval of those interested in opposing the adoption of the principle and is paid for at regular rates

To the Editor of the Review.

Will you kindly permit me to lodge a protest against those people who are responsible for the posters put up, using in them the name of the unfortunate man "Hunter," of Bobcaygeon, to promote the interests of local option. What a spectacle of uncharitableness it is. Surely if any cause has to be promoted by the use of means of this kind, it must be a very weak cause.

It appears to me that the pasting over of the name "Hunter" indicates that some of the enthusiasts are, after all, ashamed of this procedure. The poor man is dead, and will stand before his God for judgment, which I think will be more merciful than man would give him. But the family if left behind with the stigma of murder and suicide resting upon them. Not enough to have this to suffer, these so-called temperance enthusiasts increase the sad plight the Hunter family is in, by publishing broadcast, in glaring posters, the lamentable act of the unfortunate man, who instead of being denounced, should have our heartfelt pity. I say again, "shame" upon those who to further their cause have to assail the dead. I think the case speaks for itself.

Respectfully yours,
TEMPERANCE.

Miss Drechsler Adamson and Mr. Tattersall are well known in local musical circles, and need no introduction to a Toronto audience. Mr. George Bruce has only recently come to the city, but has already been appointed to the teaching staff of the Conservatory of Music, and is also a member of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Bruce was for several years a member of the famous Scottish orchestra, under Dr. Frederick H. Cowen, and has played under the baton of many of the celebrated European conductors.

MARKS PACKED OPERA HOUSE

"Sergeant O'Rafferty" Played to Capacity Audience--Vaudeville Was Good

If the biggest house of the season is any indication of the week's business Marks Bros. engagement here this week will be given under particularly encouraging auspices. Last night "Sergeant O'Rafferty" was the bright comedy drama offered by the company and won instant favor from an audience that filled thee theatre to capacity. The play was an interesting drama of the Spanish American war, and Tom Marks as Sergeant O'Rafferty supplied the chief fun of the evening's comedy in Tom Marks original comedy way.

The rest of the company took their parts in a thoroughly capable manner and the play held the interest of the audience from the first curtain to the happy ending of a well written and well acted piece.

The vaudeville features were more than ordinarily attractive, Miss Arlie Marks winning generous applause with that most popular of numbers, "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay," the tuneful refrain being caught up by the audience in her several encores. Chris Allen gave a natural and clever character act that pleased the audience immensely and Joe Lyons in his song and dance number was loudly applauded, his nimble tripple dancing winning him an enthusiastic recall.

To-night one of the outstanding successes of the New York season, "The Hypocrite," by Hall Caine, will be given. There will be a complete change of vaudeville between the acts.

MUCH INTEREST IN AMATEUR PLAY

The amateur company presenting "All Charlie's Fault," at St. Peter's Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 16th and 17th, is having some excellent rehearsals of the piece. Considerable interest is being shown in the production of the farce and the audiences on both occasions of its presentation should be large.

Judging from the names that appear in the cast the play will be excellently given.

PETERBOROUGH CITIZENS FAVOR INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

A RESOLUTION TO THIS EFFECT WAS PASSED AT REPRESENTATIVE MEETING

Opinion Freely Expressed That Peterborough is Not Going Ahead as Fast as it Should With its Many Advantages Over Other Places—Change of Policy Needed.

More Publicity Needed in Order to Attract Industries---Meeting Unanimous That Commissioner Should be Engaged.

Power Company Prepared to Make Contract With City to Supply Power—Peterborough's Advantages Outlined—How Industries Can be Secured.

Moved by Mr. Daniel O'Connell, seconded by Mr. D. Hughes Charles:—

Whereas the present rapid development of Canada must necessarily result in increasing the number and magnitude of the manufacturing industries of the Province of Ontario,

And whereas it is apparent that only such municipalities as adopt energetic and effective means of bringing their advantages to the notice of the manufacturing public, that are likely to procure their proper share of such industries.

And whereas the City of Peterborough possesses, in an exceptionally high degree, local and natural advantages, resulting from its geographical position, railway facilities and water power.

And whereas it is imperative, in the best interests of the city, and necessary for its future progress that proper and effective means be adopted, at once, to lead to a comprehensive and clear understanding of the extent and value of these advantages, and to have them utilized in such a way, as will tend to promote the future industrial development of the city.

Therefore be it resolved, at this meeting of the citizens of Peterborough, called at the instance of the Board of Trade, that it is the opinion of this meeting, that effective and energetic means should be forthwith taken by the Municipal Council of the City of Peterborough to promote the industrial interests of this city, and that the services of a competent and efficient officer be procured, who will devote his whole time and energy, in acquiring knowledge of the peculiar advantages possessed by this city in consulting and advising with the Municipal Council, respecting the same, and in promoting and in advancing the industrial welfare and interests of the city generally, and that proper funds be placed at his disposal for efficiently carrying out the objects of his appointment and for the purpose of defraying his salary and expense, provision be made by such additional levy as may be necessary, which in our opinion would be covered by half a mill on the dollar.

The above resolution was carried by a standing vote at the citizens' meeting held in the assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute last night. About two hundred representative citizens were in attendance and the Board of Trade, at whose instance the meeting had been called, were congratulated by the speakers on the success of their efforts. The chair was occupied by Ald. G. A. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade, and His Worship, Mayor Rush, was also on the platform. The meeting was called for the purpose of formulating a forward policy. There was a full discussion of Peterborough's resources and the opinion was freely expressed that there was something wrong when this city had not secured any new industries in the past three years. That there should be a change of policy was the feeling of the meeting and it was also felt that the best results could be obtained by engaging an industrial commissioner and it is likely that this will be done by the incoming council. "That Peterborough has the goods there is no doubt," one speaker said, "but we want to let the world know that we have them."

In opening the proceedings Mr. Gillespie said all were aware of the object of the meeting. It was practically agreed that Peterborough was in a critical position at the present time. It was felt that some concerted action should be taken to secure new industries and advertise Peterborough as in the business world. Competition between cities was keener now than ten years ago. Greater effort was required to secure industries now than a few years ago. For this reason the Board of Trade had decided on calling a public meeting to take the question up and attempt to determine a plan to boom Peterborough. Mr. Gillespie submitted some figures relative to what the 1909 council had done towards securing industries. The council have communicated with 55 concerns regarding locating here. Twenty-four had not replied, six remained where they were, ten had not done anything yet, and six have located in other cities, Toronto, Montreal and Fort William. Nine were still negotiating with the local council. The chairman also referred to what the Power committee have been doing. Their work had not been reported in the press as it was felt that it was better to keep the information from other towns and cities.

W. H. DENHAM

Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Quaker Oats Co., the first speaker, gave an interesting address on railroad facilities and shipping. In the first place the speaker wished to say he was exceedingly pleased that the meeting was the opening wedge for an early and substantial prosperity for the city of Peterborough. There are advantages which Peterborough has over Canadian towns which only need bringing out and given the proper publicity. Plenty of power at reasonable rates and good shipping facilities for the bringing in of its raw material and output of the finished product were the chief requisites of a manufacturing city. Peterborough was excellently situated with good railroad connections. We were on a direct line to the east, and when the Trent Canal was completed we would have an all-water route. We are in more direct communication with the Northwest than any city west of Toronto. Then again it was reasonable to believe that the Canadian Northern would pass through Peterborough. The company could not afford to overlook Peterboro. In the past year $750,000 had been paid out in freight rates in Peterborough, the Quaker Oats Company paying out $460,000, about $1470 a day. In the last 50 days the Quaker Oats Company had paid $700,000 for grain.

Mr. Denham submitted the following table of traffic on the C. P. R., stating that while he couldn't secure the G. T. R. figures they doubtless would show a very large traffic also. The table was as follows:

Total loaded cars going east on the C. P. R. in 1908, 100,000,

Total loaded cars going west, 70,000.

One thousand persons pass through Peterborough per day on the passenger trains.

The speaker was not able to secure figures from the Grand Trunk, but no doubt they would be very large.

If two roads can give us such figures what may we expect if we are favored with the Victoria Harbor line and the Canadian Northern. To the speaker's mind Peterborough was better located by far than any city west of Toronto, having an unexcelled area for the distribution of manufactured products. Mr. Denham said he tried to point out why Peterborough was a more desirable place for the location of an industry. It had been said Peterborough was an expensive place for coal. But in Peterborough coal was not required to generate power where there were such splendid natural resources in this respect. Taking the points he had mentioned into consideration the speaker thought that Peterborough would be considered one of teh finest manufacturing towns in Canada. He would like to see Peterborough boomed and made a city of 100,000 instead of 15,000 as it is now.

MR. T. F. MATTHEWS

Mr. T. F. Matthews referred to Peterborough's fine location. He was a member of a firm that had branches in three cities, Peterborough, Ottawa and Brantford, and the shipping facilities at Peterborough were equal to Ottawa and far superior to Brantford. Peterborough had also the advantage that there was very seldom a car shortage in Peterborough. This was a most important matter as manufacturers knew. In many other cities, especially in the fall, there is a shortage of cars. This condition did not exist in Peterborough as more loaded cars came into Peterborough than went out. Referring to Mr. Denham's statement that industries flocked to a city where there were industries Mr. Matthews stated that a short time ago when a large American plough company decided to locate in Canada the plough manufacturers there invited the American company to locate there in order to have all the plough factories together. This was the spirit that Peterborough manufacturers should show.

STORY PROVED A COMPLETE MYTH

Bedfort's Movements in Canada Traced by Detective Greer.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—Investigation by Provincial Inspector Grier into the record of John N. Corry, who under the name of John W. Bedfort, confessed in London, England, a month ago, to the murder of Ethel Kinrade, in Hamilton, on February 24, has shown the utter impossibility of his story.

Corry, or Bedfort, it appears had been working at Simpson's, and on the day of the murder was on duty from 8 a.m. til 5.30 p.m., during which time the murder occurred. On March 29, he was discharged from Simpson's, and after five or six weeks spent in Muskoka, returned to Toronto, and was engaged as cook to a camping party on the Island composed of members of the Baptist Church.

It is believed that he is the same man who wandered away last winter and was found in a semi-starved condition on the Yonge street wharf, being taken to No. 1 police station, and afterwards to St. Michael's Hospital.

From Corry's wandering proclivities and his known highly strung imaginative nature, which have shown themselves at times in fits of despair, it is deduced that he was given to brooding on the Kinrade mystery, and this is assigned as the reason for his fake confession.

Deputy Attorney-General J. S. Cartwright has forwarded a statement of the result of the enquiry to the Department of the Secretary of State at Ottawa, through whom it will be transmitted to the Scotland Yard authorities.

Bedfort Insane.

London, Nov. 10.—William Bedfort, who confessed to the murder of Miss Kinrade, was remanded yesterday until Thursday. The prison doctor says Bedfort was insane, but is now not insane. He says he doesn't remember "confessing."

BOTH SHIPS WENT DOWN

New York, Nov. 10.—Six of the crew of the barkentine John S. Bennett, bound from New York to Halifax, with a cargo of coal, were drowned early on Monday morning when she sank in collision on Block Island with a four-masted schooner, supposed to be the Morrill C. Hart of Thomastown, Maine. The schooner is also believed to have been lost, causing the death of all her crew of five. The Bennett was owned by A. W. Henry & Son of Liverpool, N.S.

Meagre details were brought here yesterday by Capt. Bullock of the schooner William Janes, which picked up two Filipino sailors, members of the Bennett crew, which consisted of Capt. Jonas Frith of Lockport, N.S.; First Mate Hadley and Second Mate Obrey Geldert, both of Lockport; Daniel Stoutley, the cook, and two seamen, besides the rescued men.

KING HAD QUIET CELEBRATION

His Majesty's Family Honor Birthday at Sandringham.

London, Nov. 10—King Edward yesterday celebrated his 68th birthday at Sandringham Palace, surrounded by most of the members of his family and a few intimate friends. Telegrams of congratulation were received by His Majesty from all parts of the world. His health is considerably improved.

From early morning the tenantry of Sandringham were feasted by the King and Queen Alexandra, who made a point of personally looking after the wants of their guests.

Simultaneously with the King's birthday celebration Sir John Knill, the new Lord Mayor of London, was inaugurated for a term of office. The time honored circus parade was discarded, its place being taken by a procession of citizens, soldiers, naval volunteers, fire department and boy scouts through beflagged streets.

The only survivor of the early theatrical show was the gilded chariot of the lord mayor, which Londoners are not yet prepared to see banished.

Admiral Sir John Arbuthnot Fisher, Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, and first and principal naval A.D.C. to the King, was yesterday elevated to the peerage. Sir John Fisher has been armiral of the British fleet since 1905. He was born in 1841 and entered the navy when 13 years old.

LABOR DELEGATES DISCUSS INTERFERENCE BY INJUNCTION

Report of Committee Declares That Single Judge System in Dealing With Contempt of Court is Not Just —Will Appeal Leaders' Case.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—Declaring that the use of an injunction writ in contentions between workers and employers is an unwarranted extension of the equity power of the courts and an interference with the rights and liberties of the workers, the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor yesterday recommended that an appeal be taken from the decision which condemns to prison President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison for contempt of court.

The report strongly attacked the single judge system and held that in the case of violating an injunction, the penalty of which means possible imprisonment one should be entitled to trial by jury.

The report was submitted by Jas. Duncan, first vice-president of the A. F. of L., who took about three hours to deliver it.

It stated also that the $80,000 voted at the last convention at Denver for headquarters at Washington was not sufficient, and that temporary quarters would be used this year.

The bill, which is being introduced by Congressman Wilson, one of the federation delegates, explained in the report and a special committee will report upon the bill before the convention closes. The scheme provides for an "Old Age Home Guard," consisting of men and women over 65 years of age, and citizens of the United States for fifteen years, and by writing to the War Office are enrolled in the Old Age Home Guard entitled them to $125 a year. No one can enlist, however, who owns more than $1,500 worth of property.

According to the report organised labor recognise industrial training and the committee urges that children be educated along this line between the ages of 14 and 16, which in the belief of the committee, would prove an incentive to specialise in some particular line.

In reference to the action of the United States courts in sentencing three of the principal officials of the A. F. of L., the executive council decided to carry the case to a higher court, and have submitted their decision in the form of a resolution to the members of the federation.

"We recommend that an appeal be taken from the decision rendered in both the original injunction as well as contempt cases growing out of it. We cannot permit these decisions to go unchallenged. They affect fundamental rights, and either the courts or Congress must safeguard them.

"We hold that except where contempt is in the presence of the court, the liberty of no citizen should be committed to the keeping of any man, regardless of who he may be or what position he may hold; on the contrary, we hold that a citizen, charged with violating an injunction, the penalty of which involves imprisonment, should always have the same legal right to a trial by jury that is always accorded to a person charged with violating the criminal law.

SUFFRAGETTES CAUSE UPROAR AT LORD MAYOR'S BANQUET

While Sir John Knill is Holding His Inaugural Function at London Women on Roof Send Stones Crashing Through Stained Glass Window.

London, Nov. 10.—The Lord Mayor's banquet at the Guildhall last night was the scene of a suffragette incident. The lord mayor was responding to the toast to the King, when a crash of glass was heard and stained glass windows fell in fragments into the banquetting hall.

"Shouts of votes for women," resounded through the room causing considerable excitement, and some amusement. Two women who had gained the roof and thrown the stones were arrested. Another suffragist, in evening attire, who accosted Winston Spencer Churchill, President of the Board of Trade in the vestibule, was ejected.

Premier Asquith, who was the principal speaker at the banquet, avoided reference to home politics and dealt with international affairs.

He was happy to be able to speak without the lurking apprehensions which clouded the international horizon last year, and although there still were possibilities of disquiet in eastern Europe, there was nothing, he believed, which would not yield to time and tact, and he knew of nothing which need stand in the way of a full and friendly understanding with Germany.

With reference to the Congo, His Majesty's Government, the Premier declared, earnestly desired Belgium to make such dispositions as would justify the recognition of annexation.

LIGHTNING STARTS A BIG OIL FIRE

Beaumont, Texas, Nov. 10.—Lightning set fire to the Gulf Refining Co.'s 55,000 barrel tank of naphtha at Port Arthur. Another bolt of lightning set nine of the oil tanks of the Texas company on fire near Beaumont. They held about 325,000 barrels of crude oil. The total loss will reach $500,000. Six hundred employes worked throughout all night throwing up embankment to prevent the flaming oil from spreading over the fields.

SENTENCED TO PROVIDE FOR FATHERLESS

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 10.—A sentence of ten years in the penitentiary was imposed upon Claude Wood for manslaughter, for running over and killing James F. Smith, but at the same time the court ordered that the commitment be withheld and the defendant placed on probation. In the terms of the probation is included a provision compelling Wood to contribute $25 a month towards the support of the five children he made fatherless by his reckless driving.

SISTER MARY OSWALD DEAD

Windsor, Nov. 10.—Sister Mary Oswald, for twenty years Mother Superior of the various convents of the Order of the Holy Name, is dead. She was the organizer and founder of a convent of the order in Winnipeg. In secular life her name was Agnes Reaume, a daughter of the late Hypolite Reaume of Windsor. One sister is Sister Rosanna of the Montreal Convent of the Order of The Sacred Name. Four brothers will act as her pall-bearers.

HYPNOTIST ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

His Subject Died While in Trance—Frantic Efforts of Friend of the Accused to Bring Dead Man Back to Life Ends in Failure.

Somerville, N.J., Nov. 10.—While Arthur Everton, self-styled professor and traveling hypnotist, sobbed in his cell three calm medical men witnessed a weird performance in the morgue of the Somerset Hospital late yesterday afternoon. There Wm. N. Davenport, secretary to the mayor of New York, and a student of hypnotism, vainly tried to bring back signs of life in the rigid body of Robert Simpson, a former street car conductor of Newark, who apparently died Monday night after having been put into a hypnotic trance by Everton before a large audience at the Somerville Theatre.

Davenport failed, Simpson was declared officially dead, and an autopsy was held last night.

Meanwhile, charged with manslaughter, unnerved and shaken, Everton remains in prison, where he must await the action of the grand jusy as a sequel to a stage trick familiar throughout the country and abroad.

It was at the piteous instance of Everton while in jail after his ineffectual attempts to revive Simpson that Davenport, a friend of Everton, came into the case yesterday. Notwithstanding the declaration of physicians that Simpson was dead, Everton pleaded that Davenport be allowed to revive him. Accordingly the autopsy, first arranged for two o'clock yesterday afternoon, was postponed and the student of hypnotism was summoned.

First he felt the body to detect any possible heart beat; failing in this, he placed his ear on the victim's chest. Then, invoking the power of suggestion, he spoke in the dead man's ear: "Bob," he said, "Bob, your heart action—your heart action—your heart action is beginning. It is beginning."

Slowly and systematically Davenport repeated this in the ear; then, changing his tone of voice to an imperious command, he cried sharply: "Bob—Bob—can't you hear me? Your heart is beginning to beat. Your heart is beginning to beat."

Again and again he repeated this assurance to the inanimate form, while the medical men looked grimly on. Not a muscle of the body stirred and there was absolutely no sign of animation.

Again Davenport changed his methods. Leaning over Simpson's right ear, he spoke confidentially: "Oh, I say, Bob," he said, in a quiet, conversational tone, "look, your heart is beginning to beat."

He repeated this soothingly time after time, but without effect. Simpson was apparently as dead as a door-nail.

Simpson, the victim, was 35 years old, and was accustomed, it is said, to drinking heavily. It is generally admitted that he was intoxicated during the test Monday night. No relatives have appeared to claim the body.

Everton has employed counsel, and he will fight the case. It has been suggested that he will make the novel plea that the man was still alive when the autopsy was performed, citing various cases of suspended animation as proof of this.

IRON STACK FALLS; ONE PERSON KILLED

Brantford, Nov. 10.—One life was lost, and the lives of a score of employes in the moulding shop of the Pratt & Letchworth malleable iron works here were imperilled last night by the falling of a mammoth iron smoke stack, which crushed through the roof into the shop.

Mark Boudler, 22 years of age, son of E. Boudler, boss carpenter of the shop, was the victim. George Flaherty and an Italian were slightly injured.

Recently the firm decided to install electricity in two large heating furnaces, above which stood a large iron stack. Charles Woodden, a Burford contractor, was given the contract of tearing the stacks down. One was being removed when something gave way allowing it to descend with a crash, and in its fall it broke the guy wires supporting the second stack. The latter fell through to the shop below, where the moulders were busy pouring off. Boudler was decapitated. He had been at work removing bricks from one of the furnaces. His mate, Flaherty, on the other side of the furnace barely escaped. The partial fall of the first stack gave warning to the other employes who fled before the second stack fell.

LABOR DELEGATE DEAD AT TORONTO

Toronto, Nov. 10.—Earl E. Russ, delegate to the American Federation of Labor Convention from the Typographical Union of Niagara Falls, N.Y., was found dead in his room at 22 Shuter street last night.

The gas jet in the room was turned half on and the room was filled with fumes, which were not, however, very dense. Coroner J. M. Cotton is investigating, but an inquest is unlikely.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH THE STATES

Detroit, Nov. 10.—James R. Garfield, former Secretary of the Interior, and J. S. Willison of Toronto, editor of The Toronto News, were the principal speakers last night at a dinner given by the Wholesalers and Manufacturers Association of Detroit for the purpose of discussing better trade relations with Canada.

Editor Willison said in his address: "Canadian restrictions upon the export of pulpwood and saw logs cannot be properly described as discriminatory (although they do chiefly effect the United States), because they apply alike to all countries. And I am bound to say that the provinces are unlikely to consider any reversal of policy, and there is no doubt that the movement for a federal export duty will become more formidable."

Boy Fooled With Revolver.

Brantford, Nov. 10.—Arthur Smith, aged 16, says he accidentally shot himself through the arm on the Cockshutt bridge here yesterday. He was carrying a revolver in an inside pocket and was fooling with the trigger. The bullet passed right through the other arm. He then threw the revolver into the canal. The police, however, do not believe is version of the accident.

THIS MAN TOOK A WIDE CASKET

Goderich, Nov. 10.—The arrangements for the funeral of John Miller, Canada's heaviest man, who weighed 467 pounds, have been completed, and the cortege left his late residence at Carlow for Goderich Cemetery this afternoon. The casket arrived from London last night, where it was specially made. It is six feet six inches long and the inside measurement 45 inches wide, and 29 inches deep. There are eight handles, reinforced with iron strips inside. It required eight large men to carry it, and would not permit of being slid into a hearse, a special wagon having been secured for the removal to the grave.

The shell is seven feet eight inches long, four feet two inches wide and 33 inches deep.

POLICE PERMITTED AUTO SPEEDING

New York, Nov. 10.—Alleging that members of the bicycle police squad have been allowing chauffeurs to break the speed bylaws, in return for the free use of autos and other inducements. Commissioner Baker yesterday made a number of transfers and dismissals. In October 22 were killed and over 100 injured in auto accidents in the city.

CONFESSES TO MANSLAUGHTER

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 10.—While the attorney for "Prof." Frank L. Hill, the Fall River herb doctor, who yesterday pleaded guilty to an indictment of manslaughter, was making a statement in the nature of a confession, reporters in the neighboring City of Fall River found in a spot indicated in the confession the head of the victim, which completed the dismembered body of the young woman, Amelia St. Jean of Woonsocket, R.I., who had died in Hill's office as a result of her own act, after the herb doctor had refused to give her the surgical relief which she sought.

EARL GREY TO THE CADETS

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—Earl Grey addressed the 800 boys of the Ottawa cadet corps yesterday afternoon after they had paraded on Parliament Hill in honor of the King's birthday.

"Anyone who is base enough to be a bully or to be guilty of unfair, dishonorable play, is a traitor to the religion of the Union Jack," said His Excellency. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was present.

Veteran Bank Teller a Defaulter.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 10.—Grayson H. Osborne, for fifteen years receiving teller of the Huntington National Bank, was arraigned yesterday, charged with being $7,000 short in his accounts. Te defalcation may amount to $26,000. Osborne, who is about [illegible] years of age and has been with the bank for twenty-five years, refuses to tell where the money went.

WANTED—AN ELECTION LAW

We hope some member of parliament will make it his business at the coming session to provide a simple and inexpensive means of trying infractions of the election law. As it stands at present that law is a premium upon corruption. It is possible to stave off trial and to complicate the proceedings to such an extent by appeals that a long process becomes doubly long and expensive.

An ordinary police-court proceeding would serve the same purpose as an election court trial. Why not, therefore legalize it? If a man is charged with accepting a bribe, let him be summoned before the magistrate. A few cases of such a character and the whole conduct of the campaign would stand disclosed. It would be wholly unnecessary to go into an elaborate attack as at present, upon the organization, system of agency and general make-up of a candidate's campaign. When corruption is proven in the police court the one thing remaining to do would be to show agency which could be done in an equally simple way if deemed. Disqualification is not necessary. The odium of the revelations would serve the same purpose and a bought election so easily upset, would be too costly a luxury even for the most reckless to repeat. If a "corrupt" campaign is a quasi-criminal performance, why not treat it so? Magistrates have great power over the liberty of the subject, and might be trusted, as in the London case, to try "corrupt practices." Until some such measure is adopted the chief defence of "the people" against corruption and all that it entails, is set at nought and of no use to them whatever. In fact, as it stands, the election law works [illegible] damage to the public interest. It is complicated to weariness, and it permits of the disintegration, if not destruction, of evidence that, in a police-court proceeding, would have no time "to spoil." Besides, where the crown is the prosecutor the whole appearance and meaning of the proceeding is changed. It is then a trial by the people for the people, and not by one political party of another. In this particular alone the effect would be almost miraculous. In fact the advantage of having corruption and crime of all sorts investigated directly by the crown is too apparent to need argument, and in what way is political corruption different from any other? It contemplates a bigger crime. That is the only difference.

THE ENFORCEMENT OF LAW

An attempt is being made in some quarters to convey the idea that the Ontario Government is not capable of enforcing the law, at all times. The "lax administration" of the law against tramps and those guilty of violence has been pointed to as likely to give a line on what would happen in case of local option. We do not think that the charge against the Government is founded on fact. It is true that for a time great pressure was being brought to bear on the attorney-general's department, which was loaded up with the debris of the old system of many years ago. But all that has passed away. The recently-devised and very comprehensive scheme of the attorney-general, [illegible] county constable, inspector, game and fish warden, &c., in all branches of the public service where paid by the department or under its immediate control, is in immediate touch with the department, is, we understand, likely to work wonders. The service used to be comparable to the famous Mulligan Guards, but it is like that of a well-drilled and properly officered army at present. It has all been done so quietly that it is hardly realized, and yet the change almost amounts to a revolution.

To say, therefore, that lawlessness in any direction can prevail is to flout the new plan and to flout it unnecessarily. We do not believe for one moment that any law will not be enforced to the best of the department's ability.

The good faith of the administration is pretty well recognized and admitted. The public also has a way of laying complaints before the department that forestalls all excuses for neglect. Ignorance of breaches of the various laws cannot be pleaded. This objection to local option is therefore not valid. Just as the license law is, at present, enforced to the best of the commissioners' and the department's ability, so will that of local option be. If it takes a dozen license commissioners, inspectors or assistants, instead of one to enforce the law, it will be enforced, and after a year or so, attempts at "blind pigs," etc., would probably be given up. We learn by experience, and it is hardly likely that the public will ever again vote for a law and carry it, and then allow it to be nullified by political doubledealing, as has occurred in former times in Peterborough. People are not so wedded to politics as they used to be, or to the interests of self-seeking politicians, and are less prone to distrust their fellowmen of different political faith. At one time to be a Grit or Tory was more important than to be a Christian or an exemplary citizen. But that illusion has largely vanished. The bamboozling of the people as a whole by a few fakirs has played itself out. We want law, enforcement and good government, and if we have any sense at all we ought to be able to get it. Is it fairly chargeable that the public doesn't know enough to insist on decent administration? We think not. Formerly, both members of Parliament and representatives of the law were hampered by men who traded upon their position and were really political bosses in disguise. They demanded privileges and favours most detrimental to the State. This genus largely disappeared with the unfortunate times that gave him birth. It is such as he, or was such as he, who pleaded most usually for the wrongdoer, and it is at his door that most of the blame for poor law-enforcement lay. He has now largely gone the way of other fakirs and nuisances, and will no longer assist the law-breaker by the misuse of his energy and position. This will help largely in the proper enforcement of the law in future, and must be given full weight in any summing up of the prospects regarding any measure.

SIR WILFRID'S DEFEAT

Although it is not officially announced it is pretty well understood that the proposed "Canadian Navy" scheme will be so modified that even its god-father, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, won't know it. To many people it will always be a matter of wonder that Sir Wilfrid should have put forward the proposal in the shape he did and with a string attached to it, to the effect that unless we approved we should not take part in any war. Sometimes we think the proposal was made to be knocked in the head, in order that by going too far Sir Wilfrid might be enabled to turn round in the road to imperial unity altogether. At any rate the government is defeated and will have to look as pleasant as possible over it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Dummer charivari or hold-up might very easily have been the occasion of a fatality. Few people would put up with such ruffianism.

The Ottawa Citizen regards the entrance of the Irondale and Bancroft railway into Ottawa as a matter of great importance. In Peterborough we sneer at the Georgian Bay and Seaboard railway, and yet pretend we are anxious and enterprising.

Under protection Germany is able to give her sons employment and keep them at home. Consequently German emigration is negligible in volume. It is not so with free trade Britain.—Toronto News.

The Globe would deny this fact because that journal seems to be ignorant of what Protection really is.

It is refreshing to hear an able man like Rev. Dr. MacTavish come out so boldly from the pulpit and denounce the project of a Canadian navy. It is quite clear that the thinking men of the country are coming more and more to realise that it will not be well for us to stunt our growth by extravagances in an unnecessary direction and that if we honestly aim to help the Empire we can best do so by contributing direct.—Kingston Standard.

Peterborough needs a navy. There's no good in talkin', we must have a navy. What's to prevent a lot of pirates coming up the Otonabee some night and bombarding the new saw mill. Development brings new responsibilities. We can't expect to have peace except in obscurity. The penalty of greatness is attack. We shall be attacked. It is the same with Canada. It must have a navy and an expensive one, too. None of your cheap, bargain-counter affairs. Capital can't make additions to itself unless the expenditure is big like that involved in the Moncton to Winnipeg section of the G.T.P. Bernier could be admiral and if suddenly called away to the Pole, he could leave some of the grafters in charge.

"Sometimes the plums in a speech are the interruptions," writes the London (Eng.) Star. "There appears to be a good many of these plums in Mr. Dumphrey's speeches. In fact, the 'Voice' of Bermondsey is making itself heard with great point and piquancy. Last night a Bermondsey workman planted a very deadly retort. Mr. Dumphreys was talking about the iniquity of the tobacco tax, when the 'Voice' calmly observed: 'Only one of us at home smokes tobacco, but eight of us eat bread.' That is the Budget in a nutshell. So long as the people hold fast to the fact that Tariff Reform means dear bread, dear beef, dear mutton, dear ham, dear bacon, dear butter, dear eggs, and dear everything, they will not listen to the voice of the Protectionist charmer, charm he never so wisely."

How stupid all that is! Beef, ham, bread are not dearer here than in Britain. Free Traders can see through nothing but the simplest arithmetic. Anything indirect, like a tariff is too complicated for them whereupon they fall back on silly self-evident but wholly inapplicable platitudes. Things may be true and good but like a mustard plaster, they may be put on the wrong place at the wrong time, and therein is the moral of F. T. and a tariff.

From the Brantford Expositor.

The Toronto Star makes this pertinent inquiry:

Of what use is it to drill a boy in writing, arithmetic and bookkeeping if he is allowed to retain a rudeness of manner and a slovenliness of person that causes a prospective employer to reject him, or an actual employer to dispense with his services as soon as possible?

In reply to the above, the question arises: Do our schools teach politeness, refinement of speech, respects for the feelings and rights of others, the graces of deportment, the love of the beautiful and other things of cognate character, that combine and contribute to the greatest success in achieving the ideal manhood or womanhood? The charge is made that the school children of Canada are lacking in "manners," compared with the school children of Great Britain. If the charge be true, upon whom or upon what lies the responsibility?

The rudeness the Brantford Expositor refers to used to be rampant here. It was due to ignorance. It was supposed by some that to be polite was to put on airs. The blame was placed by the teachers on the parents and by the latter on the teachers. There was a tendency to allow bad children and those who were disposed to act like bad children to "run" everything, but necessity demanded a change and it is coming. Glory be!

MR. H. F. ACKERMAN.

Mr. H. F. Ackerman endorsed what Mr. Denham and Mr. Matthews had said. The freight service at Peterborough was as good as any in Canada. The speaker instanced a case where he had loaded a car here and it was at Edmonton in eight days and at Lethbridge and Calgary within ten days. What Peterborough wanted was cheap power and plenty of publicity. Mr. Ackerman had found that Peterborough was known nearly everywhere on account of the canoes manufactured here.

MR. J. H. LARMONTH.

Mr. J. H. Larmonth, managing director of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., explained he had only had short notice to prepare anything on the power question. Power was the second most important question in connection with manufacturing in any city. It came next to freight rates and car service. There seemed to be a general idea concerning Peterborough that the price of power was exorbitant. There was no one in Peterborough more interested in the growth of Peterborough than the companies supplying power. Their additional revenue depended upon the increase of the population. There was plenty of undeveloped power in the vicinity of Peterborough and Mr. Larmonth said the demand on the power from his company had about doubled in two years and they would soon be taxed to their capacity. In Peterborough the price of power was $30 per horse power for 24 hrs. People had said the rates were high here, but there were only a very limited number of places where it could be obtained cheaper. In Orillia it was $16 per h.p. for some time, and it was cheaper in Niagara district. Orillia though was an unfavorable town and competition with Niagara was out of the question. By accepted figures Mr. Larmonth showed that the power here was cheap in relation to other places. An aggressive policy should be adopted to bring new industries here and keep before the outside manufacturers the fact that power could be obtained so cheaply here. The interests of Peterborough would be served by employing someone who would devote all his time to calling attention to the facilities offered by Peterborough as a manufacturing centre. The supporters of the city in a commercial sense had been faithful in working for the city but their time was too much occupied to give the matter the attention it deserved.

ALD. W. H. BRADBURN.

Ald. W. H. Bradburn said the power question was a broad one. Power was something we had to get in Peterborough and we had too get it at a cheap price if we were going to get industries. Manufacturers seemed to be of the impression that Peterborough should be able to supply power at less than $20 per h.p. Hamilton and Belleville had better water shipping facilities than Peterborough and they could get coal cheaper. To offset this Peterborough would have to have cheaper power than these cities. Regarding negotiations for the purchase of Burleigh Falls from the Central Ontario Power Company Ald. Bradburn said that Mr. Culverwell's price of $150,000 was exorbitant. It would cost $20 per h.p. to deliver Burleigh power at the sub-station. There would be 6,000 horse power at Healey Falls when developed, but it was also tied up. The Power Committee had another good power in view and might be able to secure it, but it would not be well to make the proposition public at the present time.

Ald. Bradburn agreed with the slogan that Peterborough needed cheap power. An industrial commissioner was also needed. His business would be to advertise Peterborough and secure industries.

ALD. R. HICKS.

"I think the gentlemen who originated this citizens meeting should congratulate themselves on the success of it," said Ald. Hicks, the next speaker in opening his remarks. He spoke of the support that should be given the City Council and Board of Trade and especially the Board of Trade by the citizens. Welland was a town that had made remarkable growth. Power was offered there at $14 or $15 per horsepower.

From this it might be argued that Welland from location and superior and superior advantages was more favorable to manufacturers than Peterborough. But when a city like Guelph charged over $20 per h.p. and was getting such an increase in industries there must be something lacking in the matter of advertising Peterborough and approaching the manufacturers. Ald. Hicks thought an industrial commissioner should be appointed with liberal remuneration to look after the interests of the city in this regard. Cities that had not the advantages to offer Peterborough has were getting more manufactories. The industrial commissioner would have to be thoroughly capable and trustworthy and and his business would be to keep in touch with the manufacturers and have the whole-hearted support of the public. He believed the office could be made a highly successful and useful one. The speaker believed that the matter should be taken up by the incoming Council and an appropriation for the development of the city should be set aside. A clearly defined policy along this line would receive his hearty support.

MR. D. W. DUMBLE

Mr. D. W. Dumble said he was pleased to see such a large gathering of citizens to give the cue to the council as to what the citizens want. In days gone by we had relied on our water power, but the development of the Niagara Falls power had deposed Peterborough from its position of pre-eminence in this respect, and a stiffer fight was necessary to secure industries. There was no use waiting for something to come. We must go after what we want. The city council was composed of ordinary men, and perhaps they did not have a very wide vision and enough confidence in their own judgment. Then there were committee-men, and the committee-men were inclined to look too much to the chairmen. The aldermen often were too much afraid of the people. The citizens should tell the council what they want, and if the council does not act, new men should be secured. Mr. Dumble made a strong plea for an industrial commissioner. Toronto had one, and Peterborough needed one right away. He should have power to act and to know that the citizens were behind him. Peterborough's development depended upon new industries. There could be very little more development of the agricultural resources in this district. The limit had about been reached in this respect. The question of securing industries was not so much one of local facility as one of local ability. The co-operation of the citizens was what was wanted.

DR. M. A. MORRISON.

Dr. M. A. Morrison said it seemed to him that they were only reiterating to-night what was threshed out a year ago. The Board of Trade had looked upon it favorably last year, and a committee from the Board had waited on the city council, advocating the commissionership. If it was again presented to the council it would be a good thing to let the council know the people were in earnest. He thought the appointment of a commissioner would be a wise step. Whether the expenditure of $3,000 or $4,000 a year would be justified for the salary was a matter, along with other points, that should be gone into thoroughly.

The Power Committee should consult with the representatives to the legislature and the parliament to see what could be done concerning the power question.

MR. T. E. BRADBURN, M.P.P.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., referred to the importance of the power question, and also spoke in favor of having an industrial commissioner to advertise Peterborough. Regarding the power question Mr. Bradburn said that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission had two of their engineers to Peterborough and their reports showed that the powers they had examined could not be delivered at Peterborough for less than $20 per horse power. The commission had investigated Burleigh Falls but unfortunately this power was tied up.

MR. J. R. STRATTON, M.P.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., said he had not come to make any remarks on the power question or transportation facilities. He thought the future of Peterborough as a centre, with excellent transportation facilities was assured. The matter of power was being placed in the hands of a commission by the government, and the city would get the power at as cheap a rate as any town along the line. But there was nothing to complain of in regard to the cost of electric power in Peterborough compared with other places. Peterborough offered better advantages for manufacturing than nine-tenths of the towns in the province. Peterborough's future, as a manufacturing city was assured if the best course in the city's interest was taken up. Mr. Stratton spoke strongly in favor of the appointment of a commissioner.

MR. D. O'CONNELL.

Mr. D. O'Connel considered the keynote of the whole situation was that Canada was growing faster now than it ever did before, that it was growing faster than the United States had ever done in its history. Immigrants were pouring in at the rate of between $200,000 and $300,000 per year, and the great west was rapidly filling up. It was evident that Ontario was to be the manufacturing province of the Dominion. Within the next few years there would be a big increase in the manufactories of Ontario and many new industries would spring up. Within the last ten years Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Brantford and Welland had gone forward rapidly. Peterborough was almost standing still. Little progress had been made in the acquisition of new industries in Peterborough within the past four or five years. Mr. O'Connell outlined the advantages of Peterborough, mentioning the splendid railway facilities and the water-power particularly. It would be a great advantage to be on the new grain route. Among others it would provide Peterborough manufacturers an excellent opportunity to ship their goods to the west.

Mr O'Connell came out strongly for an industrial commissioner to boom Peterborough. As Mr. Stratton had stated, what was everybody's business was nobody's business, and it was not expected that the aldermen—business men they were—would leave frequently their own business to go out to secure industries for the city. What was wanted was a man who would make this question his business, to study the problems of the city's development. The speaker also referred to the importance of having the co-operation of the citizens, and a live City Council and Board of Trade.

MR. B. HUGHES CHARLES.

Mr. B. Hughes Charles congratulated the chairman and those who were responsible for the committee on its splendid success. He had never seen such a representative gathering in Peterborough. There was 2,500 h.p. for sale on the local power market at a reasonable figure. And when the waterworks dam was completed the town would have 10,000 h.p. of its own for sale. So there was no cause for immediate worry on the power question. The people who wanted power should be made interested. Peterborough had splendid facilities, but not enough was being done to attract the manufacturers. He hoped that the first business of the incoming Council would be the appointment of a commissioner. This town must adopt an aggressive policy if it hoped to succeed as it should as a manufacturing centre.

Mr. Charles had much pleasure in seconding Mr. O'Connell's motion, which he hoped would be unanimously carried.

MR. R. F. McWILLIAMS.

Mr R. F. McWilliams agreed with Mr. O'Connell's views. Peterborough was losing time when it could least afford to lose it. The towns and cities of western Ontario that did not have power before are getting it now and would be serious competitors. Mr. McWilliams advocated a public campaign. Small towns in western Canada were sending out attractive literature advertising themselves. A publicity campaign would cost money, but it would pay. The advertising should come before the appointment of the commissioner and it would have to be kept up every year. A good man would have to be appointed for an industrial commissioner. It would cost 1-2 a mill on the dollar. Mr. McWilliams considered that it would be a wise step to appoint a commissioner.

MR. R. H. TURNER.

Mr. R. H. Turner wanted to know if Peterborough had 2,600 horse-power to offer. It would not do to offer power if it did not have it. Mr. Turner thought the rate a commissioner who could get the business would cost perhaps $5,000 per year.

MR. V. EASTWOOD.

Mr. V. Eastwood said conditions here were in every way favorable for the growth and development of Peterborough. The question of appointing a commissioner was a good one, but the matter of cost was an important one. It would be impossible to get one that was too good, and the laborer was worthy of his hire. He suggested three committees, an industrial, power and health committee be appointed to get the concensus of opinion of the citizens on the question. The committees would have to be composed of strong, capable men.

Ald. Hicks in reply to a question, said the city was now in a position to offer horse-power to any manufacturers coming in 1,000 h.p. at $20 per h.p.

The meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King.

BIG DAIRY RECORDS.

Good Results Do Not Require Vast Outlay.

Many dairymen, says the Practical Dairyman, think that the big records are entirely beyond their reach; that it takes a vast outlay of money for barns and fancy feeds to develop a great producer. Nothing could be further from the truth. We know personally of at least four herds in which the annual milk production was increased from 3,000 pounds to 7,000, 8,000, 9,000 and even 10,000 pounds for each animal. These are not fancy breeders, and the cows are not pedigreed beauties, but ordinary cows bred from common stock by the use of a pure bred bull for four or five generations. The owner of sixteen 10,000 pound cows was laughed at two years ago when he set his aim at that figure. He has now not only reached it—the average includes two-year-old heifers—but he has set his eyes on a 12,000 pound average.

Over Fifty Years of Remarkable Growth

The Romantic Story of a Canadian Enterprise Which Now Encircles the Globe

Long before the Canadian Pacific Railway stretched its line of steel across the continent—while the Indian and the buffalo disputed the possession of the Prairie Provinces—while steamboats were still a novelty, and electricity almost unknown—there was established in a very modest way, in a little town on the St. Lawrence, an enterprise which has since girdled the earth.

It was not heralded in the public press or cried from the housetops, for it was not the manner of those times to take full pages in the newspapers or stretch great signs across the landscape. Yet the product of this enterprise was known and appreciated by almost everybody in the Canada of fifty years ago. Our grandfathers looked upon the founder of this enterprise as a public benefactor, and always gave a place in their homes to the fruits of his judgment and perspicacity.

The story of this discovery is the story of a most unusual search for knowledge, and its equally unusual reward.

Nearly one hundred years ago Josiah Morse graduated from one of the best medical colleges in the United States. He had heard a great deal about a remedy devised by some wandering Indian tribes, which they were said to be using with remarkable success in curing most of their common ailments. Though somewhat sceptical about it, he decided, before taking up a regular practice, to visit the Indians and investigate, probably in the hope of adventure as well as of getting some valuable information.

He found a race of Indians very different from their degenerate descendants, who now hang around white settlements. Lithe and active, with keen and intelligent, if uneducated minds, they lived close to Nature, and drew from her strength and wisdom.

Dr. Morse soon discovered that the reports of their remedy had not been exaggerated—but he did not so quickly discover the secret of its ingredients or of the method of compounding them. It took him many moons to gain the complete confidence of the Indians and to overcome their inbred reticence and love of secrecy. But finally, after he had lived among them for two or three years as an Indian, they revealed the whole secret to him.

Returning to civilization, Dr. Morse took up regular practice, using, wherever it applied, this Indian specific, which he prepared himself from roots and herbs. At first he used it in liquid form, but afterwards, for convenience, he reduced it to pills, which soon became known well and favorably throughout that part of the country as "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills."

When he retired from practice Dr. Morse sold the secret to Comstock Brothers, of New York City, and in 1857 W. H. Comstock, the present proprietor, became sole owner of the formula.

He established laboratories in Brockville, Ont., and in Morristown, N.Y., to supply Canada and the United States. He prepared the pills himself and then, with a horse and waggon, he covered the Canada of that time, from Montreal to Sarnia, and the Maritime Provinces as well, placing the pills in practically every cross-roads store.

The half century that has elapsed since has witnessed an enormous growth in the enterprise thus modestly launched. To-day Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are on sale not only throughout Canada and the United States, but the world over. From the laboratories at Brockville, Canada — Morristown, U.S.A.—Sydney, Australia—Wellington, New Zealand—and from the branch in England, they go to seaports throughout the world. From seaport and railway station the burros in Mexico and South America, the llamas in Peru Ecuador, Thibet, and Northern China the camels in Asia, Egypt and Western Australia, the bullock waggons in South Africa, and the sampans on the rivers of China, carry them to the uttermost parts of the earth.

To guard the absolute purity of Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills every ingredient is prepared in the Comstock laboratories. The different roots and herbs are brought there in the crude state, ground, prepared, and compounded under the personal supervision of the Comstock chemists. Nothing is prepared outside but the wrappers and boxes, so that there can be no question of the purity of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. This canot be said of half a dozen proprietary remedies in America.

The Pure Food Laws of Canada, Australia and the United States, wisely adopted for the protection of the public, did not necessitate a single change in any ingredient or in the formula of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. As a matter of fact, though thorough tests have been made every few years by chemists and physicians, to see if the formula could be improved, it stands to-day exactly the same as when Dr. Morse brought it from the Indian encampments nearly a century ago. The price, originally two York Shillings (25c), is still the same, for though the cost of the crude drugs has advanced a great deal, improvements in laboratory methods have cut down the expense of making sufficiently to compensate for this.

To-day W. H. Comstock, the man who introduced Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills in young Canada fifty years ago, alert and active, though well past the allotted "three score and ten," sits at his desk in the Head Office at Brockville, keeps his fingers on the pulse of his world-wide organization, and has as keen a personal interest in the testimonials received from the ends of the earth as when, in the old days, he got an occasional letter from some one who had been helped by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

SPECIMEN OF IVORY CARVING

Were Secured From Canton and Will be Given as a Wedding Gift in Toronto

The beautiful specimens of work in ivory, which have been on exhibition in the window of the Nugent Drug Co., have been forwarded on to Toronto to be given as a wedding present. They were secured from Canton, China, by the Rev. Mr. Fee, pastor of Bethany Tabernacle, at the request of a lady in Toronto, who wanted them for the purpose mentioned above. The carving on the rings, was done by the crudest of tools, as is the case in other articles made by the Chinese, who, though they are called heathen, display a skill in this kind of work that is truly marvelous.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING

The well-attended meeting in the Collegiate hall last evening of prominent business men and citizens generally, augurs well for the success of the new movement. It takes time for ideas to hatch out, and the suggestion that Peterborough shall have a Commissioner of Industries (with considerable power, is worthy of the heartiest commendation.

A Board of Trade is a voluntary body without especial powers, and it is that very fact that enables it to do what councils and commissions cannot do, viz., call a meeting of citizens without placing the responsi- for so doing upon any one official body. The board served its purpose admirably last night.

It cannot be denied that Peterborough has lagged, as Mr. Dumble remarked, in recent years. But it is satisfactory to find that our people realize it and are determined to have more energy thrown into the city's industrial interests in future. Perhaps we should not say "energy," for much time and effort has been extended upon a very complex question. It is more a matter of foresight and success than mere work. Much may be expected to result, however, in the immediate future, if conflicting interests do not intervene.

Those who do not see the press of western Ontario have little idea of the conditions developing there. The hydro-electric policy will, without doubt, transform all those centres within economical reach of Niagara power into thriving towns and cities. In Peterborough we have certainly allowed some of our chances for bargains in power-privileges to pass by. Others have been quick to see the opportunities of making money out of them and have got ahead of us.

That we have such excellent RAILWAY SERVICE is a matter of congratulation. The facilities in that respect can hardly be improved upon. But what about CHEAP POWER? Are we likely to secure industries by reason of the exceeding cheapness of our power? This point seems to the average citizen as vital to the city's immediate future. It will not do that power shall be as cheap as in some other places. It must be as cheap as in any place, and that once secured, we can bid a friendly defiance to even our most energetic rivals.

But a step has been taken. It was taken at last night's meeting, and it is generally hoped that there will be sufficient boldness behind it on the part of our representatives to have it seen to that the opportunities within reach of us are taken advantage of without further delay.

Few places of the size of Peterborough have so many clear-seeing and capable men, and, while it is true the city receives a black eye occasionally, as a rule our industries are a credit, and in some cases a wonder.

Ald. Gillespie as president of the Board is to be congratulated upon his skilful management of the meeting and upon his guidance of it to a successful issue.

WANTED—A DISPENSARY

Peterborough needs a free medical dispensary. A dispensary is a place under medical superintendence and municipal control, where people without means can have their ailments attended to. In cities the very best doctors and surgeons volunteer for this service. Peterborough is as large as the unit of population in cities for which dispensaries are provided. There are several in Toronto. It is time this question was dealt with, and it would be good news that the local Medical Association has forwarded its consent to the establishing of a Free Medical Dispensary.

OBITUARY

DIED IN OTTAWA.

Mrs. Mary Ann English, mother of F. W. P. English, 98 Crichton St., Ottawa, and relict of the late George English, of Lang, Ont., died at the residence of her son in Ottawa, on the morning of November 7th. Deceased, who was 85 years of age, was in her usual health till Wednesday night, when paralysis affected the left side of the body a few minutes after she retired for the night. She gradually sank, apparently without pain, till death ensued. The remains were conveyed to the family plot at Fylea cemetery, near her old home in Otonabee, accompanied by her son and Dr. B. F. Nicholls, of Toronto, a nephew. Being a zealous Presbyterian church worker she devoted herself specially to Sunday school and missionary work, and never wearied in it till the last week of her life. Although very short notice could be given, quite a number of friends were present at the cemetery on the arrival of the remains, which were accompanied by a donation of beautiful flowers from associates of her son in the Ottawa post office.

Reply to "Temperance"

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—The Executive of the City Temperance and Moral Reform League wish to reply as briefly as possible to the letter of yesterday signed "Temperance."

1. We are sorry to know that it was written by one who should have had better judgment than to sail under false colors.

2. The entire letter was a gross misrepresentation of the motives of the league, a spurious profession of sympathy and a covert defence of whiskey.

3. When the news of the unfortunate man referred to, was flashed everywhere across the continent the citizens committee charged with the local option movement felt that a severe blow had been dealt the reputation of a man who did not deserve it. Everyone who ever knew him, the Presbyterian clergyman who was his friend while in confinement, his relatives and friends, all testified to his unvarying kindness. How was it possible for a man with all these manly qualities to be suddenly turned into a crazy man with his death dealing passion? Had he been a villain at heart? Had he been living a double life? Not he. There is only one answer—one cause. Must his memory go down with the lives of his relatives as one whose black heart did such an awful deed of shocking shame and cruelty? No a thousand times no. How necessary therefore that his last message to the world should be made known. It was whiskey that did it. He had been kindly and genial, but whiskey robbed him of his senses, and the friends adn relatives will be the very first to save the reputation not merely of the man who is gone but of hundreds more.

It is the very heart of the Citizens League to help make this world a better and brighter world here and now, and to seek to save not merely men from awful lives and awful deaths but to save the wives and mothers from the ignominy and shame that must result from the baneful and blighting curse of drinking whiskey. The message of this man to his son regarding the future is the estimate that we form of the man's true self.

As soon as the league understood that the name of the man referred to had been printed in large type corresponding to the printing of merchants names, because done in the same printing office, Mr. Stocker who had only posted five of the bills, was asked to cover the name out of deference to any friends. It is very easily seen that discussion upon this subject will not be very comforting to any friends, and the letter of yesterday is enough to show that there are some men who would continue the awful procession with the cry: "He's gone, bring on another." Every citizen must feel his own responsibility in the matter.

Yours for a liberated manhood, and homes and city free from blight.

THEATRICAL

The Hypocrite

One of the best bills ever given by a repertoire company in Peterborough was presented last night by Tom Marks and company at the Grand. The play was the Hall Caine success, "The Hypocrite," and was excellently interpreted by the cast. Tom Marks, as Noah, the negro fun provider, was at his best, and Carl Amend, as Bill Burke, made a decided impression by his very acceptable work.

The specialties were clever and entertaining.

To-night's play will be "That Irish Boarder." Friday will be amateur night, when the local aspirants for stage honors will be given an opportunity to distinguish themselves.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

MR. LARMONTH ON POWER QUESTION

At last night's citizens meeting Mr. J. H. Larmonth, in dealing with the power question said the Peterborough Light and Power Company, of which he was president, were prepared to make a contract with the city for a block of power to be held for manufacturers.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission reports on the delivery of power shows that not one city in a long list he had in his hand got power as cheap as Peterborough. Belleville came nearest and they were $1.66 per h.p. higher. Peterborough can give cheap power and every citizen should talk that.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

One of the largest and most impressive meetings yet assembled on a week night came together in St. Paul's church last evening, when Mr. MacBeth spoke on "The Trial of Jesus Christ." The centre of the church was well filled to the door and there was overflow into the side seats. Rev. H. E. Abraham of Port Hope was present and took part in the opening service. The pastor, Mr. Pogue, read the bulletin which gave a most encouraging report of the meetings now being held in eleven different places in the Presbytery. There is widespread interest and profit. Mr. MacBeth reminded those present that it was the King's birthday. He said they were told to "Fear God and honor the King," and as Christians they should carefully exercise their gifts and opportunities not only in the church but as citizens in the state. Edward VII. in these recent years had won the name of peace-maker, and they should be grateful for what he had striven to do. In the spirit of a true prayer, Mr. MacBeth said they would all join in singing "God Save the King" and the audience rose and sang the National anthem with much fervor. During the offering Miss Davies sang with fine expression the beautiful hymn "Saved by Grace." Mr. MacBeth then spoke on the trial scene where Christ is before Pilate. The Roman Governor of Judea with his keen legal mind saw at once that Jesus was innocent. He said he found no fault in Him, but he gave way to the outcry against Him and delivered Him over to be crucified. Pilate's action was universally condemned. But let us be careful lest we ourselves may be doing the same thing. Every human heart is a court-room in which Jesus stands on trial and we each have to face the question "What shall I do with Jesus who is called the Christ?" Sins cry out that we should cast Him forth as an impostor crucifying Him afresh and putting Him to an open shame. But there is overwhelming evidence calling us to give our decision for Him. His character, purpose, teaching, His proven claims were all dwelt upon in detail and people asked to make decision. We were clothed by God with the power of choice, and must accept the responsibility of decision. Bye and bye this same Christ who is now being judged by us, will be our Judge. Let us confess Him now and He will confess us on that great day.

The meetings will be continued every night concluding on Friday with a mass meeting for all who can come at 8 p.m. At 4.15 on Friday there will be a meeting in the church (St. Paul's) for the boys and girls of the city.

At St. Andrew's Church

A large congregation assembled at St. Andrew's church last night and a very interesting meeting was held. The Rev. R. J. Webb, of Murray street Baptist church, was present and took a very helpful part.

Miss Olive Howell sang "Sweet Peace the Gift of God's Love," the whole congregation joining in the chorus.

Mr. Atkinson took for his subject the words, "The handwriting against us; that was contrary to us," Colossians 2 vs. 14). A man is always making a record. He is his own recording angel. What we do and say becomes a record that is ineffaceable. Every idle word we must give account of.

A man's record can be against him in many ways. Against his material interests, against our characters, against our moral purposes and aspirations, against our hopes for a better life. Things that should be our friends are by the record turned into foes.

We may by the record be brought to despair of ourselves. But then comes the message of grace "O grace thou has destroyed thyself but in Me is thine help."

This record against us Christ has taken out of the way. He bore our sins and became sin for us. He nailed it to the cross and has made it a dead issue between us and God. It is at the cross that hope revives and despair flees.

The address was amply illustrated by incidents that had come within the speaker's knowledge. The practical power of the cross in men's lives today was the truth brought home.

To-night Mr. Atkinson will speak about "Those over forty years of age.

A male choir will conduct the praise service to-night.

Knox Church

In Knox church last evening Dr. Farquharson spoke on the subject, "Seeing and Believing." Many people have difficulty in accepting Christ because they desire to see all of its results before they take the step. God's desire is the reverse of this. He asks us to believe in order that we may see His glory. So Jesus said to the sisters of Lazarus that if they believed they should see His glory. Our deepest desire is to see the glory of God, and this is shown to the world in mercy and grace through the gift of Christ.

How are we to obtain this grace and thus to see God's glory? It will come to us through accepting Christ.

Rev. Mr. Keith spoke for a few minutes at the close and referred to the glory Jesus provided for when He took possession of our life.

The subject for to-night is "Confessing Christ."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Why, I—I made up my mind to cut my stick—let whoever it was pass me on the stairs, you know. But he followed me and struck me, and then I jumped at him, and we both fell down the whole flight. And that's all. Besides, my head's achin' like everything."

"But this man"—

Mrs. Hallam looked up at Kirkwood, who bowed silently, struggling to hide both his amusement and perplexity.

"You, Mr. Kirkwood!"

Again he bowed, grinning awry.

She rose suddenly. "You will be good enough to explain your presence here," she informed him, with dangerous serenity.

"To be frank with you"—

"I advise that course, Mr. Kirkwood."

"Thanks, awf'ly. I came here half an hour ago looking for a lost purse, full—well, not quite full of sovereigns. It was my purse, by the way."

Suspicion glinted like foxfire in the cold green eyes beneath her puckered brows. "I do not understand," she said slowly and in level tones.

"I didn't expect you to," returned Kirkwood. "No more do I. But, anyway, it must be clear to you that I've done my best for this gentleman here." He paused, with an interrogative lift of his eyebrows.

"'This gentleman' is my son, Frederick Hallam. But you will explain"—

"Pardon me, Mrs. Hallam; I shall explain nothing at present. Permit me to point out that your position here—like mine—is, to say the least, anomalous." The random stroke told, as he could tell by the instant contraction of her eyes of a cat. "It would be best to defer explanations till a more convenient time, don't you think? Then, if you like, we can chant confidences in an antiphonal chorus. Just now your—er—son is not enjoying himself apparently, and the attention of the police had best not be called to this house too often in one night."

His levity seemed to displease and perturb the woman. She turned from him, with an impatient movement of her shoulders.

"Freddie, dear, do you feel able to walk?"

"Eh? Oh, I dare say—I don't know. Wonder would your friend—ah—Mr. Kirkwood, lend me an arm?"

"Charmed," Kirkwood declared suavely. "If you'll take the candle, Mrs. Hallam."

"One moment," she interposed in confusion. "I won't keep you waiting." And, passing, with an averted face, she ran quickly upstairs to the second floor, taking the light with her. Its glow faded from the walls above, and Kirkwood surmised that she had entered the front bedchamber. For some moments he could hear her moving about. Once something scraped and bumped on the floor, as if a heavy bit of furniture had been moved.

Again there was a resounding thud that defied speculation, and this was presently followed by a dull clang of metal.

Eventually—it was not really long—there came the quick rush of Mrs. Hallam's feet along the upper hall, and the woman reappeared, one hand holding her skirts clear of her pretty feet as she descended in a rush that caused the candle's flame to flicker perilously.

Halfway down "Mr. Kirkwood!" she called tempestuously.

"Didn't you find it?" he countered blandly.

She stopped jerkily at the bottom, and after a moment of confusion "Find what, sir?" she asked.

"What you sought, Mrs. Hallam."

Smiling, he bore unflinching the prolonged inspection of her eyes, at once somber with doubt of him and flashing with indignation because of his impudence.

"You knew I wouldn't find it, then, didn't you?"

"I may have suspected you wouldn't."

Now he was sure that she had been searching for the gladstone bag. That evidently was the bone of contention. Calendar had sent his daughter for it, Mrs. Hallam her son. Dorothy had been successful. But, on the other hand, Calendar and Mrs. Hallam were unquestionably allies. Why, then——

"Where is it, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"Madam, have you the right to know?"

Through another lengthening pause while they faced each other he marked again the curious contraction of her underlip.

"I have the right," she declared steadily. "Where is it?"

"How can I be sure?"

"Then you don't know!"

"Indeed," he interrupted, "I would be glad to feel that I ought to tell you what I know."

"What you know!"

The exclamation, low spoken, more an echo of her thoughts than intended for Kirkwood, was accompanied by a little shake of the woman's head, mute evidence to the fact that she was bewildered by his finesse. And this delighted the young man beyond measure, making him feel himself master of a difficult situation.

The woman would have led again, but young Hallam cut in none too courteously:

"I say, mamma, it's no good standin' here palaverin' like a lot of flats. Besides, I'm awf'ly knocked up. Let's get home and have it out there."

Instantly his mother softened. "My poor boy! Of course we'll go."

As they passed out Kirkwood shut the door, and at the same moment the little party was brought up standing by a gruff and authoritative summons.

"Just a minute, please; you there!"

"Aha!" said Kirkwood to himself. "I thought so. And he halted in unfeigned respect for the burly and impressive figure, garbed in blue and brass, barring the way to the carriage.

Mrs. Hallam showed less deference for the obstructionist. The assumed hauteur and impatience of her pose were artfully reflected in her voice as she rounded upon the bobby with an indignant demand. "What is the meaning of this, officer?"

"Precisely what I wants to know ma'am," returned the man, unyielding beneath his respectful attitude. "I'm obliged to ask you to tell me what you were doing in that 'ouse. And what's the matter with this 'ere gentleman?" he added, with a dubious stare at young Hallam's bandaged head and rumpled clothing.

"Perhaps you don't understand," admitted Mrs. Hallam sweetly. "Of course I see—it's perfectly natural. The house has been shut up for some time and"—

"Thank you, ma'am, that's just it. There was something wrong going on early in the evening, and I was told to keep an eye on the premises. It's duty, ma'am. I've got my report to make."

"The house," said Mrs. Hallam, with the long suffering patience of one elucidating a perfectly plain proposition to a being of a lower order of intelligence, "is the property of my son Arthur Frederick Burgoyne Hallam of Cornwall. This is"—

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but I was told Colonel George Burgoyne of Cornwall"—

"Colonel Burgoyne died some time ago. My son is his heir. This is my son. He came to the house this evening to get some property he desired and, it seems, tripped on the stairs and fell unconscious. I became worried about him and drove over, accompanied by my friend Mr. Kirkwood."

The policeman looked his troubled state of mind and wagged a doubtful head over the case. There was his duty, and there was, opposed to it, the fact that all three were garbed in the livery of the well to do.

At length, turning to the driver, he demanded, received and noted in his memorandum book the license number of the equipage.

"It's a very unusual case, ma'am," he apologized. "I 'opes you won't 'old it against me. I'm only trying to do my duty"—

"And safeguard our property. You are perfectly justified, officer."

"Thank you, ma'am. And would you mind giving me your cards, please, all of you?"

"Certainly not." Without hesitation the woman took a little hand bag from the seat of the carriage and produced a card. Her son likewise found his case and handed the officer an oblong slip.

"I've no cards with me," the American told the policeman. "My name however, is Philip Kirkwood, and I'm staying at the Pless."

"Very good, sir; thank you." The man pencilled the information in his little book. "Thank you, ma'am, and Mr. Hallam, sir. Sorry to have detained you. Good morning."

Kirkwood helped young Hallam into the carriage, gave Mrs. Hallam his hand and followed her. The man Eccles shut the door, mounting the box beside the driver. Immediately they were in motion.

CHAPTER XII.

THE American got a final glimpse of the bobby, standing in front of No. 9 Frognall street and watching them with an air of profound uncertainty. He had Kirkwood's sympathy therein, but he had little time to feel with him, for Mrs. Hallam turned upon him very suddenly.

"Mr. Kirkwood, will you be good enough to tell me who and what you are?"

The young man smiled his homely, candid smile. "I'll be only too glad, Mrs. Hallam, when I feel sure you'll do as much for yourself."

She gave him no answer. It was as if she were choosing words. Kirkwood braced himself to meet the storm, but none ensued. There was rather a lull, which strung itself out indefinitely to the monotonous music of hoofs and rubber tires.

The carriage stopped before a house with lighted windows. Eccles jumped down from the box and scurried to open the front door.

They were returned to Craven street! "One more lap round the track!" mused Kirkwood. "Wonder will the next take me back to Bermondsey Old Stairs."

At Mrs. Hallam's direction, Eccles ushered him into the smoking room, on the ground floor in the rear of the dwelling, there to wait while she helped her son upstairs and to bed. He sighed with pleasure at first glimpse of its luxurious but informal comforts and threw himself carelessly into a heavily padded lounging chair dropping one knee over the other and lighting the last of his expensive cigars with a sensation of undiluted gratitude, as one coming to rest in the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. He was very sleepy.

Through the halls, on the stairs there were hurryings and scurryings of feet and skirts, confused with murmuring voices. Presently, in an adjoining room, Philip Kirkwood heard a maidservant wrestling hopefully with that most exasperating of modern time saving devices, the telephone as countenanced by our English cousins. Her patience and determination won his approval, but availed nothing for her purpose. In the outcome the telephone triumphed, and the maid gave up the unequal contest.

Later a butler entered the room, a short and sturdy fellow, extremely ill at ease. Drawing a small taboret to the side of Kirkwood's chair, he placed thereon a tray, deferentially imparting the information that "Mrs 'Allam 'as thought 'ow as Mr. Kirkwood might care for a bit of supper."

"Please thank Mrs. Hallam for me." Kirkwood's gratified eyes ranged the laden tray. There were sandwiches biscuit, cheese and a pot of black coffee, with sugar and cream. "It was very kindly thought of," he added.

"Very good, sir; thank you, sir."

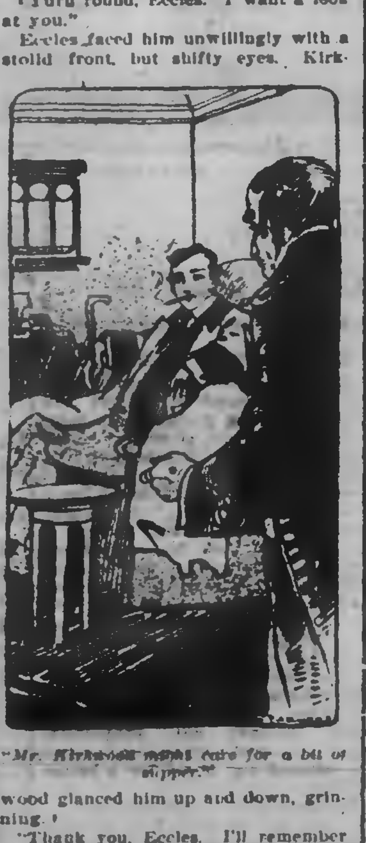
The man turned to go, shuffling soundlessly. Kirkwood was suddenly impressed with his evasiveness. Ever since he had entered the room his countenance had seemed turned from the guest.

"Eccles!" he called sharply at a venture.

The butler halted, thunderstruck. "Ye-es, s-sir!"

"Turn round, Eccles. I want a look at you."

Eccles faced him unwillingly with a stolid front, but shifty eyes. Kirkwood glanced him up and down, grinning.



"Mr. Kirkwood might care for a bit of supper."

"Thank you, Eccles. I'll remember you now. You'll remember me, too, won't you? You're a bad actor, aren't you, Eccles?"

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir," mumbled the man unhappily and took instant advantage of the implied permission to go.

Intensely diverted by the recollection of Eccles' abortive attempt to stop him at the door of No. 9 and wondering, now that he came to think of it, why precisely young Hallam had deemed it necessary to travel with a bodyguard and adopt such furtive methods to enter into as well as to obtain what was asserted to be his own property, Kirkwood turned active attention to the lunch.

Thoughtfully he poured himself a cup of coffee, swallowing it hot and black as it came from the silver pot, then munched the sandwiches.

It was kindly thought of, this early morning repast. Mrs. Hallam seemed more and more a remarkable woman with each phase of her character that she chose to disclose. At odds with him, she yet took time to think of his creature needs. Women, he propounded gravely, are queer. There's no telling anything about them.

One of the most unreadable specimens of the sex on which he pronounced this highly original dictum entered the room just then, and he found himself at once out of his chair and his dream, bowing.

"Mrs. Hallam."

The woman nodded and smiled graciously. "Eccles has attended to your needs, I hope? Please don't stop smoking." She sank into an armchair on the other side of the hearth and, probably by accident, out of the radius of illumination from the lamp, sitting sidewise, one knee above the other, her white arms immaculate against the somber background of crimson.

She was very handsome, indeed, just then, though a keener light might have proved less flattering.

"Now, Mr. Kirkwood?" she opened briskly, with a second intimate and friendly nod, and paused, her pose receptive.

Kirkwood sat down again, smiling good natured appreciation of her unprejudiced attitude.

"Your son, Mrs. Hallam"—

"Oh, Freddie's doing well enough Freddie," she explained, "has a delicate constitution and has seen little of the world. Such melodrama as tonight's is apt to shock him severely. We must make allowances, Mr. Kirkwood. I think," she said deliberately, "that it is time we came to an understanding."

Kirkwood agreed—"Yes," affably.

"I purpose being perfectly straightforward. To begin with, I don't place you, Mr. Kirkwood. You are an unknown quantity, a new factor. Won't you please tell me what you are and—are you a friend of Mr. Calendar's?"

"I think I may lay claim to that honor, though"—to Kirkwood's way of seeing things some little frankness on his own part would be essential if they were to get on—"I hardly know him, Mrs. Hallam. I had the pleasure of meeting him only this afternoon."

She knitted her brows over this statement.

"That, I assure you, is the truth," he laughed.

"But I really don't understand."

"Nor I, Mrs. Hallam. Calendar aside, I am Philip Kirkwood, American, resident abroad for some years, a native of San Francisco, of a certain age, unmarried, by profession a poor painter."

"And?"

"Beyond that? I presume I must tell you, though I confess I'm in doubt." He hesitated, weighing candor in the balance with discretion.

"But who are you for? Are you in George Calendar's pay?"

"Heaven forfend!" piously. "My sole interest at the present moment is to unravel a most entrancing mystery."

"Entitled 'Dorothy Calendar,' of course. You've known her long?"

"Eight hours, I believe," he admitted gravely—"less than that, in fact."

"Miss Calendar's interests will not suffer through anything you may tell me."

"Whether they will or no, I see I must swing a looser tongue or you'll be showing me the door."

The woman shook her head, amused. "Not until," she told him significantly.

"Very well, then." And he launched into an abridged narrative of the night's events as he understood them, touching lightly on his own circumstances, the real poverty which had brought him back to Craven street by way of Frognall. "And there you have it all, Mrs. Hallam."

"It is so like Calendar," she exclaimed, "so like him that one sees how foolish it was to trust—no, not to trust, but to believe—that he could ever be thrown off the scent once he got nose to ground. So if we suffer, my son and I, I shall have only myself to thank!"

CATARRH CURED

No Cure, No Pay, is a Most Generous Offer

To get an antiseptic strong enough to destroy the germs of the membrane, at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

The inflamed condition will go, too, and the suffering, hawking and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease.

Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate when Wm. Madill has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if, after a fair trial, Hyomei does not cure catarrh.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs a dollar, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip.

SPECTACLES and EYEGLASSES

For One Week, beginning FRIDAY, Nov. 12th, we will SELL REGULAR $3.50 and $5.00 GOLD-FILLED SPECTACLES and EYEGLASSES, with LENSES, for $1.00 $1.00

REMEMBER -- THE SALE WILL LAST ONLY ONE WEEK FROM THE ABOVE DATE

Such a Startling Announcement No Doubt Makes You Ask Us How We Do It

We wish to introduce ourselves to the spectacle-wearing public, and have secured two hundred (200) dozen pairs, all told, embracing all kinds of glasses, including Rimmed-out Eyeglasses and Spectacles; every style to fit all eyes, and frames to fit every face. These glasses are the same as we sell regularly for $3.50 and $5.00, and we will use just as much care in fitting them to your eyes as though you were to pay full price. When you come to inspect them, that's the kind you will find them to be, and every one will be replaced by the manufacturers should they not give entire satisfaction.

WHAT YOU GET FOR ONE DOLLAR

A gold frame perfectly fitted to your face with proper lenses, any style you desire—reading or distance glasses that will serve you for years—protection and rest from tired, strained eyes—freedom from headache and like pains that come from defective vision—the satisfaction that you have all this and save a nice sum of money.

In order to serve all promptly during this wonderful sale there will be four expert Opticians in attendance. Each and every customer will thus get a scientific examination of their eyes and the glasses properly adjusted.

NOTICE—These frames are absolutely Gold Filled, not Gold Plated. They occupy the same place in the optical trade as Rogers' Bros. "1847" does in the silverware line, or Elgin or Waltham do in the watch business.

Remember this sale will not begin until Friday, and will only last one week. In the meantime see our display in the window.

DAIRY HINTS

The genuine dairyman who understands his cows and their keeping is producing a good article and making a comfortable living. The farmer who does not thoroughly understand his cows and part of the time is neglecting the cows for the farm and part of the time the farm for the cows naturally is not making much of a profit.

Competent Dairymen.

The development of competent dairymen is just as important as the development of cows. These highly specialized cows require judicious and kindly treatment. Neglect will not only be reflected in the churn, but disastrous and costly deterioration will quickly follow. A generation of neglect will practically undo the work of a century. The culmination of the breeder's art must be supplemented with correct methods of feeding and proper handling.—Dr. James Withycombe.

Specks in Butter.

The white specks in butter are due to poor ripening of the cream, says the Epitomist. Some of the cream has "wheyed off" and decomposed, and the casein has gathered in clots, and the whey has separated from the cream. These clots of curd will not churn out. They remain in the butter as clots and always look white. Artificial coloring has no effect upon them, and, winter or summer, they spoil the looks of the butter.

ADVICE TO CANADIANS BY A SUCCESSFUL MAN AND ONE WELL WORTH LISTENING TO

Lord Northcliffe Before the Ottawa Canadian Club—A Wonderful Analysis of Canada and Canadians

Ottawa, Nov 8.—Lord Northcliffe, addressing one of the most representative gatherings which ever attended an Ottawa Canadian Club luncheon, expressed some fears as to the national type of people which is being developed in the Canadian West, gave the Canadians some advice as to the proposed navy, and paid tribute to the patriotism and enlightenment of Canadians in respect to educational matters.

His advice in regard to the navy was to make headway slowly at first, as Japan has done, in order that success may be certain.

The government was represented by the Hon. Messrs. Fielding, Brodeur, Fisher and Mackenzie King, while Lord Lascelles represented the Governor-General.

Lord Northcliffe, who was introduced by Mr. Gerald Brown, as 'one of the world's keenest observers,' proceeded to deal with the subject: 'Canada, to-day and to-morrow.' He stated that he had long associations and great affection for the old part of Canada, but that he had never seen the West until his recent visit. He expressed his pleasure at the development of Canada, the success of which he ascribed largely to the fact that we have a northern people living in a northern country, who have inherited great independence, and especially the British tradition of independence of the individual, and the independence of the corporation.

He had been much struck on his visit to the West with the varied races which were settling there, and took the view that this feature was a little disappointing to one who longed to see British independence maintained on this continent. He laid stress upon the difference between the old-time pioneer and the recent class of immigration from Europe, and took the ground that the American public school system produced a uniformity of life and character which was not suitable to a purely northern people like the Canadians.

"The people in the West seem to me to be thinking, reading, speaking, exactly like this new kind of Americans; they seem to me to have exactly the same kind of accent; the children seem to look exactly the same, and indeed in a city like Winnipeg I felt that, save for the splendid healthy look of the children, and the flag, one might have been in one of those newly settled cities of the Western United States, where they are dumping those races who certainly would never have made Canada or the United States what it is to-day. When first I came to Canada I remember a great many little Canadian children wore that most delightful of costumes, the French-Canadian dress for children; to-day it is most difficult to distinguish the French-Canadian child from the average new American child, and that I think is a very great pity.'

Lord Northcliffe urged Canadians to make a greater effort to maintain a nationality in thought, in reading, in appearance than they were apparently doing in the West, and took the view that Canada was now creating the kind of Canadian who was perhaps to become the most dominant factor in the British Empire. He did not adhere to the exploded theory of those British Imperialists who regarded Downing Street as the capital of the British Empire for all time. The capital of the Empire had been moved before, and it was more than possible that, in the perhaps not distant future, the force of circumstances might cause the centre of the British Empire to come there. He made a strong plea for individuality in education, and then proceeded to express the opinion that Eastern Canada offered better opportunities for British farmers than did the West. He paid a compliment to the character of the education being given at the Macdonald College at Ste. Anne's, which he had visited the previous day, and hoped that its example would be followed not only throughout Canada, but in England also.

He had been asked to say something about the Canadian navy, and although he did not know anything more about navies than the average Canadian, his experience as a candidate for Parliament in Portsmouth had made him realize that a navy is a very much more complicated piece of business than a newspaper, a railway or a grain elevator; that it is a most extraordinary mixture of tradition, scientific skill and discipline; and that however much you think you know of your navy you don't know anything about the other fellow's navy.'

'I have no doubt that when you build your Canadian navy you will make the same mistakes that have been made by all other builders of navies. If you hear of an accident in the British navy you can take it from me that it is because that navy is always being used and worked. Some of the navies which you never hear of as having accidents are never out at sea at all, and one reads of their extraordinary immunity from disaster and of the deplorable muddle of the British navy; it must be remembered that the British navy is one of the only navies in the world that is practically always at sea, that practises at night, in rough seas with lights out. If, with all our knowledge, if with a people none of whom are living more than one hundred miles from the sea, we have all that trouble with our navy, I imagine that despite your two very long sea coasts, you will also have your troubles with your navy and therefore, I would suggest, as a man of business, who has had some experience of various kinds of organization, that might be very well to be extremely slow in beginning that navy. It is quite easy to order a ship; it is quite easy to build ships here, excellent ships, but the peculiar organization that can run a battleship or a cruiser, or a destroyer, or a submarine, is quite a different organization from that which is required—in running the C.P.R. or a London newspaper, or any of the various complicated organizations of to-day.'

Lord Northcliffe laid stress upon the fact that it had taken Japan forty years to secure a navy, and did not suppose that Canadians would be able to do it more rapidly than they did. I do not think that you will be able to do it as quickly as some of your newspapers seem to think. Some of them seem to think that to order a navy is like ordering a dinner. My experience teaches me that, when you have a Canadian navy, you will have for a long time, all the worry you want. On the other hand, my experience of Canadians, and especially of the sailors that I have seen around Newfoundland, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and on the other side, convinces me that you have got here raw material as good as can be found in the world for the making of sailors.

The concluding portion of the speech was a tribute to Canadian loyalty and a recognition of the services rendered by Canadians in South Africa. War was in the air in Europe. The nation, which once pounced on its French neighbors without any warning at all, was not building all these things for amusement. If war didn't come it would be because the people at home, in their slow way, are slowly awakening and building excellent vessels, and because we have at the head of affairs in our country a very estimable man of business, who is thoroughly aware of the fact that the best business for any country is peace, peace with honor, not peace that you have to pay for all the time, and the man who is working the hardest for peace is our Edward, the man who succeeded in making that desirable entente cordial with France, the man who has gone throughout Europe unceasingly trying to bring the nations together, and if we do have peace we owe it just as much to Edward, our King, as to the efforts that are being made by our little country at home to keep up a navy worthy of this Empire and of Canada.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, in tendering the thanks of the club to Lord Northcliffe, expressed his pleasure at the fact that more Englishmen were visiting Canada, paid tribute to the attention which the Northcliffe papers were devoting to Canadian affairs, and ventured the hope that his large interests in various parts of Canada and in Newfoundland might bring about an understanding which would bring Newfoundland into the union, an accomplishment which we, in Canada, are at all times desirous of having, which we would welcome at any moment, but which, out of regard to our brethren in Newfoundland, we do not feel we should press for too much.'—The Montreal Witness.

MAYOR ASSURED THAT ENGINES WON'T TOOT UNNECESSARILY

The noisy whistling of railway trains within the city limits has been a source of much annoyance to the citizens of Peterborough, and for some time the residents have been complaining of this menace to the civic peace. At the last meeting of the committee of the whole council the matter was brought up and Mayor Rush was requested to see the railway authorities with a view to have the nuisance reduced as much as possible.

The mayor had a talk with Mr. W. R. Tiffin, superintendent of the Northern Division of the G. T. R. to-day, and Mr. Tiffin said that excessive whistling by the G. T. R. trains would be stopped and everything possible to lessen the annoyance would be done.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF COURT STANLEY A. O. F.

The twentieth anniversary of the organization of Court Stanley, A. O. F. No. 7680, was befittingly celebrated last night in the Sons of England Hall. The attendance was large and the entertainment provided for the evening was very enjoyable. A varied programme had been arranged for by a special committee, and the different numbers were enthusiastically received. Piccolo solos by Mr. Maxwell were features of the programme, and his work earned much applause. While the audience was assembled in the hall a number of fine phonograph selections were given by Mr. J. C. Callander, and during the intermission in the programme refreshments were served. Mr. Foster was the accompanist for the evening. Mr. W. J. Johnston acted as chairman, and also made a short address, in which he referred to the excellent work which was being done by the order.

NEWPAPERMEN'S THANKLESS TASK

Loads of Bricks and Few Boquets Says Writer in New York Press

Fred Lachlan, writing in the New York Press, says:—

"The position of a newspaperman is a thankless one. For years he can keep on saying nice things about people and hear nothing of it, but let him make a slip and the people affected come down on him with both feet. But the same persons are slow to congratulate him for anything he does for them that is favorable to their interests.

In the newspaper profession there are loads of bricks with about as many bouquets as are contributed at a dog's funeral. But then, think of the salary he earns—and compare it with what he really draws.

FLUFFY RUFFLES STILL AT LARGE

But Mysterious Young Lady Hap Many Narrow Escapes at the Brock St. Rink Last Night

Miss Fluffy Ruffles was not caught last night at Brock street rink. She was addressed several times, but not in the proper manner. She was skating all evening. Quite often she sat down at the far end of the rink talking to the ladies about who was Fluffy.

"Mr. H. Staunton was standing near the door and some one pushed me and I nearly knocked him over. He said, 'Oh, Fluffy!' Mr. Staunton and Mr. McWilliams were asked the time about 9.30 while I was standing on the side with the spectators. I was introduced to a young man in a local hardware store. Mr. John Seymour stopped to fix my skates, and asked, 'Are you Fluffy Ruffles?' but stopped at that.

"I stopped and helped to lift a girl that fell, and she said, 'I thought I had her then.' Many more too numerous to mention also spoke to me."

To-night Miss Fluffy Ruffles will make herself conspicuous and easy to catch. Perhaps there will be two girls taking the part so some one will be sure to win. This is your last chance to-night.

The Peterborough Lumber Company are bringing down another drive of logs from Clear Lake to Peterborough. It has now been decided to bring the drive to the mill this fall, so that they will be in readiness when operation begins again in the spring.

FAMOUS OLD WAGON.

Has Hauled as Much Money as There Is in the World.

People in Washington who daily pass the treasury building and see backed up to its curb an old van of a wagon drawn by three patient white horses do not realize the intimate link that this conveyance bears to all the money there is. They are not aware that every piece of paper money that every individual in the United States has spent or hoarded in the past twenty-six years has first ridden in that wagon. They do not know that the sum of money this wagon has hauled is equal to all the money there is in the world today.

The old wagon is a great curiosity, but modest withal. It plies regularly between the bureau of engraving and printing and the treasury, always loaded down with rectangular packages of twelve and a half pounds each. In every package are 4,000 bills. If the bills are of the lowest denomination the package is worth $4,000; if of the highest, $10,000, it is worth $40,000,000. One package of this great value once rode in the wagon.

It would take a string of hay wagons twenty miles long to hold the money that has passed through this old van. If the packages were piled one on top of the other they would make a monument fifteen miles high. If the bills were placed end to end the string would be 250,000 miles long, or equal to ten times the distance around the world. They would carpet a road fifty feet wide from New York to San Francisco. Their weight in coal would supply the average family with fuel for 250 years. Had an expert begun counting this money in the days of Columbus he would have been half through when Mr. Taft was inaugurated.

All these and many more stupendous facts might be cited with reference to the old money wagon. Yet it goes unnoticed in Washington, and not one citizen in a hundred realizes that any interest attaches to it. Few people in Kentucky ever saw Mammoth cave; the native of Arizona has never taken the trouble to visit the Grand canyon, nor New Yorkers Niagara. The gold of De Soto was always a little farther on. The land of one's desire is that to which he cannot possibly go. There are realms of romance without end, but no man ever confessed to living in one. It is human nature that the unreality of distance is the haze that makes all things interesting.—Washington Post.

Lofty Mountain Peaks.

Mountain climbing, always a strenuous and frequently a dangerous sport, offers many rich rewards on this continent to the increasing number of those who are devoted to it. A writer in the National Geographic Magazine points out that in Alaska and Canada there are several lofty peaks, rivaling those of Switzerland in magnificence, the summits of which have never been reached by civilized man. Fairweather (15,292 feet) and Crillon (15,900 feet) are reasonably accessible to tourists in Alaska, and yet it is said that no one has ever attempted to climb them. The loftiest of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson (13,700 feet), still awaits a conqueror, and the same is true of the highest summits of the Selkirks. The difficulties of mountain climbing, it is true, are not always in proportion to the height attained. In the Cascade range, for example, Mount Baker (10,827 feet) was not scaled until the tops of several of its loftier neighbors had been reached, including Mount Rainier (14,526 feet).

Americans In London.

"It is estimated that at least 60,000 Americans invade London during the summer months, an invasion for which the west end shopkeeper is deeply grateful," stated a recent issue of a London paper. "Before the days of American invasion July, August and September were very poor months for the trade. Now all this is changed, and the army of Americans spend in London about a million and a half sterling. While hotels and boarding houses get the lion's share of American gold, there are other businesses which benefit largely. These are principally jewelers, sellers of antiques and curios, drapers, dressmakers and tailors. West end tailors and dressmakers are especially grateful to these visitors, who keep them busy during what used to be the slackest season of the year."

Very Green.

Now that the widening of London's Blackfriars bridge is approaching completion the painters are getting to work, and the structure is being coated in its old familiar green color, picked out with gold. The choice of color, I may say, is the result of a misapprehension. Years ago when the painter who had the contract for the bridge approached the authorities he was met by a high official, who said loftily: "Color? Oh, see Green," meaning see another high official.

But the painter took it for sea green the color, and sea green the bridge has been painted ever since.—London Scraps.

A Bankrupt Prince.

Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, the heir presumptive to the grand duchy of Weimar, has renounced the succession of himself or his heirs, if any, to the throne of the grand duchy or its property. The prince's extravagance already has transferred him from the cuirassiers of the guard in Berlin to a uhlan regiment and later to compulsory retirement from the army, after which he was placed under a guardianship. The prince has been given the title of Count Ostheim, but he is totally bankrupt and remains under the control of his guardians.

Men Like Horses.

"Men are a good deal like horses in one way," remarked the observer. "When you are walking home some evening and see some man a little ahead of you walking at about the same pace try to increase your speed a little and pass him. In nine cases out of ten he will square his shoulders, lengthen his stride and do his best to keep ahead without making apparent effort. You will immediately feel a greater desire to pass him. Of course both of you try to look as if oblivious of the other, and probably neither would admit it if accused of racing, but you are. This may not work on a downtown street, but try it any time on any other and you'll most likely start something. It's a mighty good spirit to have too. The people who try hard not to be left behind are usually hard to beat."—Kansas City Times.

Welland Merchant's Death.

Welland, Nov. 10.—John Morwood, of the firm of R. Morwood & Co., Welland, one of the most prosperous retail dealers in Welland, disappeared on Thursday, leaving a note that he was going to Toronto. Yesterday morning his body was found in Queen Victoria Park, Niagara Falls. He was 45 years of age, and leaves a widow and two young sons.

Blackleg.

Blackleg is a disease that very much resembles anthrax, incurable and fatal. The symptoms are very much the same as those of anthrax excepting the animals may live a few days longer with anthrax than with blackleg. It only affects younger animals, while anthrax affects both. Perhaps the strongest symptom of blackleg is a gathering of air or swelling underneath the skin of the affected animals. This usually takes place a few hours after the animal becomes infected, and in tapping upon the swelling it sounds as if there was air underneath the skin. This swelling may be located upon the thighs, neck, shoulders, breast, hock joints, flank or rump. There is no treatment for blackleg excepting a preventive. This is done by vaccinating the balance of the herd with blackleg vaccine, which has proved very successful.—Dr. David Roberts.

LABOR DELEGATE ARGUES FOR INTERNATIONAL UNIONS

Americans and Canadians He Says, Have a Common Cause and Unionism Cannot be Limited by Boundary Lines—Buffalo Council Expelled.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—When President Gompers called the convention of the A.F. of L. to order yesterday morning, he announced that Delegate E. F[illegible] of the Typographical Union, a resident of Niagara Falls, N.Y., had been asphyxiated in his room the previous night, and he requested the delegates to stand silently for a brief period as a tribute of respect to the memory of their late colleague.

Delegate Jerome Jones, Atlanta, Ga., who was present at the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress held in Quebec last September, delivered his report.

He said that as far as Canadian workers are concerned, their sympathy is entirely with the American Federation of Labor and the ideas for which that body stands. The policy "Canada for the Canadians" is as distasteful to the average Canadian unionist as the open shop policy is to his American brother. They are anxious to keep intact the brotherly bond that exists between Canadian unions and those of the United States. They had the foresight to see that the union movement is not merely a local affair or one which each country can work out for itself.

Referring to his impressions gained at the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress he commented upon the fact that both French and English were used by the delegates, but though many were unable to speak both languages, it was demonstrated beyond doubt that their ideas were identical, and their loyalty to the international union movement was unquestionable.

He was confident that though Canadians were loyal subjects of Great Britain, it would have to be a very vital matter on which they would take up arms against another country. In conclusion, he paid a tribute to the late President Alphonse Verville, M.P.

Miss Potter of the University of Minnesota, representing the American women's suffrage movement, addressed the delegates. Following her introduction by President Sam Gompers, she at once plunged into her subject, stating that she became a convert to the suffragette movement a year ago in Chicago. She thought that the militant method practised by English women would not be needed in America.

By the adoption of the supplemental report of the credentials committee, the Buffalo Trades and Labor Council has been expelled from the federation. This means that Bro. Johnston, delegate from that council, is not allowed to take his seat. The expulsion of this council has been the result of a violation of the constitution of the A.F. of L. in retaining in its body a local dual union of millwrights. Otto Zimmer, a would-be delegate from the Labor Educational Association of Ontario, was denied his seat in the convention, as was also the Des Moines, Iowa, delegate. Sioux City also came under the ban of the credential committee.

John P. Fry of Cincinnati spoke of the splendid reception which he received when acting as delegate to the British Trades Congress in England. He was much impressed with the steady increase in the membership of the British Labor party in the mother of Parliaments.

John Mitchell, vice-president and chairman of the special committee on industrial education, will present that committee's report to-day.

Some of the resolutions submitted are: One by the maintenance of way employes, asking the executive to urge the United States Government "to stop the mad expenditure of public money for the purposes of war," and urging economy; another by the Brotherhood of Carpenters favoring a postal savings system in the United States. The Pennsylvania [illegible] of Labor wants [illegible] constables curtailed. [illegible] Federated Union of Greater New York wants to protect actors and actresses from the corrupt business methods of theatrical employment agencies. The National Federation of Postoffice Clerks want an eight-hour day, and the Tailors' International Union in a resolution ask that work be not taken home.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE THANKED

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Nordheimer of Toronto, president of the Imperial Order, Daughters of Empire, who is in Ottawa, for the opening of Parliament cabled the congratulations of the Order to His Majesty the King Tuesday. The following reply was received yesterday from Sandringham, Eng.: "The King thanks the president and members of the Imperial Order, Daughters of Empire, for their loyal congratulations."

WAS JAILED FOR DEFENDING JEWS

St. Petersburg, Nov. 11.—M. Gillerson, a leading attorney of this city, was yesterday condemned to a year's imprisonment in a fortress because of a speech which he delivered on June 22, 1908, at the trial of the participators in the Jewish massacre at Bialystok. Gillerson appeared at the trial as counsel for friends and relatives of the Jewish victims, of whom 73 were killed and 82 wounded. The indictment charged that in his speech in court he had irrelevantly introduced arguments which incited the workmen against the Government.

EARL GREY

THE TWO LEADERS AT OTTAWA

SIR WILFRID LAURIER
Premier of Canada.

MR. R. L. BORDEN
Leader of the Opposition

THE PROPOSITION WAS VOTED DOWN

Brantford, Nov. 11.—Representatives of Norfolk, Brant, Oxford and Haldimand County public libraries, in annual session here yesterday, decided to memorialize the Government to secure a larger grant, and to ask for legislation enabling rural municipalities to contribute towards support of libraries. It was thought that the minimum membership demanded in order to secure the grant should be reduced from 100 to 75. Dr. Kitchen, St. George, was re-elected president.

HOTEL WAS NEARLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Smith's Falls, Nov. 11.—The Central Hotel at Jasper village had a narrow escape from destruction by fire yesterday morning. The inmates were awakened by the smoke which filled the house. The blaze was in a coal shed at the rear of the hotel, and is thought to have been of incendiary origin. The alarm was given, and by the hard work of the villagers the flames were subdued and confined to the hotel building. Comerty's store, adjoining, had a close call. The hotel was badly damaged.

SEATTLE HINDUS

Starving in United States Because of Their Peculiar Caste.

New York, Nov. 11.—A special despatch to The World from Seattle says: Starving, not because of the fact that they cannot obtain food—because their religion forbids them to eat any prepared by one who is not of their caste—one hundred or more Hindu laborers are in sad straits on the outskirts of this city. Town after town in the Canadian lumber district forced the Hindus to leave their confines, and wherever they go they are being persecuted by the white people. At Tacoma the Hindus were refused shelter at the police headquarters, and a shed obtained on the outskirts of the city was utilized as sleeping and eating quarters for a week. Seattle officials have refused to care for the British subjects, and suburban residents set their dogs on the wanderers.

Gathered together, a band of probably 100 have occupied an abandoned lumber camp near Mukilteo for several weeks. Hunger is fast weakening the Asiatics, and unless the sentiments of the white people change many will starve. The Hindus will not steal, but begging seems to be a natural gift. They eat a sort of black bread baked by one of their number and drink tea.

For smoking tobacco they are using hemp rope chopped fine. Many of them are afflicted with consumption, and the damp weather is causing rheumatism to affect many.

TWO BOYS PERISH IN BERLIN FIRE

Berlin, Nov. 11.—A fatal fire occurred yesterday afternoon when a house occupied by Geo. Uttick, a Russian Jew, on Strange street, was destroyed and two children were burned to death. Another is in a dangerous condition at the hospital. The children, boys, were 3, 4 and 6 years of age, and had been locked in the house while the mother was looking for coal along the G.T.R. tracks. She had been gone about fifteen minutes when the house was discovered on fire by neighbors. The firemen had a long run, and on arrival found the youngest boy on the kitchen floor, burned to a crisp. The other two had made their escape, but were terribly burned. They were removed to the hospital, where the second youngest died an hour afterwards.

The cause of the fire is unknown and the parents are in a pitiable state of mind.

A Lake Ontario Centenary.

Kingston, Nov. 11.—A movement is on foot to have the Lake Yacht Racing Association arrange for a celebration of the 100th anniversary of steam navigation on Lake Ontario, though it does not occur until July, 1917. It was one of the events of history, when the little steamer, "Ontario," which was almost like Clermont, the first steamboat on the Hudson, was built and launched at the military village of Sackett's Harbor.

FOURTEEN KILLED IN WRECK OF TROLLEY IN VANCOUVER

Passengers Who Were Chiefly Employes of the B.C. Electric Co., on Their Way to Work, Meet a Terrible Death—Lumber Car Brok eLoose.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 11.—A runaway car of lumber, crashing into a crowded passenger car filled with early morning workers on the interuban line of the B. C. Electric Railway Co. between Vancouver and New Westminster yesterday killed fourteen men almost instantly, while many others are seriously injured, three of whom will likely die from fractured skulls. The casualty list is as follows:

Dead.

R. S. Lyon, 1,607 East Fourth avenue, brother of Stewart Lyon of Toronto.

T. Farmer.

T. Bowles, William street.

J. F. Stevens, and his son, W. Stevens, formerly of Toronto.

J. H. Crowther, 112 East Smith avenue, aged 26, recently from Holly Break, Mass.

E. Holland, 1,837 Keefer street.

George Thorburn, motorman, 1,110 Oldlum Drive, leaves wife and son and two brothers in business.

A. S. Williamson, Thirteenth avenue.

S. H. Mitchell, 241 Keefer street, widower, aged 60, from Montreal ten years ago; shop foreman.

T. Tuttle (or Turtle).

Harry Clayton.

F. Perchin, 1,852 East Third avenue.

Injured.

William Harris, conductor, Campbell avenue; fractured arm and fractured skull; condition grave.

J. T. Carty, Columbia street, New Westminster; compound fracture of skull; condition grave.

Geo. Crawford, 508 McMartin street, New Westminster; internal abdominal injuries; condition grave.

W. P. Haines, Burrard Hotel, city; scalp wound and pelvis crushed.

Thos. B. Jackson, Frazer Hotel, New Westminster; ribs and chest injured.

J. W. Russton, 1,005 Queen's avenue, New Westminster; fracture of shoulder bones; serious.

Eli Zimmerman, Central Park; scalp wounds and compound fractures of skull.

Robert Forsyth, 731 Homer street; scalp wounds and extensive contusions of chest and back.

Carl W. Carlson, 135 East Hastings street; severe scalp wonuds.

Motorman McDonough and Conductor Wiggins of the freight were arrested, pending the result of the inquest.

The accident occurred while it was yet dusk. The passenger car, the occupants of which were chiefly employes of the B. C. Electric, bound for the car building shops in New Westminster, left the Vancouver terminus at 5.30, following up an electric freight consisting of a motor box car and flat car laden with heavy timbers, the latter fifty or sixty feet long and very heavy.

Three miles out, at the head of a grade which the freight had just climbed, the coupling of the flat car gave way, and it started backward, gaining tremendous speed by gravitation and momentum. The passenger car was but a quarter mile behind, and just leaving Lakeview station when the runaway rounded the curve.

The speed of the death dealing car must have been tremendous, for the motorman of the passenger had not time to move his seat. The heavy timbers at the moment of impact ploughed through the passenger as a battering ram. Not a passenger escaped being crushed between the woodwork and the flying timbers. The passenger coach was literally reduced to matchwood.

ROSS, LIBERAL CANDIDATE, WAS ELECTED IN WEST MIDDLESEX

With a Majority of 145 Votes Late Member of Ontario Legislature Defeats Robert MacLaughlin, After Close Contest.

Strathroy, Nov. 11.—Duncan C. Ross (Liberal), former member of the Ontario Legislature, was elected yesterday to represent West Middlesex in the House of Commons to succeed W. S. Calvert, who was appointed to the National Transcontinental Railway Commission.

Mr. Ross' majority over his opponent, Robert McLauchlin, is 145, secured principally in his own town, Strathroy, where he had 123 to the good, and in the Township of Caradoc, which surrounds Strathroy, where he had 121. The other three villages, Glencoe, Wardsville and Newbury went for the opposition candidate. Mr. Ross' victory was no surprise. There were no sharply defined issues, and the result is hardly an endorsation of the Government's naval policy, inasmuch as Mr. Ross on the platform declared that the Government should "go slow" in regard to its announced program.

The total vote will equal, if not exceed, that of the last general elections of 1908. In many divisions every available vote was polled.

The Liberals of North Middlesex have practically decided not to contest North Middlesex for the Legislature.

Work Hard, Says Borden.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—"While we did not succeed in wresting from the Government West Middlesex, a constituency they have held so long, it was almost too much to hope that we should, having regard to the usual course of bye-elections."

Mr. R. L. Borden spoke these consolatory words at the annual meeting of Ward Two Conservative Association in Victoria Hall last night.

The leader who was enthusiastically cheered, said he had found a fine fighting spirit in West Middlesex, and that confidence was strong that the seat would be captured at the general election. He urged that Conservatives should not be discouraged by the long period in opposition, repeating Carlyle's admonition to the Edinburgh students, "Work and despair not. I bid ye be of hope. These be my last words."

Whether the concluding sentence had reference to his rumored retirement, Mr. Borden didn't say, but the meeting didn't see anything subtle in the allusion.

MONTREAL MERCHANT HAS DIED

Montreal, Nov. 11.—The death took place suddenly yesterday morning of Mr. B. J. Coghlan, the well-known steel merchant, at the age of 72. He was for many years a prominent member of the Board of Trade, and took an active interest in politics as a Liberal. He was born in Ireland in 1837, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He went into business on his own account, and made a marked success of it. He was also agent for the White Star Steamship Co.

Big Fire In Gold Mine.

Perth, West Australia, Nov. 11.—Fire has broken out at the Great Boulder gold mines and yesterday the surface of the workings were ablaze. The damage already done is estimated at $1,500,000.

FRUIT GROWERS ARE IN SESSION AT TORONTO

Toronto, Nov. 11.—"The Spy and the Baldwin, those two apples can be produced with such excellence in Canada, that we should made a national specialty of them," remarked E. D. Smith, ex-M.P., of Winona, as president of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, which opened in the Temple Building yesterday.

"The people want Ontario fruit and, by persistence in overcoming transportation difficulties, by Governmental assistance, our regulation of the enemies of the orchard, and with a confidence in their own line of work, fruit growers of Ontario are going to give these people our goods, and be in return well remunerated."

Mr. Smith's address bristled with facts and encouraging examples. He condemned the careless and parasite fruit producer; the railways even were congratulated in the way they had endeavored to meet demands of the fruiterer during 1909.

"We have seven million bearing apple trees in Ontario," said the speaker, "and I am safe in saying that not over one-third of the crop could be packed for export. Spraying, pruning and cultivation will remedy this evil." An instance of the value of such work was given in the orchard of Joseph Tweddle of Fruitland, who packed 3,200 barrels from 12 acres of Spies—an average of $800 per acre.

Canada Does Not Discriminate.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 11.—The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the close of the speaking at the banquet of the Detroit Wholesalers' Association Tuesday night: "Resolved, that in the judgment of this association Canada does not unduly discriminate against the United States within the meaning of our tariff act of 1909, and with all due deference we beg to express our sense that it is the duty of the President to proclaim the minimum tariff as to Canada on March 31, 1910; resolved that the president of this association, and the board of directors are empowered to effectuate, as far as possible, our intent herein expressed."

JUDICIAL SCOPE IS TOO GREAT

Paris, Nov. 11.—At the conclusion of the Steinheil case, Minister of Justice Barton will propose certain change of procedure in the trial courts of France. This decision was influenced largely by censure in England and America of the French methods now in vogue, through the operation of which the presiding judge appears in the role of prosecutor.

It is unlikely, however, that any effort will be made to abolish the general method of court procedure in all the latin countries, through which the examining magistrate in an exhaustive preliminary investigation collects testimony often not strictly admissible under Anglo-Saxon rules of evidence, upon which the state establishes its case against the accused.

PLANS FOR THE NAVY TO BE BROUGHT DOWN IMMEDIATELY

Announcement Made in Connection With Speech From Throne at Opening of Dominion Parliament To-day —Other Matters Referred to.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—The second session of the seventh Parliament of Canada was opened by the Governor-General this afternoon, with the usual eclat. In the Speech from the Throne His Excellency referred to Canada's rapid recovery from the financial embarrassment of a short time ago, and said all the evidences pointed to a continuance of progress and prosperity. The plans for the organization of a Canadian naval service, it was announced, would be brought down immediately. Parliament also will be asked to confirm the convention arrived at with France. Satisfaction was expressed with the progress being made with the N.T.R., and it was stated the whole of the work between Winnipeg and Moncton was now under contract. Tenders, it was also stated, would be asked shortly for the reconstruction of the Quebec bridge, and it was hoped the report of the exploratory surveys for the proposed railways to Hudsons Bay, would be ready for presentation to the House shortly.

A bill, it was announced, shortly would be submitted, authorizing the Minister of Railways to lease any line or lines connecting with the Intercolonial Railway. Measures also would be introduced to render more effective the present legislation against combines, and respecting banking, insurance, etc.

UNIQUE FRAUDS ARE EXPOSED

Berlin, Nov. 11.—A series of odd frauds upon the first provincial court of Berlin was interrupted yesterday by the arrest of Lothar Luedicke, a former court employe, and two confederates, Willy Warnicke, a professional bicyclist, and Hans Meier, a cook.

These men were in the habit of breaking into the court room late in the afternoon. By putting on judicial caps and robes they were able to deceive the janitors. At their leisure they examined the court records, making a note of the names and addresses of persons owing money to the court. Helping themselves to the forms and [illegible], they drew up the necessary documents for the collection of these debts, and, armed with forged credentials, served them in the pretended capacities of bailiffs. They collected various sums, and are known to have been successful in no less than thirty instances.

When exposed the three men were said to be planning a raid upon the Imperial Supreme Court at Leipsic.

Only Willing Workers.

London, Nov. 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.).—Major-Gen. French, interviewed in Liverpool, on arrival from Canada, contrasted conditions which exist in Canada, as compared with the Mother Country, and said that even deck laborers earned 12 shillings a day. He emphasized the fact that only these willing to work and adapt themselves to new surroundings were wanted in Canada.

WHAT WE ARE COMING TO

The following concluding paragraph from the "leading article" of the Globe of Wednesday, Nov. 10, 1909, will probably astound all those whose sense of morality has not become blunted by extreme selfishness and partisanship. The Globe in so many plain but burning words, endorses the contention that China's millions must continue to go to Hell gradually in order that the cessation of opium-smoking and eating there may not be so sudden and complete as to disturb the revenue derived from it by British India. It is so amazing, this article of the Globe's, that it calls for general comment and severe reprobation from the press of Canada that one of its leading journals should prostitute its pages to the advocacy of the opium slave-traffic of China:

(From the Globe.)

"Recent overtures and negotiations looking toward the suppression of the traffic led to an agreement, in 1906, under which Britain consented upto a gradual prohibitory law. As opium is still one of India's chief sources of revenue, a sudden suppression of the trade would cause serious derangements. The policy adopted in China under the agreement seems to be doing the work of suppression too rapidly. The trade has been curtailed to a greater extent than has been provided for. The result has been a protest to the Chinese Government from the British Minister at Pekin. The situation is not without serious difficulties, but these can be overcome by care and patience. The Chinese have shown that they can adopt a prohibition policy that will be effectual. The British Government is quite willing that it be adopted, provided its application is sufficiently gradual to avert serious financial disturbances in India. If the Chinese reformers can be made to restrain their enthusiasm and keep within the terms already agreed upon with the British Government, success will be assured. It must be remembered that the nations interested are recovering from a mistake, and it would be most unfortunate if they were to fall into another equally serious."

It will be a long time, we hope, before the fellow of this paragraph will be presented to the gaze of Canadians:—

"The policy adopted in China under the agreement seems to be doing the work of suppression too rapidly."—(The Globe).

The people of Canada are entitled to know who wrote this infamous apology for crime.

THE ENEMY OF MANKIND

Last July a congress for the investigation of, and to report upon "the alcohol question" was convened in old London. It was not an ordinary congress. It was not made up of delegates pledged beforehand to vote against wine and the wine-bibber. It was a congress of delegates named by the governments of twenty-five of the chief nations of the world. After an elaborate, scientific and economic examination of the case for and against alcohol, the conclusion reached was so decidedly against it as a beverage or condiment, that it was named then and there "the enemy of mankind." Socially, it was considered a destroyer of domestic peace, and the ruin of the family. Economically, alcohol in the form of whiskey and beer entailed, it was said, the downright and total waste of an unbelievable sum annually, to say nothing of the energies thereby paralyzed, and the lives destroyed. Scientifically, it was declared to be a poison, and to be used only as poisons are used. Poisons are not prescribable at will. They are fatal, if not taken as required. A little goes a long way. Scientifically, it is, therefore, not to be recommended. Mechanical alcohol is, of course, a deadly poison.

The Congress decided that alcohol was worse than all forms of disease combined. It was the above-all-others "enemy of mankind."

The question is, therefore, not merely one for temperance "lecturers" to make a living out of, as is sometimes said; nor for "enthusiasts to go to extremes about. It is one for serious and immediate consideration by municipalities and the people, and as such is on a par with the question of the public health and the public safety. No greater improvement could be made in the finances and prosperity of Canada in half a century by all other means combined than by the sudden and permanent cessation of "drinking." It is hard to realize all this, but it is not an extreme view. It is the simple fact, and as such we must consider it, apart from the "fuss and flurry" of people who often antagonize rather than convince.

THE VICE OF FREE TRADE

"The shadow of unemployment is abroad, and the inclement weather intensifies it. Challenged as to what the Government will do, Mr. Asquith said on Tuesday that they are busy bringing Labor exchanges into operation, the Unemployed Workmen Act is to be renewed, and £200,000 is to be voted towards the expenses of local bodies in providing useful works. And they are further watching the course of events. We refer elsewhere to the views of the new director of the Labour Exchanges on this vital topic." Public Opinion, Eng.

Free Trade and Protection both have their defects, but the defect in Free Trade is it means the cheapening of labor in the labor market. That is its chief quality and characteristic. Hence it means immense riches on the one hand as in Great Britain and indescribable poverty on the other. There is a great "gulf fixed" between.

Protection before all things means the improvement of the worker's condition. It declines to bow to the natural requirements of trade and raises artificial barriers to protect the wage-earner. Hence it may mean, sometimes, as it does, dearer goods, but it means a happier mass of the people. Monopolies mergers, trusts, etc., may exist or arise anywhere under either Free Trade or Protection, but the principle of free trade must be violated to permit of interference with that freedom while it is the essence of protection that they should not be permitted.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Colorado orchard owners raise the temperature when in fear of frost by smudge-pots filled with waste and crude oil.

"The able man who has come up from the ranks is always an interesting sociological study."—The Globe. Indeed!

It seems that the thin edge of the wedge to introduce the navy has not been thin enough. It is now proposed to make it a little thinner, but it is already too thin. Eh! What!

A motor travelling to Port Hope with cyclometer attachment made the distance from the centre of this city to the centre of that village exactly 29 1-2 miles. It used to be called a 32 mile drive.

The Globe is trying to stampede Canadians into the crazy Canadian navy dilemma by saying that to contribute to an imperial navy is to pay "tribute." This is the Globe's way of describing our sentiment of loyalty to the empire.

It is generally agreed by the press of Canada that the proposed Laurier "Independent Canadian Navy" policy must first get the approval of the people. It is expensive and unimperial. To retain the right of saying when it shall fight is "independence."

The Globe is now showering the Conservative party and press with mud because it does not agree with Laurier's Independent Canadian Navy Policy. The aforesaid party are now two-faced, treacherous, hypercritical, with a policy for every province, etc., etc. At the same time the said party and press are not crazy enough to endorse the Liberal Navy plan.

A woman cannot be true to herself or our modern society, which is an exclusive male society, with laws written by men, and with accusers and judges who regard women's actions from man's point of view.

"There will be a new nobility. Not the nobility of gold nor of money, of talent, or of knowledge. The nobility of the future will be the nobility of courage and of will."—Ibsen.

It would be "funny" to have the world of women separated from the world of men throughout life just as in a quakers' meeting. The poor old world would "bust" for sure.

The following extract from a late work gives an excellent idea of "evolution" as at present considered:—

"The real makers of species are the inherent properties of protoplasm and the laws of variation and heredity. These determine the nature of organism: natural selection and the like factors merely decide for each particular organism whether it shall survive and give rise to a species. The way in which natural selection does its work is comparatively easy to understand. But this is only the fringe of the territory which we call evolution.

"We seem to be tolerably near a solution of the problem of the causes of the survival of any particular mutation. This, however, is merely a side issue. The real problem is the cause of variations and mutations, or, in other words, how species originate. At present our knowledge of the causes of variation and mutation is practically nil. We do not even know along what particular lines mutations occur.

"We have yet to discover whether one mutation leads to another along the same lines—in other words, whether mutating organisms behave as though they had behind them a force acting in definite direction. The solutions of these problems seems afar off. The work of solving them lies, not in the speculations in which biologists of to-day are so fond of indulging, but in observation and experiment, especially the last. The future of biology is largely in the hands of the practical breeder."

Getting Used to it

They say a man can get accustomed to anything, and if this is true, Arthur Lewis, of Newtonville, should be growing accustomed to having his leg broken, for the same leg has been fractured no less than five times in the last five years. On Friday the fifth break occurred by his being thrown from a cart in which he was training a colt. The fracture this time is between the thigh and the knee.

Speaking to the London Canadian Club, R. L. Borden said that the Canadian form of government is the best system of democratic government yet devised.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning offerings were 1100 cattle, 800 sheep, 800 lambs, 1200 hogs and 500 calves. An easy feeling prevailed for cattle, and especially so for the lower grades, owing to the continued liberal supplies coming forward. A large percentage of the stock offered consisted of northwest ranchers, of which several carloads were sold at 3¾c per lb., but these only averaged 950 lbs. each, while carloads of heavier stock brought 4¼c, and 3⅞c was bid for round lots of others, and refused. The supply was in excess of requirements, but a fair trade was done, considering the mild weather and the heavy run of stock earlier in the week. A few choice steers sold as high as 5c, but the bulk sold at 4½c to 4¾c, with good at 4c to 4¼c, and medium at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. Cows brought from 3c to 4c, and bulls were ¼c per lb. lower, at 2½c to 3¼c, while canners sold at 1¼c to 1¾c per lb. Owing to continued heavy supplies of sheep and lambs, prices have declined ¼c per lb. There was an active demand, as dealers have commenced to put them away in cold storage. Sales of sheep were made at 3¾c, and lambs at 5½c per lb. The demand for calves was good, with offerings fair, and sales were made at from $2 to $12 each. Hog supplies were larger, and demand good from packers, and prices ruled steady, with sales of selected lots from west of Toronto at $8.75, and from east of Toronto at $8.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 11.—The steamer Isaac L. Ellwood rammed the upper gate of the Poe Lock in the Sault Canal yesterday, demolishing the south leaf of the gate and placing the big lock out of commission. Two steamers and two barges in the lock were undamaged.

Capt. Cummings of the Ellwood declares that he signalled his engineer to back the engines, but that instead he went at full speed ahead. The Canadian lock can with some delay take care of traffic during the rest of the season.

NEW DAM HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Will be of Great Assistance for Trent Valley Navigation Purposes—Has Four Openings

Lindsay, Nov. 11.—The new concrete dam at the foot of Cushog lake, in the township of Snowdon has been completed. This is a very important addition to the reserve lakes of the Trent Valley Canal, as it backs up a large amount of water and will also keep navigation to the village of Haliburton.

This dam, which was started in June last, has four openings, one 12, one 15 feet, one 16 feet and one 18 feet. This was done to let the early spring freshets run as fast as they accumulate in order not to flood the land under cultivation on the shores of Cushog lake. The old structure had only two openings to let the water go through.

As soon as the spring freshet comes the water will be let back for reserve purposes to assist Trent Valley Canal navigation.

Mr. Sam Clegg of Peterborough, was the overseer and Mr. J. McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal has shown himself to be an efficient and painstaking official, ever alive to the interests of the people as well as the department he represents.

Mr. John Pearson, who is foreman of Burnt River waters, has charge of this dam and will look after its regulations.

The structure is of concrete, with large iron beams, reinforced with steel and has iron winches to raise and lower the stop logs.

The structure is splendidly built and is a great improvement over the old wooden structures which did duty on the reserve waters, and will last for all time to come.

WHY RUBBERS HAVE GONE UP IN PRICE

Increased Demand for Rubber Has Resulted in Higher Prices—More Rubber is Being Used

Peterborough people naturally would like to learn why they will likely have to pay from twenty-five to fifty per cent. more for rubbers, this winter than they did last year.

The Review has made some enquiries and has been informed that the main reason is that the demand for rubber which is secured in South Africa and South America, is constantly increasing, so that while it could be imported to this country for 25 cents per pound ten years ago, it now costs $2.20 per pound.

INCREASED DEMAND.

Again, a vast amount of rubber is being used at all kinds of factories. Formerly leather was made use of almost entirely for belting for machinery, but now rubber can be used, and is being used to a larger extent.

A local merchant stated to-day:—"I have been in this business for eleven years, and can remember when a pair of woman's rubbers could be secured for 30 cents. Now you have to pay 65 cents, and the retail dealer makes no more profit. There are a couple of big rubber factories at Montreal, three at Berlin, one at Granby, Quebec, one at Port Dalhousie—in which case their goods are sold from Toronto—and perhaps a few others.

"So far as I know none of the Canadian factories are in any way affiliated or connected with the American companies, some of whom are said to be in a merger. I do not think any American rubbers are sold in Peterborough. The Canadian retail trade is supplied from the Canadian factories, at least to a large extent."

MAKES HAIR GROW

Wm. Madill Has an Invigorator That Makes Hair Grow in Abundance or Money Back

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of the hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this: It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root.

Parisian Sage is sold by Wm. Madill, druggist, of Peterborough, under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first-class town in Canada. A large generous bottle costs 50 cents, and the girl with Auburn hair is on every bottle.

NORWOOD FARMERS' CLUB MET

Forty Members in Attendance at Opening Gathering—Interesting Paper Was Read

Special to Review.

Norwood, Nov. 10.—About forty farmers were in attendance at the first meeting of the Norwood Farmers' Club, which was held in the Norwood Council Chamber on Tuesday evening of this week. Considering the fact that the season is unusually busy because of the late harvest, the number present speaks well for the future of the club and for the progressiveness of the Norwood agriculturists.

In opening the meeting President Jas. Andrews briefly outlined the object of the club and urged those present to seize the opportunities offered for acquiring greater knowledge in the science and practice of agriculture. The club afforded a golden chance to the members to qualify themselves for platform speaking and this Mr. Andrews considered to be no mean feature of the semi monthly meetings.

A paper read by Andrew Knox on "Preparation of Stables for the Winter" showed very careful preparation. Mr. Knox, in pointing out the value of well lighted, clean stables, laid emphasis upon the value of sunlight in the destruction of disease germs. In his opinion the windows in the average stable were altogether too small. Mr. Knox gave particular attention to the ventilation of stables and ably outlined the advantages and disadvantages of the muslin-curtain, King and Rutherford systems. Either the King or the Rutherford system were none too expensive for the man with a paying herd but lack of means should not prevent a farmer from fitting his stables with some means, however cheap or crude, for providing his domestic animals with wholesome air.

Following the discussion on the points brought out by Mr. Knox, H. C. Duff gave a short address on "The Growing of Alfalfa." After securing the experience of those present who had grown or attempted to grow this valuable crop, Mr. Duff outlined the necessary preparation of the soil to ensure a good catch, and showed the value of inoculating the seed with nitrogen gathering bacteria. He recommended the crop for the high dry hills common to many sections of the county and claimed that the growing of alfalfa would greatly lessen the cost of feeding stock.

The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, November 23. G. A. Brethen will read a paper on "Feeding the Dairy Cow."

THE VALUE OF COW TESTING

The Means of Finding Which Cow Pays Best—Definite Knowledge Needed

Farmers, do you keep records? It is doubtful if there is any one thing that will add more to the interest of farm labour, or make its usefulness more apparent in shorter time than one simple method of figuring. For instance, supposing that mixed farming is followed, an answer is desired to the query, which pays best, sheep, poultry, fruit, cows, steers or grain? It may be found after a year's record that the farm is best adapted for dairying. Then will naturally follow the investigation, which cow pays best? This phase of the question has not yet appealed to all owners of dairy herds, but is in truth at the very foundation of profitable dairying. Every farmer is interested in cutting out all unprofitable features of his business; he wants to produce plenty of good milk at the least cost, and to this end dairy records are indispensable. Why? Simply because they enable the watchful owner to detect those cows that give the most milk and fat in proportion to the feed consumed. Which cows will respond to a little extra grain? Which cow can at least afford to sell? Are any in my herd not paying? Will it pay me to get a good pure bred sire? The dairyman needs to know such points definitely, hence he must keep records of feed and milk. Forms are supplied free on application to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa.

To wash colored muslins, linens or lawns, first make a strong suds with Taylor's Borax Soap and luke warm water. Wet but one piece at a time. Unless the article is very much soiled, do not run the soap directly on the article. Rub gently with the hands until perfectly clean. Wring out the clothes, and rinse thoroughly in water of the same temperature as that previously used. Never boil colored clothes. A very little Taylor's Borax Soap added to boiled starch will prevent it from sticking, and makes the clothes iron smoother and easier.

Mr. Marn's Secret

This is the season of new books and the temptation to buy them is very strong, for they look so interesting and inviting in their pretty covers and dainty illustrations. Amongst those that are selling the best, and one of the cleverest that has appeared for some time is "Mr. Warn's Secret," by E. Phillips Oppenheim. It is published by Ward, Lock & Company, an English firm who have a branch in Toronto. The story is very interesting, and deals with the subject of dual personality, and it is well worth the reading.

The book sells at $1.25, and may be bought at all the bookstores in the city. As this firm are well known as only publishing the best class of books this fact alone would bring to the notice of the public "Mr. Warn's Secret."

ALL SAINTS' ANNUAL DINNER AN ENCOURAGING SUCCESS

There was a veritable congestion of dinner-seekers at the annual dinner under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of All Saints' at the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, last night. The ladies waiting on the table had a particularly busy evening in looking after the requirements of the guests, but the volunteer waiting corps was a large and efficient one, and the greatest compliment that can be given is to say that the dinner and the service were fully up to All Saints' unapproachable standard. The ladies of the Guild report that the receipts this year are larger than ever, and the success of the affair was most encouraging and gratifying in every respect.

If the patronage of the dinner keeps increasing it will be difficult to accommodate the crowds, for last night the stairs at the Foresters' Hall were crowded with people from the third storey along the hall on the second storey and half way down on the stairs from the entrance door, to say nothing of the crowded tables in the dining room.

Those in charge of the different tables in the dining room were: Mrs. Johnson and Miss Wills; Mrs. Corcoran and Miss Mellevike; Mrs. Johnson and Miss Rennett; Mrs. Pierce and Mrs. Morgan; Mrs. Metheral and Mrs. Sharmon; Mrs. Hogan and Mrs. Fuller; Mrs. Wolstenholm and Miss Sabin.

SALE OF WORK.

A pleasing and successful feature in connection with the dinner was the annual sale of work, conducted under the auspices of the Girls' Guild of All Saints'. An especially attractive list of dainty offerings were exhibited in this department, many new ideas and conceits in fancy work, not evident in other seasons, being conspicuous in the attractive array. The sale of the work was an excellent one.

The tables were in charge of the following:—Fancy work, Miss Kearns, Mrs. Brewer and Miss Brown; apron table, Miss Koen, Miss Lacheur and Miss Bullen; candy table, Miss Duggan, Miss Buller and Miss Blois.

INTERESTING PROGRAMME

Dinner was served from 5.30 till after 8 o'clock, and at its conclusion those assembled adjourned to the concert hall, where a bright and interesting programme was provided. The audience was a particularly large one and showed its appreciation by its cordial reception of the various numbers. Rev. H. R. Trumpour was in the chair and introduced those contributing to the programme, and in a short and well-timed opening address thanked those in attendance for their splendid patronage.

The programme was as follows—

Instrumental—Miss Sisson.
Vocal Solo—Mr. H. Lea.
Instrumental—The Misses Dawson.
Vocal Solo—Mr. K. Shook.
Banjo Selection—Mr. F. R. Clarke.
Vocal Solo—Miss Ruth Dawson.
Recitation—Mr. J. Johns.

Brief congratulatory addresses were given by Rev. F. J. Lynch, of Toronto, and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's.

Rev. Mr. Lynch told the congregation that they were undertaking a big enterprise in the building of the new church, but admonished them to be of good courage and take St. Anne's in Toronto as an example.

Dr. Langfeldt spoke very happily, congratulating the ladies on the success of the dinner, and expressing his sincere pleasure at the prosperity of All Saints'.

Blacklister Secured Liquor in a Novel Way-Was Fined $10,00

Nathan Stabler was fined $10 in the Police Court this morning for being found intoxicated on Hallowe'en. His name appears on the prohibited list. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused and pleaded guilty to the charge and after the conviction was made, by his Worship, Stapler was asked to go in the witness box and tell where he secured the liquor. Mr. Gordon objected to this evidence being taken after the conviction had been made, but while, the Magistrate decided against Mr. Gordon, he noted the objection.

"Where did you get your liquor," asked Mr. Jos. Stewart, license inspector.

"I got it in the rear of O'Shea's hotel. I found an eight gallon keg of whiskey with a cup lying near by. There was no tap in the keg, but by driving a nail into it, I was able to get a few drinks. The keg had not been placed there by any arrangement and I drank alone."

Another charge, that of using profane language in a public place, was also preferred and a fine of $2 and costs amounting in all to $5.75, was imposed.

WEDDING BELLS

SEXSMITH—BUCHANAN

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Buchanan, on Wednesday, Nov. 3rd, when their daughter, Miss Bessie, became the wife of Mr. John A. Sexsmith, M.P., of Belmont township.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. A. Brown, M.A., B.D. in the presence of about fifty guests. Precisely at 11.30 the groom took his place in the spacious dining room which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. A few minutes later the bride, attended by her father, entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mr. Val. S. Collinson in his usual brilliant, masterly style. She wore an elegant princess gown of cream duchess satin, en train, richly trimmed with lace and pearls, also a bridal veil with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

After the usual congratulations the guests repaired to the dining room where the tables were decorated with carnations and chrysanthemums, and sat down to a sumptuous wedding breakfast. After this had been partaken of Rev. G. A. Brown rose and after speaking in the highest complimentary terms of the bride, proposed that all should rise and drink to her health. The groom, Mr. George McCartney of Bethany, and Mr. Sharp of Westwood, responded to this toast, the two latter testifying to the manliness, integrity and high abilities of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Sexsmith left by the 5.06 train for a short trip to some of the western cities. The bride's travelling dress was a bleu-gri chiffon broadcloth with smart tailored hat to match, and she wore a handsome set of mink furs.

Some of the guests from a distance were; Mr. and Mrs. G. McCartney of Bethany; Mr. and Mrs. McNeil and Miss McNeil and Mrs. Anderson, of Keene; Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Sexsmith of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Barton of Norwood; Mr. and Mrs. Doupe of Trent Bridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Sharp of Westwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Sexsmith will reside in Ottawa during the session.

Two Names Were Added This Morning--One Asked to be Prohibited

There are now 65 persons on the blacklist. Two names were added this morning; one being that of an old man, at his own request, and another, that of a farmer residing in Smith, at the request of his wife. This is about the largest number License Inspector Stewart has had to deal with. While new names are continually being added, others are taken off and there are very few cases where a second notice is required to be served.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

LUCKY "13" FOR MISS JOHNSON

Marion Pollock Johnson, leading lady of "The Wolf," which appears here next week, will be pleasantly remembered by local theatre-goers as the original "Shirley Rossmore" in "The Lion and the Mouse" when it was first presented here. Miss Johnson has had a vast experience for one so young and the fact that she played the part of Shirley Rossmore thirteen hundred times without missing a performance is phenomenal dating from May, 1905, to May, 1909, inclusive. Miss Johnson states that to become a good actress one must first go into a stock company, where one gets different line of parts to play on short notice.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

Those interested in the success of the evangelistic services are greatly pleased with the steady increase in number and interest in the services at St. Paul's. Last night there was a splendid attendance and deep interest. The hymns were sung with much fervor and during the offertory Mr. McIlroy sang in excellent voice "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." Mr. MacBeth's subject last evening was from the 2nd chapter of the Acts, where the people moved by the great scenes of Penticost cried out to the Apostles, "Men and brethren what shall we do?" The speaker said that the outpouring of the gift of the Spirit at Pentecost was evidence for fact that Jesus had reached the Heavenly Home because He had promised to send the Spirit when He would return to the place of glory. Pentecost with its spiritual blessing in abundance was not a special but a specimen day for the church and we ought to expect such blessings wherever we come with one accord into one place. The question of the text implies an awakened and anxious state of mind. The people saw others awakened and rejoicing and they cried out in eagerness looking for the same joy and life. God had done His part and they wished to know what they should do to get the blessing. So it is to-day. God had done all He can do for us whose will are left free. He will not coerce or force us and hence we must act ourselves or be lost. God has revealed Himself, He has shown us our sins in their reality by the light of conscience and the Bible. He has shown us that "the wages of sin is death," but He has always shown us that we can have the salvation He grants in Jesus Christ. In answer to the cry of the people, Peter said; "Repent and be baptised for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Repentance was more than were sorrow for wrongdoing that had been unveiled, It was grief over it and a determination to stop sinning. Christ would help us to conquer sin if we were in earnest. The coming into the church, as Peter said, would be a source of strength to men in their fight against sin. We did not join a church because we were good enough but because we were bad enough to need all the help we could get. Let us avail ourselves of the refreshment from the wells of salvation so that we can continue without fainting on the journey of life.

Mr. Pogue announced the meeting for boys and girls on Friday at 4.15 to which all who come are welcomed. There will be some special hymns for the young.

Only two evening meetings remain of the mission, Thursday and Friday evenings, and a large attendance is looked for.

At St. Andrew's Church

There was a very large meeting at St. Andrew's church last night to hear Rev. Mr. Atkinson deliver his special sermon to men in middle life. The male choir was present again, and rendered an excellent program of music.

Rev. Mr. Atkinson spoke from Acts 4.22. The man was about forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was wrought. The speaker described the midlife as being the plateau of life. Youth was the ascent, old age the descent. Between these extremes the level of the years.

This period was characterized by fixity of habit, monotony of habit, monotony of past and a decline of spiritual vision. The danger of this period lay in the immobility of character. Men were not moved by passion or devotion. The sins of middle life were not those of passion but of deliberation. Along with this was often found a decline of faith. The things that are temporal and material submerge the eternal and spiritual. The remedy for these subtle and quiet dangers is the friendship of Jesus Christ, whose spirit keeps alive and increases the cause of faith and hope and love.

Many a man has been wrecked on the reef at forty. A hidden danger unseen beneath the surface of the quiet seas of midlife. Then as at every other time the controlling influence of Christ is needed in the life.

On Friday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock a meeting for children will be held in St. Paul's church.

The closing meetings in all the churches will be held on Friday night.

Knox Church

There was a fine meeting in Knox church last night and an attendance and interest which is very encouraging. It is evident that there is an increase in power from evening to evening and last evening many felt the refreshing. The climax was reached when the pastor, Mr. Keith, in the stillness that might be felt asked as all heads were bowed that all should subscribe with their hand unto the Lord, thus dedicating themselves to the Lord Jesus Christ. Almost the whole congregation responded, among whom were a goodly number whose act was the proclamation that they had come into the light and had for the first time given themselves to Christ.

The address of Dr. Farquharson was a warm and earnest appeal for an open and frank confession of Jesus. His text was "Whosoever will I also confess before my Father which is in Heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men him will I also deny before my Father which is in Heaven." He pressed this claim that there are no Christians who do not show it. There are Christians outside the recognized church, but none whose new life is invisible. The life cannot exist without expression any more than fire can exist without heat and light. Try to hide it; curtail its expression to even various limits and the candle is snuffed out when the life dies. Even if you could seal up a soul that no life would come from it all through life, if you could give it as it were a through ticket to heaven, what would be the use of it? A soldier who never turned up on the day of battle would be useless to his king or country. The speaker drew a vivid picture of the heroes who at the field of Waterloo stood in the face of such stern work, and he appealed to all present to take their place in the ranks of the mighty Host which was mustering under their leader to do His work, fight His battles and manifest His Spirit.

There will be another meeting this evening when the subject will be "The Power of the Water of Life." It is hoped and expected that the interest will go on increasing to the end and that through these services a rich refreshing will be received.

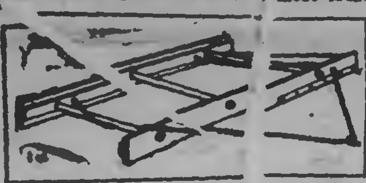
COUNTRY ROAD DRAG.

Practical Device Which Has Been Tried With Success.

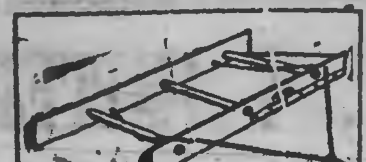
Good country roads in this growing country have become a necessity. The era of "getting stuck in the mud" in the lanes and being compelled to take rails from a fence to pry out the wagon has passed out in most localities. Still, in order to have good roads the farmers must see to it that they are kept in good condition. To accomplish this there are numerous devices, some satisfactory, some otherwise.



PERSPECTIVE OF PLANK DRAG.

One that has been tried out in the Dakotas and that has created talk in the western agricultural districts is known as the "King drag." The accompanying cuts, the one showing a plank drag, the other a split log drag, will give an idea of the device.

The drag is made of heavy plank or a split log. As shown in the picture, these are attached three feet apart and dragged diagonally along the road. In this way they do the good work of a road scraper without its faults. They do not plow, as the road machine often does, but scrape and level. Roads are ruined by leaving ruts and rough places for the water to stand. If these are leveled this water drains off and the road dries. The "King drag" has proved very useful in many sections where farmers use it regularly to keep the surface of the road smooth.



VIEW OF SPLIT LOG DRAG.

Hints For Stock Owners.

Shear the sheep early.

Dip the sheep immediately after shearing and again in about three weeks to destroy eggs and all ticks that may have escaped at the first dipping.

The lambs should be dipped at the same time, for when the ewes are shorn the ticks flock on to the lambs.

Do not leave them out in the spring rains.

When a cow is a little off never put her milk in with the rest.

Apply the Babcock test and be guided by its teaching, and thou shalt have gold both to spend and to lend.

If the young pigs should show signs of looseness of the bowels, shut off all feed to the sow but dry oats for a day or two, and the trouble will usually disappear.

Blind the hogs that have the habit of eating chickens by hanging a strip of tin four inches by eight inches in size from their ears. This will stop them when almost everything else has failed.

The newborn colt must have milk during the first half hour of its life or the chances are that it will die.

See that the colt is strong enough to start the milk. If it is not, help it.

The first milk is necessary, as it causes the bowels to move naturally.

If there is any serious constipation, give a little castor oil or give injections of soap and warm water.

Keep the mare quiet and feed carefully for a week or ten days, when she may be turned in pasture, but only for a short time at first.

If the mare does not have milk enough, cow's milk may be given to help out, but it must be done with common sense.

Very rich milk should not be used.

Value of Humus.

Humus in the soil has seldom been taken at its full worth. The mission which it fulfills is second in importance only to that which is fulfilled by the presence of plant food in the soil. Humus is helpful in keeping soil in proper mechanical balance, in binding soils that are much prone to blow, in increasing the power of soils to absorb and hold moisture.

When the humus is exhausted in a soil its mechanical condition suffers. It becomes more impacted, less easily aerated and less easily penetrated by the roots of plants. Some soils so light as to lift with the wind can be kept from blowing, at least in a great measure, by simply keeping them stored with grass, roots or other vegetable matter buried in the soil. The increase in the power of soils to hold moisture is very great when well stored with humus. When commercial fertilizers are sown on land they will fail to respond properly unless the land is supplied with humus.

Such being the case, every effort should be made to store the land with humus. It would be possible to have an excess of humus, but in practice this seldom happens. Humus may be put into the soil in the form of clover roots, of grass roots, of buried catch crops and barnyard manure.

Hidden Skin Troubles

Have you on some part of your body a sore, or eruption, or ulcer, or eczemous patch which, hidden from the gaze of others, yet causes you hours and hours of pain and inconvenience? Have you tried this, and that, and the other remedy in vain, and are you feeling disheartened and discouraged? If so read the following instances of Zam-Buk's healing power, and apply it to your case:

"I had an ulcerated leg for several years. The ulcers spread all round the limb, which was swollen to nearly twice its normal size. Several doctors treated me. One suggested amputation. None did me any good. Zam-Buk healed the sores!" So says Mrs. Gilmour, of Princess St., Kingston. Or, read this:—

"My mother tried many things for abscesses and eruptions, but in vain. In Zam-Buk she found a complete cure." So says Miss A. Coggill, of Wapella (Sask.).

Sufferers from these "Hidden Skin Troubles" of any nature should profit by such experiences as this. Zam-Buk is seen at its best when applied to cases which have defied ordinary treatment. Write for trial box, and test it at our expense

ZAM-BUK

THE GREAT SKIN-CURE.

ZAM-BUK AND A MIRACLE OF HEALING

Over and over again Zam-Buk has performed a miracle of healing when applied to sores and skin injuries which have refused to heal under any other form of treatment. Why not let it heal your trouble? Immediately Zam-Buk is applied to a sore or wound or diseased portion of flesh it commences its work in two directions. It anoints the exterior, and its antiseptic properties prevent any germs and bacilli from creating trouble. Then the herbal essences and juices so finely purified and concentrated, penetrate the subjacent layers and stimulate the weakened or diseased cells to active, healthy operation. These cells then put forth their "Building" products and replace the diseased outer layer with fresh and healthy tissue. By degrees the whole diseased surface is thus replaced by new healthy skin.

In this way Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, bruises, ulcers, abscesses, itch, eczema, eruptions, pustules, scurvy, salt rheum, blood poison, and other forms of skin trouble. Zam-Buk also cures piles, varicose ulcers, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c per box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes $2.50.

Kirkwood waited in patient attention till she chose to continue. When she did, "Now for my side of the case!" cried Mrs. Hallam, and, rising, began to pace the room, her slender and rounded figure swaying gracefully the while she talked.

"George Calendar is a scoundrel," she said, "a swindler, gambler—what I believe you Americans call a confidence man. He is also my late husband's first cousin. Some years since he found it convenient to [illegible] England, likewise his wife and daughter. Mrs. Calendar—a countrywoman of yours, by the bye—died shortly afterward. Dorothy, by the merest accident, obtained a situation as private secretary in the household of the late Colonel Burgoyne of The Cliffs, Cornwall. You follow me?"

"Yes, perfectly."

"Colonel Burgoyne died, leaving his estates to my son, some time ago. Shortly afterward Dorothy Calendar disappeared. We know now that her father took her away, but then the disappearance seemed inexplicable, especially since with her vanished a great deal of valuable information. She alone knew of the location of certain of the old colonel's personal effects.

"He was an eccentric. One of his peculiarities involved the secreting of valuables in odd places. He had no faith in banks. Among these valuables were the Burgoyne family jewels—quite a treasure, believe me, Mr. Kirkwood. We found no note of them among the colonel's papers and without Dorothy were powerless to pursue a search for them. We advertised and employed detectives, with no result. It seems that father and daughter were at Monte Carlo at the time."

"Beautifully circumstantial, my dear lady," commented Kirkwood to his inner consciousness. Outwardly he maintained consistently a pose of impassive gullibility.

"This afternoon for the first time we received news of the Calendars. Calendar himself called upon me to beg a loan. I explained our difficulty, and he promised that Dorothy should send us the information by the morning's post. When I insisted he agreed to bring it himself after dinner this evening. I make it quite clear?" she interrupted, a little anxious.

"Scotland Yard," he told her bluntly.

"Quite clear, I assure you," he assented encouragingly.

"Strangely enough, he had not been gone ten minutes when my son came in from a conference with our solicitors, informing me that at last a memorandum had turned up, indicating that the heirlooms would be found in a safe secreted behind a dresser in Colonel Burgoyne's bedroom."

"At No. 9 Frognall street."

"Yes. I proposed going there at once, but it was late, and we were dining at the Pless with an acquaintance, a Mr. Mulready, whom I now recall as a former intimate of George Calendar. To our surprise, we saw Calendar and his daughter at a table not far from ours. Mr. Mulready betrayed some agitation at the sight of Calendar and told me that Scotland Yard had a man out with a warrant for Calendar's arrest on old charges. For old sake's sake Mr. Mulready begged me to give Calendar a word of warning. I did so—foolishly, it seems. Calendar was at that moment planning to rob us, Mulready aiding and abetting him."

The woman paused before Kirkwood looking down upon him. "And so," she concluded, "we have been tricked and swindled. I can scarcely believe it of Dorothy Calendar."

"I, for one, don't believe it." Kirkwood spoke quickly, rising. "Whatever the culpability of Calendar and Mulready, Dorothy was only their hoodwinked tool."

"But, Mr. Kirkwood, she must have known the jewels were not hers."

"Yes," he assented passively, but wholly unconvinced.

"And what," she demanded, with a gesture of exasperation—"what would you advise?"

"Scotland Yard," he told her bluntly.

"But it's a family secret. It must not appear in the papers. Don't you understand? George Calendar is my husband's cousin!"

"I can think of nothing else unless you pursue them in person."

"But whither?"

"That remains to be discovered. I can tell you nothing more than I have. May I thank you for your hospitality, express my regrets that I should unwittingly have been made the agent of this disaster and wish you good night or, rather, good morning, Mrs. Hallam?"

For a moment she held him under a calculating glance, which he withstood with graceless fortitude. Then, realizing that he was determined not by any means to be won to her cause, she gave him her hand, with a commonplace wish that he might find his affairs in better order than seemed probable, and rang for Eccles.

The butler showed him out.

"Well," appreciated Mr. Kirkwood, with gusto, "she's got Ananias and Sapphira talked to a standstill, all right!" He ruminated over this for a moment. "Calendar can lie some, too, but hardly with her picturesque touch. Uncommon ingenious, I call it. All the same, there were only about a dozen bits of tiling that didn't fit into her mosaic a little bit. I think they're all tarred with the same stick—all but the girl. And there's something afoot a long sight more devilish and crafty than that shilling shocker of madam's. Dorothy Calendar's got about as much active part in it as I have. I'm only from California, but they've got to show me before I'll believe a word against her. Those infernal scoundrels! Somebody's got to be on the girl's side, and I seem to have drawn the lucky straw. Good heavens! Is it possible for a grown man to fall heels over head in love in two short hours? I don't believe it. It's just interest—nothing more. And I'll have to have a change of clothes before I can do anything further."

He struck across town as directly as might be for St. Pancras station. It would undoubtedly be a long walk, but cabs were prohibited by his straitened means, and the buses were all abed and wouldn't be astir for hours.

He strode along rapidly, finding his way more through intuition than by observation or familiarity with London's geography—indeed, was scarce aware of his surroundings, for his brain was big with fine imagery, rapt in a glowing dream of knight errantry and chivalric deeds.

CHAPTER XIII.

KIRKWOOD wasted little time. He had not much to waste were he to do that upon whose doing he had set his heart. It irked him sore to have to lose the invaluable moments demanded by certain imperative arrangements, but his haste was such that all was consummated within an hour.

Within the period of a single hour, then, he had ransomed his luggage at St. Pancras, caused it to be loaded upon a four wheeler and transferred to a neighboring hotel of evil flavor, but moderate tariff, where he engaged a room for a week, ordered an immediate breakfast and retired with his belongings to his room. He had shaved and changed his clothes, selecting a serviceable suit of heavy tweeds, stout shoes, a fore and aft cap and a negligee shirt of a deep shade, calculated at least to seem clean for a long time. Finally he had devoured his bacon and eggs, gulped down his coffee and burned his mouth and, armed with a stout stick, set off hotfoot in the still dim glimmering of early day.

By this time his cash capital had dwindled to the sum of £2 10s. 8d. and would have been much less had he paid for his lodging in advance.

At King's Cross station on the underground an acute disappointment awaited him. There likewise he learned something about London. A sympathetic bobby informed him that no trains would be running until after 5:30 and that, furthermore, no buses would begin to ply until half after 7.

"It's tramp it or cab it, then," mused the young man mournfully, his longing gaze seeking a nearby cab rank, just then occupied by a solitary hansom, driver somnolent on the box. "Officer"—he again addressed the policeman, mindful of the English axiom, "When in doubt ask a bobby"—"officer, when's high tide this morning?"

The bobby produced a well worn pocket almanac, moistened a massive thumb and rippled the pages.

"London bridge, 'igh tide twenty minutes arfter 6, sir," he announced, with a glow of satisfaction wholly pardonable in one who combines the functions of perambulating almanac, guidebook, encyclopedia and conserver of the peace.

Kirkwood said something beneath his breath, a word in itself a comfortable mouthful and wholesome and emphatic. He glanced again at the cab and groaned, "O Lord, I just dassent!" with which, thanking the bureau of information, he set off rapidly down Grey's Inn road to find the Alethea before she sailed. Proceeding upon the working hypothesis that Mrs. Hallam was a polished liar in most respects, but had told the truth so far as concerned her statement to the effect that the gladstone bag contained valuable property, whose ownership remained a moot question, though Kirkwood was definitely committed to the belief that it was none of Mrs. Hallam's or her son's, he reasoned that the two adventurers, with Dorothy and their booty, would attempt to leave London by a water route in the ship Alethea, whose name had fallen from their lips at Bermondsey Old Stairs.

WEDDING BELLS

McCOLL—THOMPSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Thompson, Riverview, South Monaghan, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 27th, when their eldest daughter, Nellie Valentine, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. David C. McColl of Westwood. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Weatherill of Frazerville in the presence of about thirty of the young friends of the contracting parties. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk striped voille with torchon lace and insertion. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Eliza Thompson, who was dressed in cream voille trimmed with lace and insertion, while John W. McColl, nephew of the groom, acted as best man. Mrs. McColl received some very handsome presents among which was a beautiful gold watch and fob from the groom. The bride's travelling dress was a suit of navy blue ladies' cloth with hat to match. After a sumptuous wedding feast was partaken of the rest of the evening was spent in games and music until about 8.30 o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. McColl left for their future home in Westwood, amid cheers and best wishes of their many friends.

PAPER ON SYSTEMATIC GIVING

The following paper on "Systematic Giving" was read by Miss Udy, of Bridgenorth, at the W. M. S. convention at Lakefield on Oct. 28th.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

In considering the question of systematic giving one writer has said; "So general is the awakening upon the subject as scarcely to have escaped the casual observer." To use a common expression, "It is in the air." Believers are honestly asking; "What are the principles of Christian stewardship, and what is the revealed plan for proportionate benevolence?"

In the first place systematic giving is an old plan. The ancient Jew gave under the Mosaic law, first his tithe or income tax; then his vow or free-will offering; and the annual feast collections. Nor were these all for special provision was also made for the poor; so that all included, the annual tax of the Jew has been estimated to have averaged one-third—and some say one-half—of his entire income. Thus we see no careless, supine way of giving but a systematic plan. I fear many to-day would consider such a tax upon a man's income as ruinous, but it was not so in the case of the Israelites, for coupled with the Divine command, we find that there were affixed expressly revealed temporal rewards for obedience, and temporal penalties for disobedience. God's promise was as follows, "If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thy heart nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother. Thou shalt surely give him and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him, because that for this thing the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thy works and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto. (Deut. 4-7 to 10). Need I say that this promise was ratified always and absolutely?

Then again we have the familiar passage found in Malachi 3, 10 and 11. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer (does that mean floods, frosts, etc?) for your sakes and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of Hosts. I wonder if there are any here to-day who are saying in their hearts; "I am glad I did not live in the days when God commanded such tremendous gifts. I am glad I was born in the Gospel dispensation. This brings us to consider the question, whether the command is as binding upon us to-day as it was upon the ancient Israelites. Abraham and Jacob gave the tithe before there was any Mosaic law, therefore the tithe was not born at the time of the Mosaic law and I cannot find any passage to prove that it was annulled when the Mosaic dispensation was merged into the Gospel. Have we not as much authority for believing in tithing as for believing in the Sabbath? Both were instituted before the giving of the law, and we have no knowledge that Jesus Christ ever annulled the one or the other. We know that He observed the Sabbath and we also know that He declared, "Ye tithe, mint and rue, and all manner of herbs and pass over judgments and the love of God; these ought ye to have done and not leave the other undone."

Besides this there is positive New Testament authority for a plan of Systematic Giving in Paul's charges to the churches, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." There is a time for setting aside our givings and a definite basis for calculating what these givings should be. Thus we see that the poor as well as the rich were to give as God had prospered him. What an impetus would be given to the work of the Lord if all the members of the church would give something. If the Church to-day had a corresponding scheme of proportionate giving, how all her languishing enterprises would be quickened and liberally sustained.

Systematic giving is a wise and needful plan. Why should we buy our clothes upon business principles and keep our butcher's and grocer's bills straight to a cent, but give to the Lord on impulse waiting for some stirring address to open our pocket-books? We say we do try to give proportionately, we think we give all we can. Why not be as sure that our accounts with God are straight as we are that our grocer's bill is paid. We pay the latter and feel that the matter is settled and yet we hesitate to so deal with God, and it may be that across our lives God has already written "There is that withholdeth more than it meet but it tendeth to poverty" (Prov. 11-24). Who knows but some of us are searching in vain for the source of our spiritual leanness, when the true cause is hidden away in our pocket-books. Failure to obey God's commands brought a curse in the old days—it brings no less a penalty to-day. We give at the rate of one cent a year for each heathen soul and yet while you and I are sitting in this church, every breath we draw four souls perish who have never heard of Christ. Once we prayed for open doors into heathen lands and God answered, and then we prayed for open hearts and to-day thousands are waiting to go to the foreign fields. Why are they not going? Because we have been so slow in learning to pray "Lord open our pockets." Let us ask ourselves "Are we as Christian women laying aside for God a proportion large enough for me to feel the giving of it to be a real sacrifice? Are we faithfully handling what God has entrusted to our care?"

Systematic Giving is a possible plan. God asks no impossibilities from his children. It is possible for us to come up to the required standard. The Moravian Church send five missionaries for every seventy members. How do the Moravians do it? May I venture to say that they have gotten away beyond the principle of tithing, that we oftentimes declare too hard a thing? Now to those who have already started to give systematically, let me say that last year's standard ought not perhaps to be the standard of this year. Are we grasping after fresh light, are we getting nearer the place where we can say "Of thine own have we given Thee." And now to those who have not already done so will you not resolve to become a proportionate giver? No matter what your income, nor from what source it comes. We all receive something. Set aside one-tenth of it. Promise the King one-tenth of the next dollar that comes to you. Do you say you can't afford it? Yes you can. If your income is scant and uncertain. God is not unreasonable. He knows and understands, and will never ask you to tithe what you have not got. You will at least have more money to spend for Christ in doing good, and as much for your own share if you do it. Does this sound more strange than that you can do more work in a year by working six days in the week than if you work seven? Thousands to-day testify to the benefits derived from the system. They say it pays, pays in spiritual blessings, pays in temporal prosperity, pays in happiness, pays in embraced opportunities for usefulness and doing good, pays in deeper, higher, broader, happier Christian experience, pays in every good sense.

Do you say you don't know your exact income? You know approximately, you know what you have to-day. Make a start and tithe that. You have your Father's promises and light will come as you need it. He will trust you if you trust Him, and oh, He will not forget all the hard financial problems. In the trying things that perplex when we are all alone and no one knows. He will take all this into account, and delegate everything. He will own and bless your faithful return of His bounty.

KATHERINE HOWARD SANDERSON

The death occurred this morning at the family residence, 181 Reid street, of Katherine Howard, relict of the late Robert Sanderson. Deceased, who was 80 years of age, had been seriously ill for the last six weeks. She was a native of Cavan township and had lived here for the past ten years, coming to Peterborough from Uxbridge. The deceased was a Methodist in religion.

Surviving are a family of eight children, seven sons and one daughter. The sons are John, of Winnipeg; Robert, of Johannesburg, S.A.; Alfred, of Greenwood, B.C.; Ephraim, of Cleveland, O.; George, of Petrolia, Ont.; Ethelred, of Forman, N.D.; and Charles, of San Francisco. The daughter is Miss May at home.

The funeral takes place on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 from the late residence to the ninth line cemetery, Cavan.

PATRICK CRANLEY.

The death occurred this afternoon at two o'clock, in St. Joseph's Hospital, of Patrick Cranley, a well known resident of Douro. Some time ago, the deceased fell on Rogers street, Ashburnham, and sustained injuries to his spine, from which he had suffered until death came to-day. He was born in Douro and was 55 years of age. Four sons are left to mourn his loss. The funeral arrangements will be given to-morrow.

C. G. E. GETS CONTRACT

Contracts for electrical pumps for the city's waterworks were awarded by the Board of Control yesterday. The tenders were opened several days ago, and in the meantime the City Engineer was preparing a report as to the tenders which should be accepted. There are eighteen electrical pumps to be installed. The tenders were surprisingly low, according to Waterworks Engineer Fellowes. He had estimated the cost at about $150,000, whereas it will be a little over $15,000. The kind of pumps is a new thing to the engineers of the city.

The Canadian General Electric Company gets the contract for Section E., $4,822 for four pumps with a capacity of 1,500,000 gallons each, for the Island pumping station. The highest tender was $14,500. The lowest was $4,210, from the Caledonia Iron Works. The latter company guaranteed an efficiency of 68 per cent., while the Canadian General Electric Company guarteed 70 per cent. efficiency. The City Engineer recommended the acceptance of the Canadian General Electric Company's tender, stating that this company's pumps had a better arrangement than the pumps of the lowest tender.

An evening of rare enjoyment is in store for those who attend the Jessie MacLachlan concert, Monday evening, Nov. 15th, at Grand Opera House Tickets on sale to morrow morning.

THE SCARCITY OF DEER THREATENS EXTERMINATION

Advices from Ottawa say:—Owing to the great scarcity of deer that has been found to exist in the forests of Ontario and Quebec, a move is on foot to have petitions sent in by the gunning clubs to the provincial governments of these two provinces calling for some action to meet the threatened extermination.

The open season for deer in Ontario started last Monday and lasts until the 15th. In Quebec it began on September 1 and lasts until December 5, but dog-running may be carried on only between October 20 and November 1. Dog-running may be carried on throughout the open season in Ontario.

Local hunters who have returned from searching for the elusive bucks express great surprise at the few deer they encountered. Residents of the different districts say that the wolves killed them off in great numbers last winter.

The bags have been so much smaller than last year—so much so that it has aroused considerable comment.

According to the Ottawa Journal the huntsmen say the governments of Ontario and Quebec should raise the bounty on wolves, which were very thick last winter and at times threatened the lives of travellers and residents in the country districts. Also it is suggested that the sale of venison in Ontario and Quebec be prohibited for a few years until the deer become more plentiful and the danger of extermination be passed.

THE HOCKEY CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING AT THE ORIENTAL

Unusual interest is being manifested in to-night's annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club, which will take the form of a smoker. It will be held at the Oriental Hotel at eight o'clock, and will be of great interest to the enthusiasts, as the annual reports will be presented, re-organization for next year effected and other business taken up. An informal programme will brighten up the evening's entertainment.

The hockey prospects for the season will be an interesting discussion, and the dope to hand so far would indicate that they are most encouraging. The seniors and juniors will be presented with their sweaters.

The Hamilton Tigers will run an excursion to Toronto on Saturday for the game with the Argonauts.

Tom Philips and Lester Patrick will likely be seen on the line-up of the Winnipeg Shamrocks this season.

The Montreal Lacrosse Club made over $3,000 last season.

Hamburg Belle, the famous trotter, which was bought by a Cleveland horseman recently for $50,000, is dead from pneumonia.

In the past five years baseball has caused 115 deaths.

St. Michael's College will have a senior O.H.A. team again this year, and will defend the J. Ross Robertson Trophy. Of last year's champions they have Thompson in goal, Dissette at cover, Richardson, Roach and Laflamme on the line. Lowes, the brilliant wing player, is in Calgary, and is not available, and Timmins at McGill. That means a wing man and a point player to be secured. Frank Dissette is expected back from the coast soon and will cast an eye around for two to fill these vacancies.

There is no reason why all the newspapers outside of Ottawa should have a pick at the Ottawa rugby team; when all the sporting writers outside of Ottawa condemn the Capital players for rough work in the game at Hamilton on Saturday, there must be a reason for it.

Score Cards for the game of 500, 10 cents each. For sale at Review Office.

BELMONTS MADE PRESENTATIONS

Mr. Bill Wareham Who Left This Afternoon for Winnipeg Was Honored

The Belmont Club last evening honored one of their members, Mr. Bill Wareham, who left this afternoon for the west, where he will reside in the future, having obtained a position in an electrical concern at Winnipeg. Mr. Wareham has been a member of the executive for the past six months, and has always been active in matters pertaining to the welfare of the club. On behalf of the executive he was presented with a sterling silver napkin ring, suitably engraved, and from the members he received a large picture of the club.

Seats for Jessie MacLachlan concert go on sale to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock at box office of Grand Opera House As there will be a big demand for tickets be on hand early.

HOCKEY

Manager Serviss and Capt. Charlton of the Galt pro. hockey team, have been busy the last couple of weeks in endeavoring to secure players for another championship team.

Already "Ras" Murphy, the brilliant defence player of last year and "Bob" Mercer the goal tender of the champions, have been signed.

Probably the greatest move the new managers have made is to secure E. King, of Calgary, who has been recommended very highly by Dr. J. Gibson, of Calgary, and formerly of Houghton, Mich. This new player is said to be faster than any of last year's Edmonton Stanley Cup chasers, and on the Galt line-up should prove a winner.

Negotiations are also on with Fred Doherty and he will likely be here again.—Galt Reporter.

Semaphores and Derails Have Been Installed and and the Mechanicism Thoroughly Tested

The mechanism which will operate the derails and semaphores at the Grand Trunk Railway crossing on Charlotte street was thoroughly tested by the Government inspector yesterday and the signalling system is now ready for operation. By the introducing of this system it ill be impossible for an accident to occur. The derails are placed on the street car track some distance from the crossing and when a train is approaching they are so operated that should the street car not stop, it will run off the track. The railway trains will be required to stop until they get the proper signal from the semaphore and both these and the gates will be in charge of Mr. Chas. Noyes.

THEATRICAL

That Irish Boarder

"That Irish Boarder" was not a very acceptable name to give the play that Marks Brothers presented last night at the Grand for there is considerably more in it than the somewhat unpromising title would indicate. The audience was sincerely pleased with the offering and it could be used to advantage as an opening bill at the commencement of a week's engagement. The acting of the company was more finished than on any night of their local appearance every member of the cast making the best use of interesting parts. The individual honors probably fell to Tom Marks, in the chief comedy role. Chris Allen, as Seth Holcombe, in a highly amusing and really clever character portrayal, Lewis Acker, as Albert Ashton and Ivy Evelyn as Kate Davis.

Mr. Marks in his customary announcement speech stated last night that he would give $25 to any couple who would get married on the stage on Saturday night after the performance. He also announced that so far the names of nine performers been handed in to take part in the amateur funfest on Friday evening.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT WAS A NOTABLE FUNCTION

In the Speech From the Throne His Excellency Promises That the Papers of the Imperial Defence Conference Will be Made Public—Naval Question Next Week.

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—There was an unusually large attendance of fashionable Canada at the opening of the second session of the eleventh Parliament, and an exceptionally good muster of members. This is accounted for by the absorbing interest that the naval policy of the Government has awakened. The first mention of matters connected with it was made in the afternoon by Mr. Borden, the Conservative leader, who asked for the report of the Imperial Defence Conference, and the Premier assured him that the papers would be laid on the table next week.

One hundred and seventy-five members were in the Commons chamber at three o'clock. Shortly after three o'clock the Gentlemen Ushers of the Black Rod tapped on the doors of the House of Commons and with customary obeisances to the Speaker, summoned the Commons to the Upper House, where His Excellency read the speech from the throne in both English and French.

His Excellency congratulated the members on the prosperous condition of the country, referred to the great immigration, "drawn from the best elements," and to the increase of trade and commerce. The revenue had almost completely regained what it had lost in the recent period of depression.

His Excellency promised that the papers of the Imperial Defence Conference would be immediately brought down and a bill introduced accordingly; also, that the members would be asked to confirm the new French commercial treaty.

The construction of the Transcontinental Railway had made substantial advance during the year. The western division had been extended 66 miles beyond Edmonton, completing a total distance of 861 miles west of Winnipeg. Contracts had been let for 399 miles in the mountain division. Good progress was made on this work. The eastern division was now open for traffic from Winnipeg to Lake Superior Junction and thence by the Grand Trunk Pacific branch to the lake itself. The whole of the work between Winnipeg and Moncton was now under contract.

Tenders were being called for the substructure of the new Quebec bridge and a report of the explanatory surveys for the Hudson Bay Railway would be submitted.

In order to improve the facilities already afforded the public by the Government railways, and to enhance their value as part of the great transportation system of Canada, a bill would be submitted for the purpose of enabling the Minister of Railways, on the recommendation of the Government railway's managing board, and subject to the approval of Parliament, to lease any line or lines connecting with the Intercolonial Railway.

A measure would also be introduced respecting banks and banking, insurance, navigable waters, and other matters, and the estimates would be submitted at an early date. In conclusion His Excellency said: "I pray the Almighty Lord that He may guide and bless your deliberations, and that they may bear fruit in a further increase of our country's prosperity and well-being."

After listening to the speech from the throne the Commons filed back to the second chamber where the following new members who had been elected at bye-elections during the recess were introduced: D. A. Lafortune, Montcalm; E. Fortier, Lotbiniere, and J. M. Douglas, Strathcona. Hon. Mackenzie King was introduced after the bye-election in North Waterloo, rendered necessary by his appointment as Minister of Labor.

The Premier announced that the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne would take place on Monday.

R. L. Borden stated that to-morrow the Opposition would like to discuss the question of the delay in making certain judicial appointments in British Columbia. This refers to the fact that the British Columbia Government has created a Court of Appeal which came into effect on Nov. 2. It is probable that no judges will be appointed until after the provincial election.

The Opposition leader asked regarding the report of the naval defence conference and the Premier replied that he hoped to lay the papers on the table next week.

In answer to a question by Mr. Borden as to whether the Government had reports or information touching the operation of the United States tariff, which particularly affected Canada, or her relations with other countries, Mr. Fielding replied that the Government had had no correspondence on the subject. They were unable to forecast the interpretation of the U. S. authorities and before coming to any conclusion would await action by the United States Government. Mr. Borden asked if there were any documents relating to the French treaty which had not been brought down. Mr. Fielding said all the papers had been submitted last session.

In reply to Mr. Borden, who asked for documents or papers touching the position of the waterways treaty, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the matter was still under advisement.

The leader of the Opposition asked when the Government proposed to lay on the table the papers relative to the resignation of Hugh B. Lumsden, Transcontinental Railway Commissioner. The Premier replied that he would call the attention of the Minister of Railways to the matter, whereupon the House adjourned.

Young Bank Robber Fails in Attempt in Louisville, Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11.—In an attempt at bank robbery, a young man, who is believed to be Arthur Hall of Louisville, a dealer in second-hand furniture, entered the Merchants' National Bank at New Albany, Ind., shortly before noon yesterday and shot and killed J. Hangary Fawcett, cashier, and seriously wounded John K. Woodward, president of the bank, and also wounded James R. Tucker, a negro chauffeur, probably fatally.

With a pistol in each hand Hall entered the bank, and, after commanding everyone to throw up their hands and "get into the vault," began shooting.

Fawcett was shot through the chest and neck, and died almost instantly. President Woodward received a bullet through the liver and his intestines also were perforated. Tucker, the chauffeur, was shot through the body.

Immediately afterward the murderer rushed from the bank and tried to escape in an automobile, in which, at the point of a pistol, he had forced the negro chauffeur to drive him to New Albany from Louisville.

An alarm was given through a megaphone on a dredge and in a short time several policemen had started in pursuit in a fast motor boat.

They captured their man after a short run.

Brantford, Nov. 12.—A peculiar mixup resulted here yesterday in the market bylaw returns. The deputy returning officer in West Brantford, in making his declaration, transposed the figures for and against the bylaw, making a difference of 61 votes, and resulting in an official declaration by the city clerk, that the bylaw was carried by 68 majority. A recount has been asked for. The correct majority against the measure is 54, the officer having admitted his error.

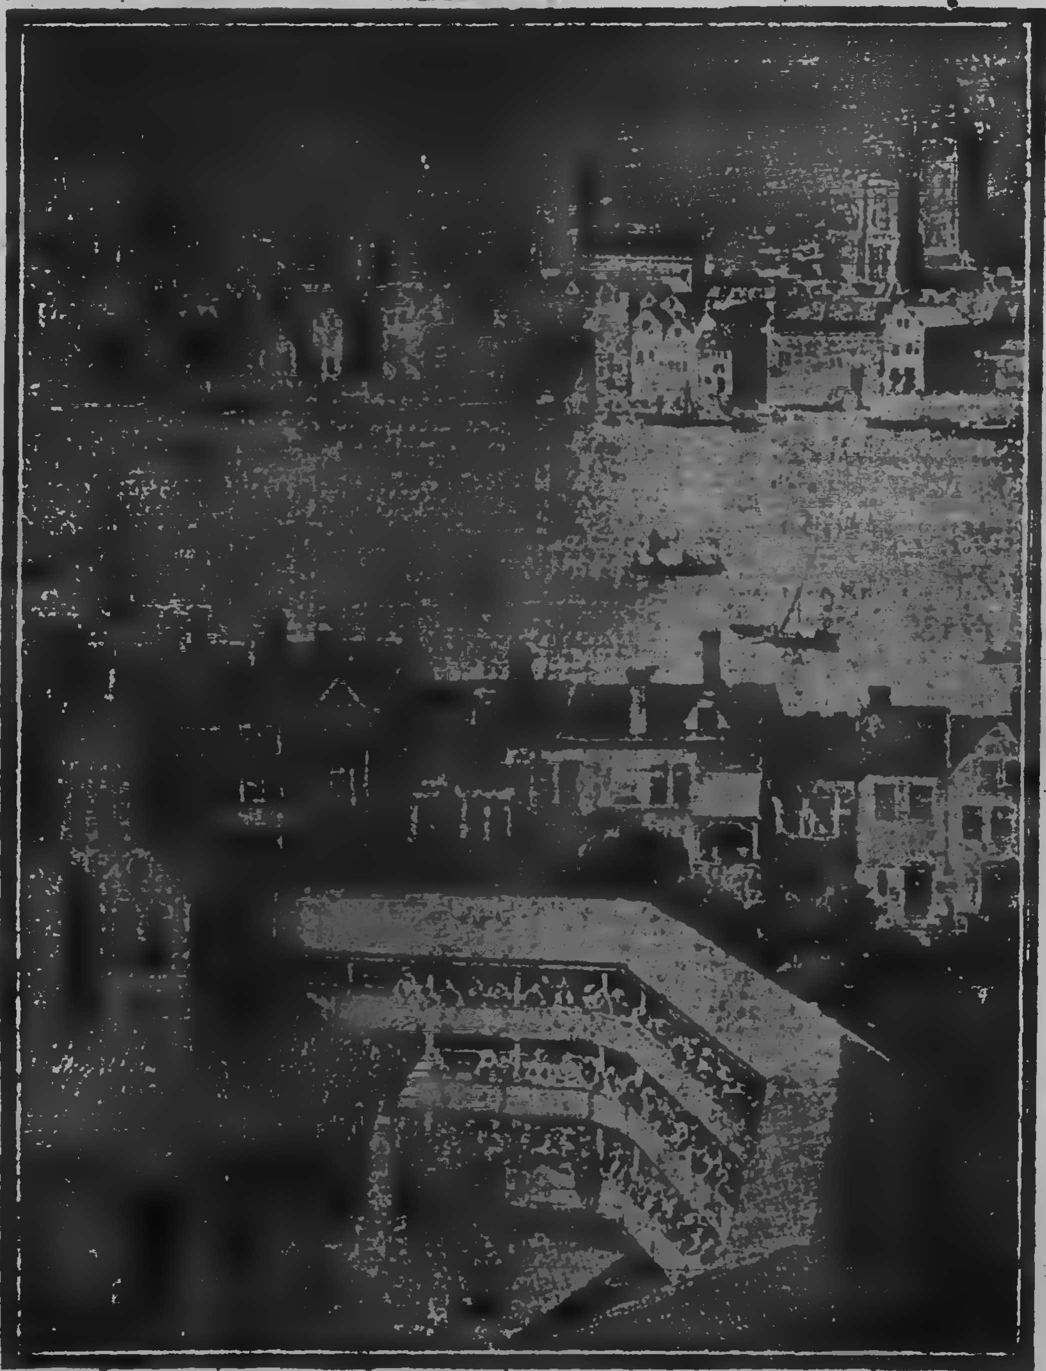
Montreal, Nov. 12.—J. M. Curry of Yarmouth, who was on his way from Toronto to Montreal via the G.T.R., had a horrible ride for the last eleven miles of his journey. He fell between the platform and the train, but beyond blows by the steps of the passing cars, escaped and was able to go to the hotel.

SHAKESPEARE DISCOVERIES; A RECONSTRUCTION



So much interest has been aroused concerning the London of Shakespeare's time by Dr. Wallace's discoveries, says the Sphere, that the above reconstruction of an Elizabethan theatre has been specially made. It combines the features of the Globe Theatre—from which Shakespeare drew a large sum of money—as given in Visscher's view of London executed in 1616 with the interior details preserved for us by a Dutch visitor to London in 1596. The sketch he made shows three surrounding galleries marked porticus, sedilia and orchestra. The actors played their parts on a raised stage surrounded on three sides by these galleries.

LONDON FIREMAN BADLY INJURED

London, Ont., Nov. 12.—Fire Chief John Aitken, Assistant Chief Thomas Aitken and Fireman W. Robertson were seriously injured in a fire which destroyed the plant of the Ontario Spring Bed & Mattrass Co. yesterday morning.

The men were working in the building and half a dozen firemen were working on the floor above, when a quantity of straw, used for mattrasses, was saturated with water. The weight proved too much for the floor, which gave way. Part of the wall also fell out.

The men were buried under bricks and straw, but were speedily dug out and hurried to the hospital. The loss will total $25,000.

In Montreal on Monday two firemen were killed by the collapse of the interior of a mattrass factory.

London fire chiefs seem ill-fated. Chiefs Clark and Roe, who preceded Aitkens, both being killed on duty.

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—Judgment has been given by Registrar Audette of the Exchequer Court awarding E. A. Wallberg of Montreal $53,206 in settlement of his claim for extras in connection with the construction of the new car shop for the Intercolonial at Moncton. Mr. Wallberg claimed $105,940, and the court's award has cut this down by half.

While raiding a "blind pig" operated in Florence, Inspector Ayearst caught the hotelkeeper's wife running from the place with the whisky in her apron. When he tried to detain her, she hit him over the head with a bottle.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE CARRIES NORTH ESSEX

Oliver J. Wilcox Carries Dyed-in-Wool Liberal Riding—In Contest for Seat Vacated by Hon. Mr. Sutherland Conservatives Are Victorious With Majority of 75.

Windsor, Nov. 12.—After thirteen years with a Liberal representative in the House of Commons, North Essex yesterday elected a Conservative member, Oliver J. Wilcox, a farmer residing at South Woodslee, defeated W. J. McKee, lumberman, by a majority of 75, with two polls to hear from.

At the Conservative nominating convention, many of the prominent politicians of the riding counselled letting the election go to McKee, by default. Only the insistence of the rural delegates, and the willingness of Wilcox to make the run, resulted in a nomination. The election was to fill the vacancy in the House caused by the appointment of Hon. Mr. Sutherland to a judgeship.

To the greater majority of Windsorites, Wilcox was known by name only, but he carried the city by 136 majority over W. J. McKee, who was born in Sandwich and has lived in this vicinity all his life. The Town of Walkerville, which is invariably Conservative, was the banner municipality for Wilcox, piling up a majority of 149 in his favor. This was enough to turn the tide.

These were the majorities for the respective candidates in yesterday's election:

	Wilson.	McKee.
Sandwich	....	83
Sandwich East	....	62
Sandwich West	....	129
Windsor	136	....
Walkerville	149	....
Maidstone	56	....
Sandwich South	8	....
Rochester	1	....
Totals	349	274

Wilcox's majority, 75.

The Government fought hard for McKee. He was assisted in his campaign by two Cabinet Ministers, Graham and Murphy, Dr. Beland of Beauce, and T. Reaume, an imported French speaker, whose home is in Montreal. On top of that was Liberal financial support. It was currently reported last night that twenty thousand dollars was spent in McKee's behalf.

JAMAICA IS STILL CUT OFF FROM OUTSIDE WORLD

Submarine Lines Throughout West Indies Rendered Inoperative by Some Mysterious Agency—Seismographs Have Registered No Earthquake of No Account in That Vicinity.

New York, Nov. 12.—Late yesterday no communication with Jamaica had been secured by the cable companies, who cannot explain what has happened. There has been no record of any earthquake on the seismographs.

All the submarine lines throughout the island from Kingston, Jamaica, on the west, to Trinidad, on the east, have been rendered inoperative by some agency which, up to the present time, it has been impossible to determine.

The circumstances indicate an earthquake on the floor of the ocean, but to affect the cable lines throughout the breadth of the Indies, such a disturbance would have to be remarkable for its extent and severity. No serious earthquake has been reported by any seismograph station, nor have the meagre reports from the points on the island of Jamaica, where the cables touch, indicated an earthquake on that island. It is possible, however, that some electrical disturbance, similar to the aurora borealis, will eventually account for the trouble.

The only islands with which telegraphic communication could be had yesterday are Cuba and Hayti, and the shore station at Jamaica, Holland Bay. It is equally impossible to reach the eastern islands of the Indies by way of Europe and Pernambuco, Brazil.

Officials of the Western Union Telegraph Co. here said that according to Holland Bay advices sufficient repairs would probably be made soon to permit the transmission of messages giving the nature and extent of the disturbance at Kingston.

Halifax, Nov. 12.—The Direct West India Cable Co. at Halifax have utterly failed to establish communication with Jamaica. A fierce storm was reported raging in Turks' Island, with tremendous rains. The last reports received last night said that the rains continued, with the wind blowing thirty miles an hour.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IS PAYING

Brockville, Nov. 12.—The Brockville Light and Power Department, controlled by the municipality, has closed another successful year. The total revenue received from gas and electricity was $51,915.36 and running expenses reached $34,144.91. For depreciation $3,867.29 was allowed and bad debts $26.5, the first in four years, leaving a profit of $8,462.03. The department has handed over $7,507.32 to be applied on the debenture debt of the plant.

The first motor boat of the local fleet to catch fire was a craft owned by Irvine Gilbert, which was in charge of F. Grundy, E. Higgins and S. Rice. It was being taken for a short spin on the river. Biggins jumped overboard and swam safely to terra firma.

SPECIAL POLICE ARE SENT NORTH

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 12.—Ten constables, with arms and ammunition for twenty more, have started from Prince Rupert by special steamer for beleaguered Hazelton, intending to ascend the Skeena as far as navigation is possible, and thence take the trail. An expedition of fifty more is expected to be sent up Naas River and overland sixty miles. These reinforcements are to be immediately supplemented if necessary.

They were despatched consequent upon a petition telegraphed Premier McBride, headed by Indian Agent Loring and signed by twenty-eight leading Hazeltons. The Indians arrested in connection with the Kispiox trouble appeared before Magistrate Allison yesterday at Hazelton, charged with assaulting a road foreman. Some pleaded guilty. Judgment was reserved in all cases, with further more serious charges laid against all of them.

Givens appealed the case on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction. Yesterday morning Judge Price quashed conviction.

London, Nov. 12.—The Alberta and Great Waterways issue has been oversubscribed. The Canadian Associated Press has heard the opinion expressed by a prominent financier that the province had not been well advised in making an issue on so high a basis as 4 1-2 per cent. THE SCHOOL QUESTION IN QUEBEC

The Huntingdon Gleaner.

In theory the principles of the Quebec school law is, that the school taxes paid by Catholics go to Catholic schools and by Protestants to the schools of the Protestants. In practice, a large proportion of the taxes paid by Protestants go to maintain Catholic schools. This is effected by means of a Jesuitical device. If a Protestant carries on his business individually his tax goes under the facilities afforded by the judicial incorporation act, he loses his identity has no longer a religious status, and no voice as to what school his tax is to support. The business of the province is largely done through incorporated companies. Even to retail storekeepers the advantage of incorporation so commend themselves that they become limited companies.

Take Montreal as an illustration. In the English-speaking section nearly every firm of any account is incorporated. In levying school taxes on these companies the only just way would be to ascertain what is the creed of the partners and the respective amounts of their investments, and on that information allot the tax. If a company is wholly composed of Protestants, the tax to go to the schools of the minority; if the company includes Catholics, that their proportion of the tax go to Catholic schools. That is the only fair and just mode. But it is not the plan acted upon.

By a legal fiction, companies are regarded as heathen and the tax levied on them is divided between the Catholic and Protestant schools in proportion to the creed of the people living in the municipalities in which the companies do business. See how this works.

There are scores of instances where a factory is owned entirely by Protestants. The lion's share of the school tax levied on that factory goes to maintain a convent and a brother's school, and a mere driblet to the Protestant school—the tax has been allotted not according to the creed of the owners of the factory but of the religious belief of the people who live around it.

In Montreal the manufacturing and wholesale trade is mostly in Protestant hands. Drive the Protestants from the island of Montreal and smoke would cease to rise from the factories that crowd each other along the Lachine canal, banks would close, the great warehouses be deserted. Non-Catholics are the chief taxpayers of Montreal.

Last year the incorporated companies of that city paid in round figures a quarter of a million dollars in school taxes. Of that amount $182,000 was handed over to the Church of Rome and the petty balance to support the schools of the minority. Is it pretended for a moment that the $31,000 represents the share that rightfully belongs to the Protestants? The $182,000 ought to have been paid to the Protestant School Board and the $31,000 to the Catholic. The schools of the English minority are growing fewer each year. If the taxes paid by Protestants now seized for Catholic schools were applied as they ought to be, every English school, fighting to keep its door open, would be so assisted that it would be secure and made more efficient than ever it was.

It is probably correct to say, that if the school tax was justly divided—what is paid by Catholics go to Catholic schools, what is paid by Protestants go to their schools—half a million dollars would be available each year to help the schools of the English minority in the rural parts of Quebec.

Our schools are perishing for want of sustenance because they are being robbed by the Church of Rome of what belongs to them.

We abominate the sectarian system of education, we want one school for all, but as long as the majority insists on separate schools, we demand that the rights of conscience be respected, and that no taxes paid by Protestants go to support institutions their very name indicates they protest against.

Reverse the case, suppose half a million dollars of taxes levied on Catholics was going to Protestant schools, what angry denunciations, what a hastening of legislators to right the wrong. But just because the Protestants are a minority, and a cowardly minority afraid to demand their rights, they are made, year after year, to pay this outrageous tribute to Rome.

IS CANADA TO BE INDEPENDENT

In Canada to be independent?

It is idle to disguise any longer the real issue of the moment. The repeated assertions of the Laurier administration and the jubilant tone of the French-Canadian "national" press make it apparent that Canada is no longer to be considered part of a united empire.

"If Canada's navy is to be, as the member of the Laurier Cabinet, quoted by the New York Herald and La Patrie, asserts, under no obligation to take part in imperial defence, how can it be any longer pretended that Canadians are to be considered as members of an united empire?

The dread of the French-Canadians that they will become merged in a great empire and no longer hold the balance of power in a virtually independent colony is coming to a head. What shall determine our policy in future? The determination of French Canada or the will of a pro-British majority?

The extreme agitation of our French-Canadian friends over what they call this question vital to their liberties, is due to a fear that the empire may become in fact what it has been only in name. Much as we respect our compatriots who have done much for Canada in the past we must protest against this attempt to coerce us into a virtual separation and undesired independence.

If this step is taken it can never be retraced. The dream of empire will vanish.

COUNTRY HOUSES IN ENGLAND

An American girl visiting Col. George in England, writes of country houses in that country and Ireland, in the Saturday Evening Post. Her impressions are worth noting. The first thing that struck her was the fact that "county families" are the old families. The new ones remain "new" until time raises them to the standing of county families. In conversation the "g" is dropped. "Habit" characterizes all their doings. The phrase "goin' on" is used to denote a continuance of the round of visits. Underneath all the artificiality is a soundness and tenderness of heart that surprises her. Bridge continues to be the occupation of the idle. Polo and racing are attractions, but both are viewed from the luncheon-table or with relation to it. "To write letters" is to go about one's business or to take a nap. She notes also that "floor," "door," etc., are pronounced "flaw" "daw" and "bored" as "bahed."

Women kill time in writing to the "Stahs," i.e., the Army and Navy Stores.

In Ireland she says the aristocrates are Anglo-Saxon, Anglo-Norman, Scotch or Welsh, but not Irish, although their fondness for "hunting" and their bonhomie are characteristically Irish. She does not say why this feeling exists. Shooting she describes as a tramp through the mud and wet and then more eating. Everything is done with an eye to an advantageous matrimonial alliance. She remarks upon the going up of London for the "season" of May and June, when country England is just at its loveliest. The English, she avers, live by rule, not by thought. Life becomes "dull." What their forefathers did the afterfathers do and their study is to comply with ancient custom. The article is amusing and instructive.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is no good in any talk of trading off Mr. Borden for Mr. Roblin, or Mr. McBride. Drop it.

The Kaiser wanted to "fly" but the Kaiserin wouldn't let him. She told him he was too "fly" already.

A judge in British Columbia has declined to punish Chinamen for gambling when it is permitted amongst whites.

There are some very "immature" things being said by the Liberals of "old-age pensions and the tariff" in Britain as if indeed it was in protectionist Germany that the idea originated and was carried out.

"Here were the thirty archbishops and bishops, the spiritual leaders of three millions of the faithful, surrounded by a hundred prelates, theologians, canonists, who had come together to discuss all the problems which are of vital interest to the Church here in Canada. These men came from every corner of the Dominion. Their dioceses form an uninterrupted chain across the great continent which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific."—The Catholic Register.

"As a witness to the ethical urgency of our Lord's words about riches and poverty, we may quote the testimony of one who claims no place among the orthodox believers. William James, however, speaks with all the more authority because he realises what mammon means in America. "When one sees the way in which wealth-getting enters as an ideal into the very bone and marrow of our generation, one wonders whether a revival of the belief that poverty is a worthy religious vocation may not be the spiritual reform which our time stands most need of. Among us English-speaking peoples especially do the praises of poverty need once more to be boldly sung. — British Weekly.

"Every week of our lives we receive applications for loans at a low rate of interest. Priests in Western Canada are to-day paying as high as ten and twelve per cent. interest on church debts. They are giving in return for such loans the very best security to be found the country over, namely the pledge of Catholic Bishops that the debt will not be repudiated, backed up by the aggregate property of the whole diocese. Bankers, even here in Canada, look with the highest favor upon loans made to Catholic churches. This is shown by their readiness to make such loans. On the other hand, we are presented with the spectacle of Catholic societies, having at their disposal immense sums of money, which refuse to make loans to Catholic institutions. We have in mind just now one particular society which has almost $2,000,000 invested in municipal bonds here in Canada and the United States. On this investment they receive about 3 1-2 per cent. annually."—The Catholic Register.

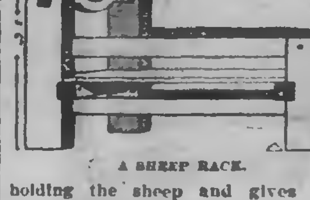
Protecting the Hogs.

Swine are more susceptible to dampness than cattle and suffer from cold more than other stock. If left without good shelter they pile closely together for warmth. The pigs on the outside are too cold, and those near the middle become too warm. The latter are liable to be laid upon or contract a cold when they turn out to feed, and pneumonia may result. It is important to provide comfortable shelter and abundant room for exercise. There is a great variety of makes and sizes of hog houses in use. These may be divided into two classes—the centralized system and the colony system.

Device For Shearing.

A writer of much experience in the cultivation and handling of sheep, in touch with the Breeder's Gazette, says: "I send you a drawing of a rack for holding sheep while being trimmed for exhibition. I made the thing myself about five years ago and have used it ever since. It saves a man holding the sheep and gives much more satisfaction. You can trim every bit of the sheep except the ring around the neck, and when you get all trimmed but that just turn the sheep around and finish him off before letting him go.



A SHEEP RACK.

"The side strips swing up out of the way, and the stanchion can be adjusted to any sized sheep."

CLOSING ADDRESS OF PLENARY COUNCIL BY ARCHBISHOP BEGIN

The Purpose of the Council—to "Accelerate the Progress of the Church"—To Give Impulse to Catholic Affairs.

"History will say also—and it is the hope that we bear in our souls—will tell of the precious benefits that this Plenary Council will have procured for our dear Canadian Church. It is to accelerate the progress of the Church that we have worked. It is to assure its harmonious development that we have carried those decrees which we submit respectfully to the approval of the Sovereign Pontiff. At this laborious epoch it appears that all energies redouble to secure public fortune and we traverse a period of rapid expansion. The Church should recognise her real resources, develop her proper life, cause her influences to penetrate in all minds, and her supernatural affairs in all the spheres where national activity exercises itself. Far from being intimidated by the incessant progress, the watchword of the hour in all the territories of our immense country, she rejoices at it, and it is precisely because her action has always been so prompt as the public powers; it is because here since the day when Cartier planted the cross side by side with the flag, that Church and State have always joined hands for the common good. It is for that that we have again grouped together to work for this noble cause, and to give to our Catholic works all the impulse which the actual conditions of public life demand.

* * *

The Plenary Council ought to have for its first effort to affirm the faith, to discipline its forces, to organise voluntary effort, to divert initiative, and to spread out in the full light of Christ, the religious and social works of the Gospel. But we do not doubt that all the faithful of this country will understand how much it is necessary to give their spiritual leaders loyal, disinterested, generous support, if we wish truly that the Church of God will continue to grow and prosper in this land, watered with the blood of martyrs to the spiritual and temporal welfare of the whole nation."—The Catholic Register.

GYPSY BAND IN TROUBLE

Nomads Who Kept Police Busy Around Here Last Summer Make Sensation in Alberta

The Gypsies who visited Peterborough, Ottawa and Hull last summer and who kept the courts busy during their stay, are once more in trouble.

It appears that when the Gypsies were here they were on their way to meet other sections of their tribe which were endeavoring to invade Canada without passing through the hands of the immigration officials. The Gypsies succeeded and were conveyed to Canada by tramp steamer.

The bands reunited and marched post haste for High River, Alberta, where John Mitchell, King of the tribe, has his domain. They did not waste any time on the journey and are now established on Mitchell's large farm at High River.

When Mitchell was in Ottawa he told a reporter that he was king of a large tribe in Bulgaria, and that a number of the bands of Gypsies roaming Canada, belonged to him. That King Mitchell's bunch was rich is well known, by the way they rode 'round in automobiles while in Ottawa, and the large amount they paid in police court fines and lawyers' fees.

The immigration officials are now searching for Mitchell to lay a charge against him of aiding immigrants to evade the law. Mitchell is, however, on a home-seeking expedition into Alberta to get land for his new comers.

It is likely that the new section of the tribe will be deported.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

THIS IS TRUE

The following appears in the Kingston Whig:—

"Every line in a newspaper costs its publishers something. If it is to benefit some individual he fairly expect to pay something. You do not go into a grocery and ask the proprietor to hand you out ten lbs. of sugar for nothing, even though the grocer may be a personal friend, and even though the gift might not be a large one.

If the beneficiary of advertising does not pay for it, the proprietor has to settle the bill. Nevertheless, many people cannot seem to learn that a newspaper pays its expenses by renting its space, and that it is just as much entitled to collect rent for every day that space is occupied as you are for the house you rent to a tenant.

Most newspapers expect to treat religious and philanthropic enterprises liberally, yet in spite of this many of these enterprises expect the newspapers to give them space rent free, while they carry their work to some other shop. The place for them to look for support is the place they patronize."

USE OF FIREARMS IN OPS TOWNSHIP

Ops council has passed a by-law preventing and regulating the firing of guns within the township, which enacts as follows:

1. That no person shall at any time fire any gun or other firearm upon the Scugog river or the lands flooded with water adjoining the said river or within seventy yards of the banks of the said river or flooded lands within the township of Ops save and except guns loaded with shot, at game birds in the open season.

APPARENTLY WORK WAS NOT DONE RIGHT

Cobourg, Nov. 10.—A special meeting of the Cobourg council was held last evening and the names on the petition requesting for the submission of a local option by-law were carefully considered. At the time the adjournment was made only half the names had been gone over, but the petition will be taken up again this evening. The council found many errors, and they feel quite sure that the list will be reduced below the requisite number and as a consequence the petition will be thrown out.

FOR THE OUTDOOR MAN

To cover Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, taking in everything of an outdoor nature, is an impossibility, yet in the November issue of "Outdoor Canada," the publishers of this interesting and widely read publication have come very close to the hearts and interests of outdoor enthusiasts in every province. British Columbia, Sunny Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Eastern Canada are well looked after in special contributions by authorities on sporting and all outdoor topics. The issue is particularly well illustrated and has numerous photographs of interest to every Canadian. "Outdoor Canada" is well worthy of the support of the fresh air man and woman, and its edition for this month is probably the best number ever issued by the company. The cover is a very striking one, and depicts the Rugby half-back waiting for a pass to reach him. The number should have a splendid sale.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

OLD CHRISTIANITY V. MODERN INFIDELITY

To the Editor of the Review—

Sir,—Probability is the universal and only guide that men follow and depend upon in the business of everyday life, whether it be a venture on the Stock Exchange, or a transaction involving the gain or loss of thousands, perhaps millions of dollars, in some railway system or ocean liners. Success is only more or less probable, it is not certain, as we are certain that the sun shines in the heavens, because we see it, it is manifest to our bodily sense; it is not so with regard to anything in the future.

2. Christianity claims to be a supernatural and infallible revelation of the nature and attributes of the Supreme Being of His dealings with His creatures, and of what shall come to pass hereafter. To many minds what is stated in Holy Scripture about these things appears uncertain; if, however, one who is in doubt about these matters, and is sincerely desirous to arrive at, and be assured, of the truth regarding them, will begin to seek for this truth with an honest and good heart, and test the Christian Revelation by probable evidence, he will soon rejoice in the blessing in a full assurance of faith in all that the Gospel of Christ proposes for our acceptance.

3. The first strongest evidence of the truth of Christianity is that of the Resurrection. By heathen and hostile historians, who wrote 70 years after the crucifixion, Christ is referred to as an historical character, a great Teacher if nothing more, who gathered around Him many disciples. We know from what is stated in the Scriptures that the preaching of the Apostles was based upon what was believed to be the Bodily Resurrection of Christ. Both Jews and heathens were bitter enemies of the Christians. The Apostles and first preachers of the Gospel constantly affirmed, and persisted in affirming, that Christ was risen. Now if these enemies of Christ could have produced Christ's body, that would have at once convinced the Apostles either of having been guilty of fraud, or that they were under a delusion. It is in the highest degree improbable that the apostles were guilty of wilful fraud in this particular. Men who would so act, would not give up their whole lives, and render themselves liable to, and actually in many cases did suffer bitter persecution and death by torture, for a religion they knew to be based upon a lie, without the remotest prospect of any temporal advantage or profit. All accounts of apparitions recorded in history, leave the body in the grave. Had the Jewish and heathen enemies of Christianity been able to produce the body at the starting point of the first preaching of the Gospel, that would in itself have convicted them of fraud or delusion. But the historians of that period are all silent as to any attempt to refute Christianity by the production of the body of Christ. In this respect then, we have the strongest probable evidence that Christ did miraculously rise from the dead and ascend into heaven.

The Land Policies in Braitin

There are many signs which show that the Tories are in favor of a vigorous policy of small holdings in the form of peasant proprietorship; and the Times is pointing out that this contrasts with the Liberal policy of small holdings, which prefers that these holdings shall be rented from County Councils, and involves the policy of land nationalisation. Mr. Chamberlain has now given emphatic utterance in favor of peasant proprietorship, and the Spectator writes thus on his declaration;

CHAMBERLIAN'S LAND POLICY.

"If Mr. Chamberlain were still in the fighting rank, his letter to Mr. Jesse Collings on agricultural reform might be the beginning of a very important new political movement. In this letter he says;—"While I still think that Tariff Reform will be the salvation of the inhabitants of the towns, agricultural reform, leading to the creation of a peasant proprietorship in the rural districts, is necessary for the agricultural labourer, and is indeed the only plan by which the problems effecting him chiefly can be properly dealt with.'

"This is a very emphatic declaration, like most of Mr. Chamberlain's declarations of policy, and if literally interpreted might even involve the application to England and Scotland of recent Irish land legislation. That prospect alone is sufficient to give one pause, for Ireland has already absorbed, or shortly will absorb some £200,000,000 of British capital, and on a similar basis probably £2,000,000,000 would be required to create a peasant proprietary in England and Scotland.

"The creation of a peasant proprietorship would be to some extent a barrier against Socialism. Socialists themselves, and their Radical allies, have fully realised this fact, and recent Liberal legislation with regard to the land has all been in the direction of encouraging tenancy rather than ownership.

ADVANTAGES OF FREEHOLDS

"The peculiar advantage of a small freehold as contrasted with a small tenancy is that it creates a sense of proprietorship. A man who owns land becomes a defender of the institution of private property, not because that institution is in reality more valuable to him than it is to his fellow-citizens but because he can more clearly see its value. For this reason a country where a large portion of the population consists of peasant proprietors will never accept Socialistic theories. This is a sound argument, but from the point of view of practical politics its importance must not be exaggerated. Even if the whole of the agricultural land of England were divided into small freeholds, the number of peasant proprietors would still be insignificant in comparison with the number of urban voters and therefore as a practical barrier against Socialism peasant proprietorship can never be of very great value in this country.

A REFUGE AGAINST TYRANNY

"The social advantage of small freeholds is very great. They constitute a refuge from the possible tyranny of the large landowner. We do not think that many large landowners in England either strain their powers or neglect their duties; but there are some who do so, either deliberately or through carelessness, and where a whole district is in the hands of one great landowner there is at any rate the risk that the population may be subjected to what is, in effect, a tyranny. Such a tyranny cannot be exercised where there are a considerable number of small freeholders in the district. Freehold, in a word, is a very sure basis for freedom, and freedom must always be the goal of human ambition. From the economical point of view also there is much to be said in favor of small freeholds, for there are many men who will not do their best by the land unless it is their own.

"For these reasons all those who thought seriously upon the problem would be glad to see an increase in the number of small freeholds in England, and strongly urge that private land owners should, wherever possible, take steps to create freeholds where a favorable opportunity arises. There are still too many large landowners in the kingdom who are reluctant to sell any portion of the estate they have inherited.'

Why Stanfield's Make Underwear

UP to 20 years ago, most everyone considered that all Underwear—no matter how well cut and made—would shrink and harden.

In those days, the makers were working on the wrong idea. They were trying to find a way to finish Underwear so that it would not shrink, instead of trying to find a way to get the shrink out the wool before the yarn went to the knitting machines.

The late C. E. Stanfield—who knew wool as only a man can know it who studies it from the sheep's back to the wearer's back—gave his attention to the problem for years.

Living in Nova Scotia, he soon realized that woolen underwear, and the best of pure woolen underwear, was the only kind that would and could protect the Canadian against the rigorous Canadian Winters. He found that as underwear was then made, he could not make woolen underwear that would not shrink, mat and harden. He devoted himself to this problem and after many years of experimenting, he finally discovered a method by which he could take the shrink out of the wool before the garments were knitted.

This method, improved and perfected, has made possible the immense business of Stanfields Limited, with a larger output of their special classes of Underwear than any other factory in Canada.

The Stanfields make underwear today because Canadian people find Stanfield's Underwear the most comfortable, the most durable, and the warmest for its weight.

The Stanfields are making more underwear every year because the buying public demands more of it. Popularity is a good test of quality.

In 3 standard weights—Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and 17 other weights and qualities to suit the needs and requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and sample of fabric, sent free for your address.

Recently a favorable opportunity was discovered by Relief Officer Miller and the fact that the city has been relieved of the presence of Watters and the expense which was incurred, is worthy of note.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

"Serious thinking and consequent action" was the topic of Mr. MacBeth's evangelistic sermon in St. Paul's last night. The large auditorium was well filled, the attendance being remarkable for a week evening. The singing was hearty, the congregation following strongly the excellent leading of Mr. Crane and the choir. Mr. Acheson, a young gentleman, who has recently come to the city, sang in a strong and melodious bass voice the hymn "Will There be any Stars in My Crown," and at the conclusion of the address Miss McCaw sang with fine impressiveness, the hymn "O Jesus, Thou art Standing Outside the Fast Closed Door." Among those present last night were Rev. Mr. Trumpour of All Saints' Episcopal church and Rev. J. R. Webb of Murray street Baptist church.

Mr. MacBeth took for his text from Psalm 119-59, "I thought on my ways, and turned my feet into Thy testimonies, I made haste and delayed not to keep Thy commandments." This looked like the reverie and recollection of an aged saint who had the joy of recalling the day when he had forsaken the ways of sin and started out on the way of life. It is an argument in favor of early devotion to the Christian life so that the loneliness of old age may be brighten by the thoughts of a life given to the service of God and humanity. Serious thinking must not be crowded out of our lives by the pressure of business or the engagements of society. These had their place, but they must not be allowed to monopolize the life. It is well to be alone at times away from the press and throng that we may hear the voice of God and the speaker said that in his boyhood, his lonely rides over the great plains of the West has remained with him as occasions where away from the voices of men, he had heard in the solitude, the voice of God. The lonely room in a boarding house was not cheery in comparison with the surroundings of a home, but it was infinitely better than the vortex of the city's life and the loud glare of places of doubtful amusement. We are social beings, but let us choose our society on the side of the good and above all let us sometimes be alone with God. When the Psalmist found out by thinking on his ways that they were wrong and unsatisfactory and deadly, he acted at once. He turned his feet to the testimonies of God. He did not wait for some one to turn him. Man had a will and he must use it, and when he had turned, he made haste along the way of life. He had lost much time and there was much work to do. Many a man is recaptured by his old sin and evil habit because he does not make haste and flee away from his old resorts and his old companions in vice.

This evening will be the closing meeting and it is expected that there will be a crowded attendance of the congregation and others.

At St. Andrew's Church

The meeting in St. Andrew's church last night was an inspiration to everybody who attended. The singing was exceedingly hearty throughout and the vigorous address of the Rev. Mr. Atkinson was a great tonic to all present. Mr. Atkinson based his address on "To-day, if you will hear His voice harden not your hearts." Ps. 95:7.

There was here the note of earnest appeal and the note of urgency. Now, is the note of the gospel throughout. "Come, now, let us reason together," saith the Lord. The spirit and the bride say come. It is the imperative mood and there is only one tense, that is the present.

In this old and new message what do we find that our observation and experience guarantees? The book of Psalms is a book for all time, because it is suited to the needs of the human heart to-day. It is necessary, therefore that we be susceptible, that our hearts be in tune with the infinite. In sorrow we are often led to understand this. We can hear when God speaks. In time of religious revival we are led to hear God speak. This is the story of all the great revivals in England, Ireland and Scotland. In John III. Christ said "The wind bloweth when it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the spirit."

This text also speaks of insensibility. Insensibility may be limited. Such they are who are color blind or who are incapable of distinguishing between tones of music. "I know a man," said the preacher, "who does not know the difference between 'Yankee Doodle' and 'The Dead March in Saul,' and that man is a great critic of music and particularly opposed to organs in churches.

But insensibility may be acquired. This is seen in men who specialize along certain lines and neglect other lines and become blind. The fish in the mammoth cave of Kentucky have eyes that are atrophied. This was illustrated by a friend in speaking of an acquaintance who, at one time had been under deep religious impressions, but grew careless and cold. Several opportunities presented themselves and he felt the guidance of a spirit towards God, but each time let the opportunity pass, until at length, by the simple process of not answering God he admitted that he was as unimpressionable as a shovel.

Our responsibility is certainly here announced. Let us not be unresponsive to God. Why should I even take time to think of hell, if I can take the very highest power that God gives and with it, destroy and atrophy it by sheer neglect and unresponsive? God requires that man will exercise his volition—his own will. God will not lift a man up to a Christian life outside of his own volition.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man will open the door I will come in to him." God saves the man who is willing. This is the day of God's power, but are His people willing to be made willing in the day of His power. God's light ever shines, but a man may shut his eyes against that light and remain in crumbling darkness. Our characters and our destiny are all involved in what we will do in relation to Jesus Christ.

To-night Mr. Atkinson will speak on "What they missed." To this, the last meeting of the mission in St. Andrews, all are invited.

Knox Church

It is expected that there will be a large congregation in Knox church for the closing meeting of the series. The service will commence at 7.45 p.m. instead of eight and the congregation is urged to be present at that hour. The men will meet for prayer at the same hour in the upper room. Rev. J. D. Morrow is returning for this closing meeting and will assist Dr. Farquharson. The congregation is looking forward to an impressive service. The people have been most faithful in attendance.

Last evening Rev. Dr. Farquharson took up the great invitation in Rev. xxii., 17, "The Spirit and the Bride say come." It refers to those who have not accepted Christ and comes as a closing opportunity to those outside. It is moreover an invitation to life at its best and highest. It finds its true expression in Jesus and it is to Him men are to come.

There is every encouragement in taking the step because the invitation is given by one who is able to make every provision. It is moreover an invitation given without distinction to all—to the poorest and lowest as well as to the best. Abundant satisfaction is guaranteed if we come.

Many make excuses. Let us see to it that while so many are coming, we are not rejected.

The mothers' prayer meeting met this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church. The meeting to-night begins at 7.45 p.m.

COLLIER-CUNNINGHAM CO. LTD. GET LARGE ORDER

Mr. Willis H. Coon, of Rochester, N.Y., the inventor of the famous invention "De Marvel," and Mr. W. H. Burrows of the Coon's De Marvel Co., Limited, of Toronto, have been in the city during the past few days closing a contract with the Collier-Cunningham Co., Limited for the manufacture of this unique invention.

The initial order calls for a quantity of 5,000 so that the sales of this article are evidently in excellent condition.

This electrical device is very unique indeed, consisting of a hollow cylindrical shell in which is placed a radio-active fluid. This cylinder is covered with rubber. The heating coil is inserted in this cylinder and in five minutes places the "De Marvel" at working temperature. There is also provision made for heating by gas, stove or lamp.

The "De Marvel is designed for the treatment of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, nervous and muscular troubles, sprains, etc., and is endorsed by physicians, nurses and athletic associations, etc.

THEATRICAL SUIT OF LONG STANDING AT LAST SETTLED

A suit that has been long delayed was brought to a conclusion in the Division Court this afternoon in which J. J. Turner & Sons, proprietors of the Grand Opera House, and Charles Mack, of the "Come Back to Erin" company, which appeared here on Saturday, March 6th, 1909, for $46.12, as his share of the box office receipts for the night's performance. Some other items were also in the claim. Two bills for $22.45 and $18.55, which were claimed by A. J. Small, booking agent for the circuit, and which were presented in conjunction with Mr. Turner's claim, were not allowed. His Honor Judge Huycke held that the Grand management had no right to refuse to settle with the company and give them their 65 per cent. of the evening's receipts until they had paid Small's claims, which weren't served in a regular manner, the local management simply being notified to take the amount of Mr. Small's claims out of the box office receipts, when it was agreed that the company would get 65 per cent. of the evening's performance as their share.

On the other hand, the company refused to continue the performance, and told the audience to get its money back, which it did. Mr. Turner was entitled to his 35 per cent., of $46.12.

When all of Mr. Turner's claims had been allowed in consideration of what was not given him, it was found that $14.33 was coming to him, which was given by the judgment of the court.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a tick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE VICTORY IN N. ESSEX

The victory of the Conservative candidate, Mr. Wilcox, in North Essex, which at the last general election gave a majority of 551 for the Liberal member, will likely tone down affairs at Ottawa considerably.

The French-Canadian portion of the constituency voted solid for Laurier as usual.

The Globe says the result is due to the conviction of the Liberals that their man was sure to be elected. The old excuse of over-confidence. Perhaps they will not be so confident next time.

The Laurier naval policy leans unmistakeably to independence. It demands a Canadian navy that shall not move out of Canadian waters except when Canadian authorities say so. This fact and the extravagance and corruptness of the administration is the cause of the Liberal candidate's defeat. It is unnecessary to look farther.

PROF. H. S. HERING WHO SPEAKS ON C.S.

Prof. Hermann S. Hering, C.S.B., a native of Philadelphia, Pa., whom the local Christian Scientists are bringing here, son of the late Dr. Constantine Hering, who Hahnemann called "The Father of Homoeopathy in America," is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania from the department of Mechanical Engineering, receiving the professional degree of M.E. in 1886. He was made Professor of Mechanics and Electrical Engineering by the Philadelphia Board of Education in 1887, and in 1891 was called to the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., as Associate in Electrical Engineering, where he remained eight years engaged in lecturing, and in conducting laboratory and research work.

In 1899 he gave up his profession for the purpose of devoting himself entirely to Christian Science work, and was a practitioner, reader and teacher in Baltimore, and Publication Committee for Maryland and the District of Columbia. In 1902 he was elected First Reader of the Mother Church in Boston for a term of three years, and subsequently was made president of the Church and a lecturer.

In 1906 he was called to Concord, New Hampshire, to become the First Reader of the Christian Science Church of that city, and has recently completed his three-year term of office there.

HIS PROPERTY ON ROAD RESERVE

Property Committee Has a Serious Proposition to Deal With—Will Look Over Land

Mr. Edward Green, through his solicitor, Mr. A. E. Dixon, has written to the City Council, asking that something definite be done in regard to the boundary line on the water front, as a survey has shown that part of his property on Water street, opposite the market square, is on a government reserve for a roadway, which runs at an angle from the corner of Water and Charlotte streets in a north-easterly direction until it strikes the river. This road allowance cuts off considerable of the property which Mr. Green has been occupying and paying rent for a number of years, and were he to be deprived of it, as might be the case in the event of a deed being given to some concern, he would lose considerable.

The Property Committee took up the question yesterday afternoon and will meet there to-day to look over the land and see what can be done.

Kirkwood's initial task, then, would be to find the needle in the haystack. The metaphor is poor—more properly, to sort out from the hundreds of vessels of all descriptions at anchor in midstream, moored to the wharfs of longshore warehouses or in the gigantic docks that line the Thames, that one called Alethea, of which he was so deeply mired in ignorance that he could not say whether she were tramp steamer, coastwise passenger boat, one of the liners that ply between Tilbury and all the world, channel ferryboat, private yacht (steam or sail), schooner, four master, square rigger, bark or brigantine.

London had turned over once or twice and was pulling the bedclothes over its head and grumbling about getting up, but the city was still sound asleep, when at length he paused for a minute's rest in front of the Mansion House and realized, with a pang of despair, that he was completely tuckered out.

With a sigh he surrendered to the flesh's frailty. An early cabby, cruising up from Cannon street station on the off chance of finding some one astir in the city aside from the doves and sparrows, suffered the surprise of his life when Kirkwood hailed him.

"Jump in, sir," he told Kirkwood cheerfully as soon as he had assimilated the latter's demands. "I knows precisely wotcher wants. Leave it all to me."

The admonition was all but superfluous. Kirkwood was unable for the time being to do aught else than resign his fate into another's guidance. Once in the cab he slipped insensibly into a nap and slept soundly on, as reckless of the cab's swift pace and continuous bouncing as of the sunlight glaring full in his tired young face.

He may have slept twenty minutes. He awoke faint with drowsiness, tingling from head to toe from fatigue and in distress of a queer qualm in the pit of his stomach, to find the hansom at rest and the driver on the step, shaking his fare with kindly determination. "Oh, a' right," he assented surlily and by sheer force of will made himself climb out to the sidewalk, where, having rubbed his eyes, stretched enormously and yawned discourteously in the face of the east end, he was once more himself and a hundred times refreshed into the bargain. Contentedly he counted 3 shillings into the cabby's palm, the fare named being one and six.

"The shilling over and above the tip is for finding me the waterman and boat," he stipulated.

"Right-o! You'll mind the 'orse a minute, sir?"

Kirkwood nodded. The man touched his hat and disappeared inexplicably. Kirkwood, needlessly attaching himself to the reins near the animal's head, pried his sense of observation open and became alive to the fact that he stood in a quarter of London as strange to him as had been Bermondsey wall.

To this day he cannot put a name to it. He surmises that it was Wapping. His cabby popped hurriedly out of the entrance to a tenement, a dull visaged, broad shouldered waterman ambling more slowly after.

"Nevvy of mine, sir," announced the cabby, "and a fust ryte waterman. Knows the river like a book, he do."

The nephew touched his forelock sheepishly.

"Thank you," said Kirkwood, and, turning to the man, "Your boat?" he asked, with the brevity of weariness.

"This wye, sir."

At his guide's heels Kirkwood threaded the crowd and then descended to a floating stage to which a heavy rowboat lay moored. In the latter a second waterman was seated, bailing out bilge with a rusty can.

"'Ere we are, sir," said the cabman's nephew, pausing at the head of the steps. "Now, where's it to be?"

The American explained tersely that he had a message to deliver to a friend who had shipped aboard a vessel known as the Alethea, scheduled to sail at flood tide, further than which deponent averred naught.

The waterman scratched his head. "A 'ard job, sir. Not knowin' wot kind of a boat she are mykes it 'arder." He waited hopefully.

"Ten shillings," volunteered Kirkwood promptly—"10 shillings if you get me aboard her before she weighs anchor, 15 if I keep you out more than an hour and still you put me aboard. After that we'll make other terms."

The man promptly turned his back to hail his mate. "'Arf a quid, Bob, if we puts this gent aboard a wessel name o' Allytheer afore she ayles at turn o' tide."

In the boat the man with the bailing can turned up an impassive countenance. "Coom down." He clinched the bargain and set about shipping the sweeps.

Bows swinging downstream, the boat shot out from the shore.

"How's the tide?" demanded Kirkwood, his impatience growing.

"On th' turn, sir," he was told.

For a long moment broadside to the current, the boat responded to the sturdy pulling of the port sweeps. Another moment and it was in full swing, the watermen bending lustily to their task. Ship after ship was passed, and in keen anxiety lest he should overlook the right one Kirkwood searched their bows and sterns for names, which in more than one case proved hardly legible.

The Alethea was not of their number.

In the course of some ten minutes the watermen drove the boat sharply inshore, bringing her up alongside another floating stage, in the shadow of another tenement, both so like those from which they had embarked that Kirkwood would have been unable to distinguish one from another.

In the bows old Bob lifted up a stentorian voice, summoning one William.

In answer to the third ear racking hail a man, clothed simply in dirty shirt and disreputable trousers, showed himself in the doorway above, rubbing the sleep out of a red, bloated countenance with a mighty and grimy fist.

"'Ello," he said surlily. "Wot's th' row?"

"'Oo," interrogated old Bob, holding the boat steady by grasping the stage, "was th' party wot engyged yer larst night, Bill?"

"Party name o' Allytheer," growled the drowsy one. "W'y?"

"Party 'ere's lookin' for 'im. Where will I find this Allytheer?"

"Best look sharp 'r yer won't find 'im," retorted the one above. "'E was at anchor off Bow creek larst night."

Kirkwood's heart leaped in hope. "What sort of vessel was she?" he asked, half rising in his eagerness.

"Brigantine, sir."

And again the boat was flying down in midstream, the leaden water, shot with gold of the morning sun, parting sullenly beneath its bows. Hugging the marshy shore, they rounded the Blackwall point, the boatmen pulling hard. Young William looked to Kirkwood, caught his eye and nodded.

"Here?"

Kirkwood rose, balancing himself against the leap and sway of the boat.

"Sumwhere's 'long o' 'ere."

From right to left his eager glance swept the river's widening reach. Vessels were there in abundance, but no brigantine, no sailing vessel of any type.

The young man's lips checked a cry that was half a sob of bitter disappointment. He sat down suddenly. "She's gone!" he cried in a hollow gasp.

The tired boatmen eased upon their oars, and old Bob stood up in the bows, scanning the riverscape with keen eyes shielded by a level palm. The boat drifted listlessly with the current.

Old Bob panted, "Dawn't—see—nawthin'—o' 'er." He resumed his seat.

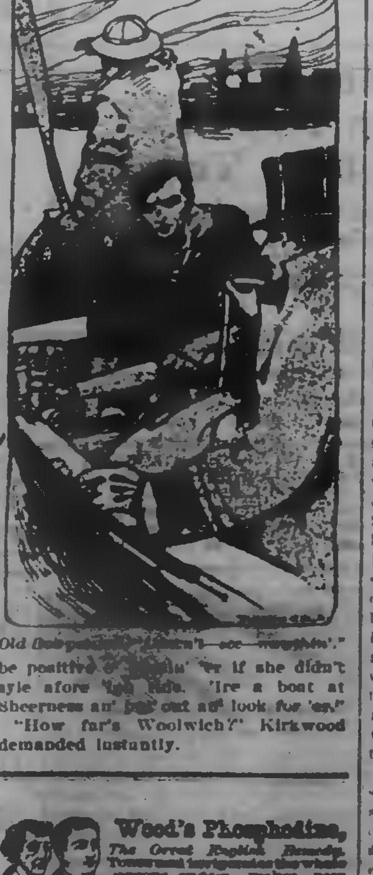
"There's no hope, I suppose?"

The elder waterman shook his head. "'Can't sye. Might be round—nex' bend — might be — passin' Purfleet. Point is—me an' young Wilyum 'ere—can't do no more'n we 'as. We be wore out."

"Yes," Kirkwood assented, disconsolate. "You've certainly earned your pay." Then hope revived. He was very young in heart, you know. "Can't you suggest something? I've got to catch that ship!"

Old Bob wagged his head in slow negation; young William lifted his.

"There's a rylewye runs by Woolwich," he ventured. "Yer might tyke tryne an' go to Sheerness, sir. Yer'd be positive o' passin' 'er if she didn't ayle afore 'igh tide. 'Ire a boat at Sheerness an' put out an' look for 'er."



Old Bob panted, "Dawn't—see—nawthin'."

"How far's Woolwich?" Kirkwood demanded instantly.

"Mile," said the elder man. "Tyke yer for five bob extry."

"Done!"

Young William dashed the sweat from his eyes, wiped his palms on his hips and fitted the sweeps again to the wooden tholes. Old Bob was as ready. With an inarticulate cry they gave way.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE old boatman seemed inclined toward optimism when the boat lay alongside a landing stage at Woolwich and Kirkwood had clambered ashore.

"Yer'll mebbe myke it," the waterman told him, with a weatherwise survey of the skies. "Wind's freshenin' from the east'rds, an' that'll 'old 'er back a bit, sir."

"Arsk th' wye to th' Dorkyard styshun," young William volunteered. "'Tis th' shortest walk, sir. I 'opes yer catches 'er. Thanky, sir."

He caught dexterously the sovereign which Kirkwood, in ungrudging liberality, spared them of his store of two. The American nodded acknowledgments and adieus, with a faded smile deprecating his chances of winning the race, sorely handicapped as he was. He was very, very tired and in his heart suspected that he would fail. But if he did he would at least be able to comfort himself that it was not for lack of trying. He set his teeth on that covenant in grim determination. Either there was a strain of the bulldog latent in the Kirkwood breed or else his infatuation gripped him more strongly than he guessed.

Yet he suspected something of its power. He knew that this was altogether an insane proceeding and that the lure that led him on was Dorothy Calendar. A strange, dull light glowed in his weary eyes on the thought of her. He'd go through fire and water in her service. She was costing him dear, perhaps was to cost him dearer still, and perhaps there'd be for his guerdon no more than a "Thank you Mr. Kirkwood!" at the end of the passage. But that would be no less than his deserts. He was not to forget that he was interfering unwarrantably. The girl was in her father's hands, surely safe enough there—to the casual mind. If her partnership in her parent's fortunes were distasteful she endured it passively, without complaint.

He decided that it was his duty to remind himself from time to time that his main interest must be in the game itself, in the solution of the riddle. Whatever should befall, he must look for no reward for his gratuitous and self appointed part. Indeed, he was all but successful in persuading himself that it was the fascination of adventure alone that drew him on.

A hapchance native whom he presently encountered furnished minute directions for reaching the Dockyard station of the Southeastern and Chatham railway, adding comfortable information to the effect that the next eastbound train would pass through in ten minutes—if Kirkwood would mend his pace he could make it easily, with time to spare.

Kirkwood mended his pace accordingly, but, contrary to the prediction had no time to spare at all. Even as he stormed the ticket grating the train was thundering in at the platform. Therefore a nervous ticket agent passed him out a first class ticket instead of the third class he had asked for, and there was no time wherein to have the mistake rectified. Kirkwood planked down the fare, swore and sprinted for the carriages.

The first compartment whose door he perked violently open proved to be occupied and was, moreover, not a smoking car. He received a fleeting impression of a woman's startled eyes staring into his own through a thin mesh of veiling, fell off the running-board, slammed the door and hurled himself toward the next compartment. Here happier fortune attended upon his desire. The boxlike section was untenanted, and a notice blown upon the window glass announced that it was "Second Class Smoking." Kirkwood promptly tumbled in, and when he turned to shut the door the coaches were moving.

A pipe helped him to bear up while the train was making its two other stops in the borough of Woolwich. It consoled him little that none disputed with him his lonely possession of the compartment, that he had caught the Sheerness train or that he was really losing no time. A sense of deep dejection had settled down upon his consciousness, with a realization of how completely a fool's errand was this of his. He felt foredoomed to failure. He was never to see Dorothy Calendar again, and his brain seemed numb with disappointment. Presently he toppled limply over on the cushions and fell fast asleep.

Rattling and swaying, the train left the town behind.

Presently he put aside his pipe and stared blankly out at a reeling landscape, the pleasant, homely, smiling countryside of Kent. A deeper melancholy tinted his mind—Dorothy Calendar was forever lost to him. Presently he toppled limply over on the cushions and fell fast asleep.

* * * * * * *

After a long time he seemed to realize rather hazily that the carriage door had been opened to admit somebody. Its smart closing bang shocked him awake. He sat up, blinking in confusion, hardly conscious of more, to begin with, than that the train had paused and was again in full flight. Then, his senses clearing, he became aware that his solitary companion, just entered, was a woman. She was seated across from him, her back to the engine, in an attitude which somehow suggested a highly nonchalant frame of mind. She laughed, and immediately her speaking voice was high and sweet in his hearing.

Beneath his breath the bewildered man said, "The deuce!" and above it, in a stupefied tone, "Mrs. Hallam!"

She nodded in a not unfriendly fashion, smiling brightly. "Myself, Mr Kirkwood! Really our predestined paths are badly tangled just now, aren't they? Were you surprised to find me in here with you? Come, now, confess you were!"

He remarked the smooth, girlish freshness of her cheeks, the sense and humor of her mouth, the veiled gleam of excitement in her eyes of the changing sea, and saw as well that she was dressed for traveling, sensibly, but with an air, and had brought a small hand bag with her.

"Surprised and delighted," he replied, recovering, with mendacity so intentional and obvious that the woman laughed aloud.

"I knew you'd be! You see, I had the carriage ahead, the one you didn't take. I was so disappointed when you flung up to the door and away again. You didn't see me hanging half out the window to watch where you went, did you? That's how I discovered that your discourtesy was unintentional, that you hadn't recognized me—by the fact that you took this compartment right behind my own."

She paused invitingly, but Kirkwood, grown wary, contented himself with picking up his pipe and carefully knocking out the dottle on the window ledge.

"I was glad to see you," she affirmed, "but only partly because you were you, Mr. Kirkwood. The other and major part was because sight of you confirmed my own secret intuition. You see, I'm quite old enough and wise enough to question even my own intuitions. For you are going to Queensborough, aren't you, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"Queensborough?" he echoed blankly, and, in fact, he was at a loss to follow her drift. "No, Mrs. Hallam; I'm not bound there."

Her surprise was apparent. She made no effort to conceal it. "But," she faltered, "if not there"—

"Give you my word, Mrs. Hallam, I have no intention whatever of going to Queensborough," Kirkwood protested.

"I don't understand." The nervous drumming of a patent leather covered toe, visible beneath the hem of her dress, alone betrayed a rising tide of impatience. "Then my intuition was at fault!"

"In this instance, if it was at all concerned with my insignificant affairs, yes—most decidedly at fault."

"Very well, then! Now, let us see—where are you bound?"

Kirkwood looked out of the window.

"I'm convinced it's a rendezvous."

Kirkwood smiled patiently at the landscape.

"Is Dorothy Calendar so very, very beautiful, Mr. Kirkwood?" with a trace of malice.

Ostentatiously Kirkwood read the Southeastern and Chatham's framed card of warning, posted just above Mrs. Hallam's head, to all such incurable lunatics as are possessed of a desire to travel on the running boards of railway carriages.

PRETTY GIRL SUES FRANK GOTCH FOR BIG DAMAGES

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Before entering the ring to wrestle for the world's championship with Giovanni Raicevitch tonight Frank A. Gotch, holder of the title, was served with a summons in a suit brought by Miss Addie Currie, who accuses the wrestler of failing to keep his promise to marry her. She asks $25,000 damages.

Miss Currie, pretty, unsophisticated and 21, formerly lived in St. Paul with her parents, but for the last year she has been living at Chicago. According to William K. Patterson, her attorney, Miss Currie met Gotch in Minneapolis. He said he had a number of letters bearing on the alleged suit. While he was not entirely familiar with all the facts in the case, the suit being somewhat hurriedly filed in order to be served on Gotch, Mr. Patterson said Miss Currie had been deeply humiliated and injured by the failure of Gotch to marry her.

GOTCH'S NEW JOB

Frank Gotch, the champion wrestler, who made his first big match appearance in Chicago last night, drops the following interesting little note to the Buffalo Express:

"Sporting Editor, Buffalo Express—Have signed for seven weeks, starting this month, with the Jim Jeffries combination, known as the Big Combination, and am supposed to meet all comers in fifteen-minute bouts. I am provided with a valet, private compartment in a private car, and other things too numerous to mention, as is Jack O'Brien. What! For this I receive the small pittance of $3,000 a week. Rather bad, eh, old sport!

Have noted what Zbysco said the other day, and, as Herman thanks the way he does, the match is as good as made. Have received many propositions to wrestle this match in several places about the country. I will break into these combination dates to go through with the match at once, so that I expect my next essay on the carpet will be with the Polish champion.

Regards to all my Buffalo friends and may I see them soon.

Yours truly,
FRANK A. GOTCH.

PETERBOROUGH HOCKEY CLUB PREPARES FOR THE SEASON

Enthusiasm in Evidence at Annual Meeting—Mr. W. E Wasson the New President—Nice Surplus in Treasury—Donation Made to Rugby Club.

The Peterborough Hockey Club did not win any championships in 1909, but the teams were good enough to draw large gates. As a result the club finished the season with a handsome surplus of $124.70, after paying for coat sweaters for the players of both the intermediate and junior teams. The junior team hardly paid its own way, but the intermediates drew big gates and made it an easy matter to carry the second team.

The annual meeting of the club was held at the Oriental Hotel last evening and took the form of a smoker. About thirty—players and enthusiasts—were in attendance and the meeting was a most successful one. There was an informal musical programme and everyone spent a most enjoyable time. Reports for the past year were received, new officers electd. and the prospects for the coming season discussed. It is likely that intermediate and junior teams will again be entered in the O.H.A. Work will be started at once to build up two strong teams and there is good material to start with. Nearly all of last year's intermediates will turn out, and some of the younger players will likely make the intermediate team.

One of the communications dealt with at the meeting was a letter from F. D. Craig, secretary of the Peterborough Rugby Club, in which the hockey club was asked to assist the rugby club in a monetary way, if possible, as the latter organization was short of funds and it is necessary to send a team to Toronto on Saturday. The club did not wish to default the game as it was desirous of maintaining the good name of the athletic clubs of Peterborough in this respect.

It was decided to make a donation of $24.70 to the rugby club, the feeling of the meeting being that the interests of the various athletic clubs in Peterborough were so interwoven that it was well to have the "help one another" spirit prevail. After making the donation to the rugby club, the hockey club has still $100 in the treasury to start the present season.

The president of the club, Dr. A. W. MacPherson, occupied the chair, and in his address he congratulated the players on the good showing they had made in 1909. There had been delay at the beginning of the season as organisation did not take place till December 12th. Neither team won the district, but both had played good enough hockey to get the support of the public. The intermediates had done especially well, the Lindsay team, which beat them out after exciting games, winning the intermediate championship.

Dr. MacPherson referred to the necessity of co-operation between the Peterborough Hockey Club and the City Hockey League. The good work in this connection had been started last year, and he hoped to see it more in evidence than ever this season. He looked forward to a very successful season and urged the players and officers of the club to get to work early.

The financial report of the secretary-treasurer, Mr. R. M. Glover, showed total receipts of $1,343.40 and disbursements of $1,238.70, leaving a balance of $124.70. The Lindsay games were the big money-makers, over $500 being taken in at each one. Mr. Glover pointed out that last year's experience again showed that a winning team would carry itself easily in Peterborough. The club had been well treated by the rink company, and it was possible that even better terms would be secured for the coming year. Mr. Glover spoke highly of the junior team, which had done exceedingly well considering the handicaps they were under. It was good policy to maintain the junior team as a feeder for the intermediates, and the youngsters would be well looked after again this season.

It was decided to nominate Dr. A. W. MacPherson as candidate for the O.H.A. Executive. The doctor wished to retire, but the boys wanted to have him again, as it was felt that he would be elected without any trouble. He will also act as the delegate of the Peterborough Club to the O.H.A.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers resulted as follows, a vote not being required for any of the positions—

Patrons and Patronesses—Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stratton, M.P.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Denham, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. G. Denne, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., and Mr. J. H. Burnham.

Hon. President—Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

President—Mr. W. E. Wasson.

1st Vice-President—Mr. Sam Ray.

2nd Vice-President—Mr. H. Morgan.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. R. M. Glover.

Candidate for O.H.A. executive and O.H.A. representative of club—Dr. A. W. MacPherson.

Executive—Messrs. Jos. Picard, jr.; C. G. Graham, W. Metheral and Charlie Ray.

Dr. MacPherson was again nominated for the presidency, but the nomination was withdrawn at his request.

PRESENTATION OF SWEATERS.

The intermediate players were presented with blue and white sweater-coats and the juniors with gray ones of excellent quality. Mr. Glover referred to the valuable assistance given by Mr. Joseph Picard in getting the sweaters.

A telegram was read from "Jakie" Moore, of Toronto, in which he wished the club success and asked if "he would get a coat-sweater sure."

Dr. MacPherson referred to the splendid spirit of sportsmanship shown by the hockey club in making a contribution to the rugby club.

Mr. Fred Darcy was called upon and made a short address, in which he wished the club every success. He stated that he would give a box of ten cent cigars to the player scoring the first goal in an O.H.A. game. The announcement was received with cheers.

MAY HAVE CLUB ROOMS

There was some talk of securing club rooms for the hockey club, and it is probable that quarters will be fitted up in the rink. The matter was left to the next executive.

Vocal solos were contributed by Mr. W. Milburn and others. Mr. Milburn made a big hit with his Harry Lauder songs.

A vote of thanks was passed to the management of the Oriental for the use of the room for holding the meeting.

SPORTING TALK

Jack O'Brien, feeling that he has been overlooked of late, is out with a challenge to Johnson, Jeffries, Kaufman or Langford, and says he can outpoint any or all of them.

Sam Berger does not take the offer of Brady for Jeffries to meet Kaufman as at all serious.

There is a movement on foot to bring the age limit in the Junior O.H.A. to sixteen.

The Hamilton Tigers are the only team in the Big Four to do without a coach.

Sporting men are circulating a yarn to the effect that Cofforth is Jack Johnson's real manager, and the fight will naturally take place at Colma.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Canada Hockey League will be held in Montreal on Saturday night.

Now that the annual meeting of the hockey club has been held it's up to the fans to follow out the plans prepared without loss of time. It's early in the season yet but not a bit too soon to carry on active preparations.

BOXING

"FAKE," SAYS BAT MASTERSON.

Says Bat Masterson in the New York Telegraph of the Johnson-Ketchel fight:—

"I would like to have all the money I'd be willing to bet," said an old-time sport, after looking at the pictures, "that if Johnston can't fight any better than he did with Ketchel, Jeffries can knock him out right now inside of ten rounds without another day's training." The old sport voiced my sentiments exactly. That Johnson was under wraps at all times can scarcely be doubted. His continual clinching and holding and his failure to use his famous right punch, all tend to show that he was stalling for a purpose, and that purpose was the pictures. Moreover, I believe that his knockdown was a palpable fake perpetrated for the sole purpose of enhancing the value of the pictures.

The idea that Ketchel could stand to be punched in every round as he was, to say nothing of the knockdown or two he received, and have strength enough left in the twelfth round to deliver a blow with sufficient force to sprawl Johnson out on the floor, is too ridiculous to think about. Johnson's marvellous recovery after his knockdown, coupled with his ability to get up and knock Ketchel stiff with a punch, although said to be in a dazed condition at the time, is altogether too theatrical a performance for me.

Traffic through Canadian canals for the season of 1908 was 17,502,820 tons, a decrease.

TURF

NO RACE AT BELLEVILLE.

Yesterday the city was visited by many strangers who came from near and far in the expectation of witnessing a good trotting race at Belleville Driving Park. Unfortunately they were disappointed, as there was no race, and this naturally caused many unfavorable remarks to be made. The event was to have been a match race between three horses, namely Tim Alert, Guy M., and Bourbon Brooks. The latter did not come, but the other two horses were here. One of the stipulations of the race was, so we are informed, that the track was to be in good condition, and it was certainly far from it, being very heavy and sticky. The judges after driving over the track and minutely inspecting it, decided to postpone the race until a later date, which was done, this being agreeable to the owners of the animals though spectators who had come a long way for nothing, were disappointed.—Belleville Intelligencer.

SENSATION IN TORONTO

As Result of Evidence in Police Court This Afternoon--Prominent Men are Implicated

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 12.—There was a sensation in municipal and political circles this afternoon through evidence in police court. During the trial of Owen Morrison and Allan Gibson, confidential clerk and electrician, respectively, of E. W. Gillett Company, manufacturers of yeast, etc. Wm. Dobie, manager, said that when Morrison was arrested for theft of formulae he confessed that a new company that was being promoted had offered $25,000 each to himself and Gibson to recover copies of formulae, half in cash, half in stock, and that behind the new Company were Ald. Bredin, Ald. Adams and the prominent criminal lawyer, T. C. Robinette, K.C., who was Liberal federal candidate in Centre Toronto one year ago. Both men were committed for trial.

HAVOC OF WOLVES

Kill Sheep, Cattle and Deer, North of Madoc—Much Damage Being Done.

Madoc, Nov. 11.—Numerous reports have been received here this fall of the large increase of wolves in the woods north of Madoc. Their depredations are getting to be a serious matter to the farmers, many having lost calves and sheep from their farm yards, and the destruction of deer has been enormous. Last week a hunting party had to remove their location owing to the presence of wolves in the vicinity. They were seen last week in the swamp a few miles north of Marmora by parties driving along the road. In the northern part of Grimsthorpe hunters report several packs, and the damage they are doing is very great. The Government might well raise the bounty to $25 or $30, and hunters and settlers would then have an inducement to make a systematic effort to exterminate the animals.

BROOMSTICK LAID ON MAGGIE McDUFF STOPS HER LAYING

New York, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Minnie Holmeberg, a widow, who lives in Ainslie lane, Canarsie, had her next door neighbor, Albert Rice, a retired farmer, in the Flatbush Police Court to-day on a summons charging him with cruelty to chickens.

According to Mrs. Holmeberg's account there is a feud of long standing between them because she insists on keeping a brood of fowls in order that her children may have fresh eggs. Yesterday her favorite hen, Maggie J. McDuff ("lay on, McDuff," you know) crossed the boundary fence into Rice's yard, and Rice, so the widow declared, took after the hapless creature with a broomstick and hit Maggie J. such a frightful wallop on the head as to give her concussion of the brain and affect her intellect. All yesterday afternoon Maggie J. was trying to soften a handful of English walnuts, evidently in the deranged belief that she could hatch out a London accent.

"Where's your proof?" asked Magistrate Nash.

"Here," said Mrs. Holmeberg, produced a large, irregularly shaped parcel. She took off the wrappings, and there was Maggie J. McDuff with her head bandaged up, looking far from well. Anybody could tell with half an eye that Maggie J. McDuff never again would be the hen she once was. Many in the court room were so moved by the spectacle that they went outside and leaned against things.

Magistrate Nash showed emotion himself. He could hardly keep from breaking down as he warned Mrs. Holmeberg to keep her poultry at home and Mr. Rice to use a kind word instead of a broom handle next time.

Then Mrs. Holmeberg restored the invalid to her wrappings and took her home. Seemingly there was not a cackle left in Maggie's system, let alone an egg.

Belleville Intelligencer.—After hearing that Welsh choir sing in their native tongue last night a great white light has broken in on us. Many people, both amateur and professional, have sung in Welsh in this city in the past. SOUVENIR OF THE EARLY DAYS OF THIS DISTRICT

Will be Presented to Peterborough Museum—Brass Plate Used for Making Notes to Raise Money for Gaol and Court House.

An interesting souvenir of the days of the early settlement of this district will be presented to the Peterborough Museum by Mr. D. Hughes Charles. It is an engraved brass plate which was used to make five shilling notes to raise money for the erection of the jail and Court House "for the intended district of Colborne." Mr. Charles secured the plate from a Mr. Armstrong, of Toronto, who had been given it by his father. It was dug up in Toronto many years ago when excavating was being done for the Garrison Creek sewer.

The plate is about six inches in length and four inches in width and the engraving is done very artistically. The design is somewhat unique. In the centre a deer is shown standing by the side of a stream, and on either side there is a figure of a man.

As is generally known the Colborne district included Peterborough when this part of Ontario was first settled. The inscription on the plate is as follows:

"The Building Committee appointed to superintend the erection of the jail and Court House in the intended district of Colborne promise to pay the bearer at the treasurer's office in Peterborough the sum of five shillings currency, twelve months after date with interest, for value received. By order of the committee."

PETERBOROUGH'S INCREASE IN POPULATION SATISFACTORY

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—In the present timely discussions on the steps that should be taken to advance the interests of Peterborough remarks have been made that indicate that other cities have advanced in recent years much faster than this city. Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Brantford and Welland have been referred to as having rapidly developed, while Peterborough is practically standing still. Here are some facts—

	Pop'n. 1905	Pop'n. 1908	Inc. P.C.
Brantford	19,092	20,711	8.5
Kingston	18,200	19,193	5.4
London	43,154	49,507	14.6
Hamilton	59,543	67,268	12.9
Windsor	14,007	16,192	15.5
Peterborough	14,391	16,907	17.4

I have not the returns for Guelph for this year, but the population of that city in 1905 was 12,956, and in 1908 14,060, an increase at the rate of 8.5 per cent. Welland is exceptional. Toronto, counting the additions of territory with the present population, has increased at a faster rate by a small percentage than Peterborough, but if these additions by annexation were subtracted I would not be surprised to see it about the same.

Peterborough is advancing faster than any other city in Ontario, with the possible exception of Toronto and Ottawa.

This is not an argument against greater efforts to advance the interests of this city. Let these efforts and the enthusiasm behind them be an outgrowth of the encouragement that comes from great things that have been done, and the promise they give of better things that may be accomplished by a united effort.

Yours truly,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

AN AUSPICIOUS OCCASION IN CONNECTION WITH NEW CHURCH

Presentation of Substantial Cheques to His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, by Catholic Societies—The Bishop's Expression of His Heartfelt Appreciation--Encouraging Praise for St. Peter's T.A.S.

On the interesting occasion of the donations towards the church of the Sacred Heart in the Assembly Hall of St. Peter's school last night there was a large and representative attendance of the societies directly interested in the presentations and other members of the congregation. The function was graced with the presence of his Lordship Bishop O'Connor and all the priest of the cathedral. Rev. Father McColl, rector of St. Peter's, was in the chair.

The object of the meeting was to make in a formal manner the presentations of the evening to his Lordship the gifts being cheques in payment for the different objects that the several Catholic societies had promised to the new church.

The proceedings were opened with an interesting piano duet by Misses Gorman and Hatrick, after which Miss Lavina Hallihan sang two solos in a delightful manner.

The first presentation was of the cheque of $1,100, made by St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society for the high altar. Mr. Joseph Primeau, the treasurer of the Society, made the presentation, which was accompanied by the following address read by Mr. J. L. Picard, the president;

To the Rt. Rev. R. A. O'Connor, D.D.,
Bishop of Peterborough;

May it please your Lordship.

We, the members of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, would feel ungrateful to so kind a Spiritual Father and disloyal to our Catholic principles if, upon the erection of a new city church we did not express in a concrete manner our desire to co-operate in this noble enterprise. Whilst not flattering ourselves on the extent of the help we wish to make it effective and suggestive.

Since the holy basis of our society is the spirit of self-denial and since our endeavor is to commemorate the Sacred Thirst of our Lord, we beg your Lordship to permit us to defray the expense of erecting the High Altar in the Church of the Sacred Heart. We feel that in so promoting the perpetual remembrance of our Lord's Sacrifice we will ever enjoy His help in bravely making a personal sacrifice which a little, but very little, resembles His own.

Finally, while we wish to erect this altar to the greater glory of God, we beg you to accept our efforts, which we desire were far more generous, as a mark of the high esteem and filial devotion we bear towards your Lordship personally.

On behalf of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society,
J. L. PICARD,
President,
M. J. MAHER,
Corr.-Sec.

HIS LORDSHIP'S GRATITUDE.

The Sodality, C.M.B.A., Catholic Order of Foresters and Ancient Order of Hibernians presented His Lordship with cheques for $150 each in payment for windows they have donated to the church.

His Lordship expressed his gratitude to the organizations making the presentations for their generosity. He was pleased also from the fact that it showed the harmony and sympathy for the work he had undertaken in the building of the new church. While cordially thanking all the societies his Lordship spoke at length of the good the T.A.S had undertaken to do and of the success that had crowned their efforts. The members of this organization were better men, not only because they were total abstainers, but also because the rules of the society urged them to partake of the sacraments more frequently. He referred at length to the pleasure he experienced in seeing the members of St. Peter's T.A.S. approach Holy Communion regularly four times a year. On account of the religious basis of the total abstinence movement it seemed most fitting that the high altar should be the gift of the society. He hoped that this generosity on the part of the members would mean a bestowal of future blessings for St. Peter's T.A.S.

THE OTHER PRESENTATIONS.

The other presentations were made by the following:—The Sodality, by Miss Susie Kelly and Miss Nora Fitzgerald; the C.M.B.A. by Messrs. J. J. Lynch and F. Lahey; the Catholic Order of Foresters by F. Murray and James Clancy and the A. O. H. by Messrs. Joseph Kelley and Michael Neary.

The Bishop referred also to the excellent work being done by these societies. The Sodality of the Blessed Virgin was a most commendable institution and was performing splendid work among the young ladies of the parish. His Lordship hoped that the blessing of God would continue to be on their every effort made in the cause of religion and virtue.

The other organizations came in for their measure of praise for the spirit of charity which they inculcate and for the valuable assistance they render the widow and orphan.

A TOTAL OF $1,700.

The total amount represented by last night's presentations was $1,700 which is most creditable and speaks in high terms for the interest taken in the furtherance of the Catholic religion in the city by the societies making the handsome gifts.

The illuminated cheque presented by the T.A.S. was of beautiful design and was made expressly for the occasion in the job department of the Review. When it has been passed through the bank the society will have it framed and placed with its other highly prized mementos.

His Lordship announced that the bell of the new church would be blessed on Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

LA PATRIE AND IMPERIAL DEFENCE; THE SECRET OF THE NEW CANADIAN NAVY POLICY

La Patrie in an editorial of Nov. 11, 1909, says: "The New York Herald published long despatches received from Ottawa upon the question of imperial defence. A member of the Laurier Cabinet declared to the correspondent that Canada will keep absolute control of its marine, that its warships shall not leave Canadian waters except upon the order of the country's authorities. 'We will not,' said this minister, 'attach ourselves to the tail of England's coat or that of Japan.'"

In its leader the same paper draws especial attention to the fact that our relations with the Empire constitute the question at issue. Our national status is the supreme question of the hour.

CAFE PEOPLE MAY LOCATE IN THE OLD HALL PREMISES

At a meeting of the Property Committee held yesterday afternoon, the question of disposing of or renting the premises on Simcoe street, opposite the city hall buildings, and for many years occupied by Richard Hall & Son, was considered. For the past two years it has been in the city's hands, and despite all endeavors made towards securing a tenent or purchaser, no success has been met with.

The chairman has been in touch for some time with Messrs. Harry Hamilton and George Thomas, who intend opening up a large and modern up-to-date cafe, with a view of putting through some kind of a deal and at yesterday's meeting, the committee decided to ask the price of $12,000 for the premises or rent them for the sum of $800 a year, the lessee to pay for all improvements necessary.

The matter was left in the hands of the chairman, and he stated that he would see the restaurant men and report at another meeting to be held this afternoon.

TO EMPLOYERS OF LABOR

The great success of the Free Employment Bureau, for men, and the Women's Work Bureau, during the past ten months, has encouraged the Associated Charities of Toronto to continue their efforts. "They have secured enlarged premises where the work will be much more efficiently carried on. Both bureaus now being under the one management, and in the same building. We owe it to the large number of men and women who say, "Its work, not charity, we want," to see that such is provided for them through this channel, which is entirely free to both employer and employee.

Another feature added to our endeavors is to try and secure light employment for the "aged" and "physically defective" class, who deserve the sympathy of all who can give such work as can be performed as the young and strong. These must live, and should have a chance to maintain themselves.

All all who require help of any kind, skilled or unskilled men or women, communicate direct with these bureaus, Toronto Free Employment Bureau (for men) south-east corner of Queen and Jarvis street, and the Women's Work Bureau, in the same building. An earnest effort will be made to secure just the help you need, and as promptly as possible.

RAIN AND WIND IN JAMAICA

Special to the Review.

London, Nov. 12.—Kingston, Jamaica, is still cut off from the world. A message from the storm-swept island received here to-day discredited rumours of an earthquake. The message came from Holland Bay, a port on the extreme south point of the island. It reports that the heavy rains which have flooded the island continued with high north-east winds and heavy seas but declares that the reports of the damage by the hurricane are exaggerated.

MEETING IN CONSERVATIVE CLUB ROOMS

A meeting is called for to-night in The Conservative Club rooms, George street of all present and prospective members of the Conservative Club, for the purpose of celebrating the notable victory of the Conservative candidate in North Essex, yesterday. A pleasant gathering is assured. There will be some speeches. Mr. C. N. Brown, the president, is anxious that there should be a full turnout. The club is a centre of loyalty to a united empire and regards with alarm and indignation the Laurier policy of "an independent Canadian navy."

NOW READY FOR FOR OCCUPATION

Adelphi Chambers are Handsome Premises and Every Convenience Has Been Installed

The new business block opposite the Grand Opera House, which has been erected by Mr. J. J. Lundy, is now ready for occupation with the exception of a few rooms, which are receiving the finishing touches. The building is made up of stores on the ground floor, apartments on the second floor and single and double rooms in the top storey. No expense has been spared to make the premises thoroughly modern, as an inspection will show. Every convenience has been installed, including gas stoves in the apartments which are large and well lighted. The floors are hardwood. All the work has been under the supervision of Mr. James Graham, and the general and well finished appearance of the building is highly complimentary to him and his staff.

The new premises will be called Adelphi Chambers.

THE SUGAR TRUST HAS MANY SINS

Official of U.S. Corporation Indicted For Conspiracy—As Result of Short Weight Customs Scandals, Former Supt. is Arrested!

New York, Nov. 13.—Sworn testimony taken by congressional and legislative committees, by the courts and in other legal proceedings, shows that the sugar trust in the United States has been proved guilty of· Bribing the political committees of both parties.

Influencing United States Senators by stock tips and other financial transactions.

Taking rebates in violation of the interstate commerce law.

Swindling the United States treasury in violation of the United States tariff law.

Using short weight scales.

Blacklisting grocers who handled independent sugar.

Importing cheap contract labor.

Violation of factory and health laws.

Stealing water from New York city.

Conspiring to ruin independent sugar refiners.

Persistent violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

After many months of quiet work behind the scenes by Government investigators, who have been scrutinizing the ins and outs of the complicated sugar import frauds, there came suddenly yesterday the indictment and arrest of an important former officer of the American Sugar Refining Co., charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government by false weighing of sugar.

The man arrested is James F. Bendernagel, for more thaan 30 years superintendent of the Havemeyer & Elder Refinery Co. His resignation from this responsible position was announced by the company only yesterday.

The indictment returned against Bendernagel is of the blanket variety, including in its terms also the so-called "big six," Oliver Spitzer, Thos. Kehoe, Edward A. Boyle, Jean M. Voelker, John R. Coyle, and Patrick J. Hennessy—all of whom have been previously indicted on similar charges. The six were Bendernagel's associates in the capacity of agents and boss weighers at the Williamsburg plant. They are all at present awaiting trial.

The indictment also relates the old charges made against four members of the so-called "big six," alleging the use of fraudulent devices on the scales used at the Williamsburg docks to short weigh sugar for the purpose of avoiding customs charges. It was in connection with these charges that the Government last spring recovered $2,135,000 in duties and penalties. It is now alleged that the Government was in reality, originally, cheated out of something like $30,000,000.

There are rumors that indictments against the men higher up will be brought within a few days, and that the men of the trust who really paid the money to the weighers are at last brought to justice.

IRON IN THE HESTIA'S CARGO

Montreal, Nov. 13.—The verdict in the wreck of the Hestia throws the whole blame on the captain and the officers. Capt. Lugar yesterday morning, after some unimportant evidence, announced his decision, giving his reasons as follows:

1. An error of compass due to 800 tons of iron in the cargo;
2. Neglect of proper precautions in taking soundings;
3. Not sufficient allowance for the strong set of the tide and wind;
4. Error of judgment of the captain and officers in neglecting to take the bearing of the Gannet rock light, which was only five and half miles away.

In response to the request of the shipping interests that an investigation take place into the subsequent efforts at rescue, Capt. Lugar announced it probable that there would be another investigation.

A PRISONER JUMPS FROM MOVING TRAIN

Moncton, N.B., Nov. 13.—With the Maritime Express speeding thirty-five miles an hour, an Indian named Bernard made a dash for liberty by jumping through a car window at Gloucester Junction yesterday. He was in charge of Sheriff Stewart of Dalhousie who was taking him to Dorchester for a two-year term for stealing. He was handcuffed, and had asked permission to go to a closet. When the train slowed up, a fireman came hurrying back, saying he saw a man fall through the window and roll down the embankment.

Deckhand Killed.

Port Dalhousie, Nov. 13.—While passing through lock four of the new canal last night, Wm. McElligott, aged 23, of Ogdensburg, a deck hand on the steamer McVittie, bound from Ogdensburg to Chicago, was killed by falling between the boat and lock.

SENATOR AT OTTAWA GOT $2,005 FOR ONE DAY ONLY

Auditor-General Protests Against Irregularities in Sessional Indemnity Lists—Another Senator Got $2,020 for Two Days' Work.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—That one Senator got $2,005 for one day's attendance during the last session of Parliament, and another got $2,020 for two days' presence in the Upper Chamber, and that the Auditor-General objected, is set forth in the annual report of that official made public yesterday. The names of the Senators are suppressed.

According to the report, they "were each paid the sessional indemnity of $2,500 less a deduction of $15 per day for absence for each sitting day over the fifteen allowed, although the former was only two days in attendance, January 20 and 21, and the latter one day in attendance, January 21.

"It would appear," he says in pointing it out, "that you have paid these Senators under subsection 2 of section 35 to the act, rather than under section 33 of the act, which stated that a member shall not be entitled to the said sessional allowance for less than thirty-one days attendance, but his allowance for any less number of days shall be twenty dollars for each day's attendance."

The reply in effect was that these Senators were entitled to draw their indemnity on this basis.

The opening encounter between the Opposition and the Government took place yesterday afternoon over a British Columbia matter.

On Sept. 1 last, the act creating a court of appeal for the Pacific province was brought into force, but the Federal Government has made no appointment of judges, and, to quote the Minister of Justice, will make none for a little time yet. The reason attributed by the Opposition is that the Government has delayed matters until the B.C. elections are over, and R. L. Borden described the situation as a disgrace on the administration of justice in Canada.

No fewer than twenty-three blue books were laid on the table of the House yesterday afternoon. This is a record for the printing bureau, of which W. G. Parmelee is the new head.

After this formality, Mr. Borden drew attention to the situation regarding the recently-created Court of Appeal in British Columbia. The Legislature in 1907 had passed an act constituting the Court of Appeals, which would go into force upon a date to be announced by the Lieutenant-Governor. The Federal Government was advised of the act, and in 1908 legislated accordingly, naming the salaries. Last May, the date of the coming into force of the act, was announced as Sept. 1, so that immediately upon the proclamation the court could be organized. The B.C. Act, accordingly, was brought into force on Sept. 1 last, and jurisdiction transferred to the Court of Appeal.

"Why is it?" asked Mr. Borden, "that there has been this extraordinary delay, after receiving notice as far back as May?" It had been stated that gentlemen taking part now in the B.C. elections, and whose names were mentioned, had some understanding or intimation that their claims to appointment would be well considered.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, explained that the provincial statute had been assented to on April 25, 1907, and as the Dominion Parliament had prorogued two days later, the announcement did not reach Ottawa in time to deal with it that session. In 1908, the Federal Parliament passed legislation providing for the salaries. If there had been any crying need for action, he would have supposed that those charged with the administration of justice would have acted with promptness. The Attorney-General of B.C. had been in Ottawa last spring, and had said the proclamation would be made the following day. He was in Ottawa four weeks after that, but nothing was done.

Finally, Mr. Aylesworth said, he went to Europe and he honestly thought that the statute never would be brought into effect. His own responsibility for delay counted from four weeks ago, when he returned to Canada, and found that the proclamation had been made on Sept. 1, and that the first meeting of the Court of Appeal was to take place on Nov. 2. He had received a telegram from the Attorney-General of British Columbia, pointing this out. However, he was not ready to make recommendations to the Ministers, and he had replied accordingly. To this he had received no answer. He purposed still to delay a little longer, until he would be able to make all the appointments at once.

Martin Burrell (Yale-Cariboo), said the personnel of the appointees had been discussed by Liberal newspapers. Indeed, the late leader of the Liberal party in British Columbia had resigned when mentioned for a seat on the bench, but to his great credit he had taken no part in the election.

FATHER TURBIDE IS IN OTTAWA

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—Rev. Father Turbide, from the Magdalene Islands, Gulf of St. Lawrence, arrived yesterday morning to see members of the Government with reference to matters which concern his parishioners.

He wants a better postal service. The fact that he did not know that the Postmaster-General was still in Europe is proof that there is much reason for his request. He saw Hon. L. P. Brodeur instead.

Father Turbide also wants to see better facilities for the transport of the harvest of the sea. Their lobsters are the best known, he argues, and if the people in general could get them the lobster as a food would grow in favor.

IT WILL NOT OCCUR AGAIN

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—It was explained yesterday why Sir Wilfrid Laurier was attired in evening dress at Thursday's opening ceremonies. It appears that the right honorable gentleman's state uniform was sent to England for alterations and repairs and was not returned in time.

The absence of the gay-coated outriders from the Governor-General's carriage in the procession is accounted for by the fact that Earl Grey had not anticipated being in Canada for the opening of another Parliament and many of his servants had returned to the old country. No experienced men could be got to take their places.

JAMAICA SUFFERS GREAT LOSS FROM A HURRICANE

Torrents of Rain and Heavy Wind Storms Have Caused Immense Damage to Plantations and to all Forms of Transportation.

Kingston, Jamaica, Nov. 13.—(via Holland Bay.)—Torrential rains causing serious floods have fallen here since last Friday. The downpour continues, the daily fall averaging ten inches. In one day the precipitation amount to 13 inches.

Railway and electric car operations have been completely disorganized and telegraphic communication is possible only with the western part of the island. The remainder is cut off the land lines having been prostrated and the stations of the cable companies badly damaged.

Many cases of drowning are reported, while the property damage is incalculable. Communication from point to point on the coast is possible only by boat. Owing to the failure of the telegraph and telephone wires, details of the damage done in the interior are not yet available.

From the meagre fects obtainable it is known that landslides have occurred throughout the north and that in the northeastern section of the island railroad bridges had been washed away and tunnels blocked, completely stopping all railroad movements.

It is believed that train service in the northern portion cannot be renewed before two weeks.

Instances of the loss of life are reported, though no estimate of this can be safely made. Enormous damage has been done to the banana and other plantations. The power house of the electric power company here is under water and 600 feet of the company's pipe has been washed out of the ground. The largest bridge in Jamaica over a waterway has been twisted and rendered unsafe. The damage to property throughout the island can only be guessed at, but in Kingston alone the loss is estimated at $250,000.

No communication has been possible between the city and interior parts since the 6th.

BIG COAL-STEEL MERGER NOW NEARING COMPLETION

Montreal, Nov. 13.—The negotiations which have been going on during the past few days between E. R. Wood and Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, representing a syndicate of Toronto holders of Dominion Steel and Coal stock, and James Ross, president of the Dominion Coal Co., represented by Charles H. Cahan, in a legal capacity, were brought very near to a close last evening. The finishing touches, it is expected will be reached to-day.

It is authoritatively stated that the result will be the passing of a portion of the Ross Coal holdings, the whole of which represent a par-value of $5,000,000 to the syndicate at a price somewhat under par.

It may also be added that the merger of Dominion Coal and Dominion Iron and Steel into one great company, to be known as the Canada Steel Corporation, is now nearer an accomplished fact than ever before.

In fact, as soon as the transfer of this large block of coal stock is made, active steps will be taken to bring about the union of the two companies, although it can be said that no basis as to prices of the two companies entering the merger has yet been reached or discussed.

Mr. Ross will still probably be the largest individual holder of coal stock when negotiations are opened for the uniting of the two corporations. It is stated that before Ross would sell a share of his coal common, gentlemen representing holdings to the value of $2,000,000 assured the president that they would not sell their stock even if par were offered, deciding to run their chances of becoming a part of the greater corporation to be created, consequently the president was relieved of the obligation which he for a long time felt, viz., that he was in duty bound to protect the minority shareholders, who had so loyally stood by him during the protracted difficulties with the other company.

Col. Sir Henry Pellatt left for Toronto last evening.

ANNUAL REPORT OF LABER DEPARTMENT

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The annual report of the Department of Labor states that in the two years of the Lemieux Act, up to March 31 last, 55 disputes have been referred for settlement under its terms, and 53 were disposed of without strikes or lockouts.

During the year 315 fair wage schedules were prepared for public contracts, and 17 complaints were received of non-fulfilment of conditions. The number of strikes and lockouts, 69, was smaller than for seven years, compared with 151 the previous year. There also was a decrease in industrial accidents, the record being 1,272 fatal and 2,377 non-fatal.

DISCOVER CASE OF TERRIBLE DEPRAVITY

Belleville, Nov. 13.—A terrible case has been found near Frankford, in Hastings County, by Children's Aid officials. Twelve members of the McDonald family were living in two rooms. There were the parents, five brothers, three sisters, and an uncle, 60 years old. The eldest girl, Sarah McDonald, has had three children, two of them alive. She says her brothers are the fathers of her children. She was brought to the shelter here, and her brothers will be prosecuted.

GLASGOW STUDENTS IN A RIOT

London, Nov. 13.—Fourteen hundred Glasgow students rioted at the Coliseum Music Hall in that city Thursday night. They fought and beat the police, and later rioted in the streets, where the police finally triumphed over them. The students had gone to the theatre to pelt a hypnotist, who had been denounced as a quack, and who had called them "a pack of beggardly Carnegie students," with eggs and produce.

Two Arrests Made.

Belleville, Nov. 13.—Raffaele Molinoro, who was wounded at Glen Miller by the alleged accidental discharge of a gun, is dead, and two Englishmen, George Rumble and Lulle Glover, were arrested and brought to the county jail here. The charge against them is doing grievous bodily harm. An inquest will be held Wednesday

SAMUEL GOMPERS FEARS WORST

Seems to Think He and Colleagues Will Have to go to Jail

Toronto, Nov. 13.—Coming events cast their shadows before, and President Gompers' rather pessimistic statement of the position in which he, Vice-President John Mitchell and Secretary Frank Morrison stand, seemed to indicate that the veteran labor leader feared the worst.

In reply to Delegate J. Sullivan of Cincinnati, who requested that the convention should be enlightened as to the actual situation of their leaders, Mr. Gompers surprised a good many delegates when he stated that it was quite possible that no appeal would be allowed. No doubt they could have established their innocence by some technicality, but they welcomed the opportunity afforded them of fighting the matter out on the broad grounds of their inherent constitutional rights.

Fifteen days would be allowed their attorneys after the affirmation of the courts' decision, in which to furnish a defence. Though he and his colleagues had been told that they would never go to jail, they had also been told that Judge Wright would never find them guilty, but he did.

He had strong faith in the righteousness of their cause, for he considered it the most important fight for free speech and free press that had taken place in America since the days of slavery.

BEE KEEPERS FINISH WORK

Toronto, Nov. 13.—The Ontario bee-keepers concluded their sessions yesterday morning. That the production of honey is assuming importance in Ontario will be realized when it is learned that 5,000 men are professional bee-keepers.

Two townships in Northumberland County have been complaining bitterly of the losses through foul brood. Although the Department of Agriculture has been for the last few years trying to suppress this pest, more urgent measures are necessary. A resolution to this effect was passed. The executive committee, together with H. G. Sibbold of Claude, Ont., and Morley Pettit, are delegated to see to the passing of a more stringent measure.

PITTSBURG POLICE UNEARTH BIG REAL ESTATE SWINDLE

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 13.—Through the arrest here yesterday of A. B. McCarthy, collector for the Metropolitan and Suburban Real Estate Co. of West Hampton Park, Long Island, the police declare they have unearthed a get-rich-quick scheme with ramifications extending to Toronto and to practically every large city east of Chicago.

The company does business through a scheme of handsomely engraved coupons, which entitle the investor to an "immense discount" when purchasing a lot in the Long Island plan. The first lot sells for $100 and the second for $50. Should the purchaser acquire two lots on the five dollars down and five dollars a month plan, he is allowed to pick out his own lots, but should he acquire but one, the company chooses the lot.

According to the collection cards found upon McCarthy, Pittsburgers have invested about $50,000 in land which was represented to them as being laid out in town lots, with paved streets, drains and all improvements, when, according to Postoffice Inspector C. E. Crowell, some of the land is actually under water and there are no improvements.

McCarthy is held on charges of violating the state law in not being registered at Harrisburg and of doing business without a license.

The company is advertised as a New Jersey corporation, with $100,000 capital stock, and the local detectives declare it has floated deeds with a face value of at least $1,500,000 in this country and Canada.

Miss Jean Kennedy, a prepossessing young woman, is said to represent the company in Toronto.

HER DEATH WAS HOURLY EXPECTED

Enterprise, Ont., Oct. 1st, 1908.
"For seven years I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor." I could neither sit, stand, nor lie down. Hypodermics of morphia had to be given me to ease the pain.

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

My cure seemed hopeless, and my friends hourly expected my death. I was so bad that I wanted to die, and it was during one of these very bad spells that a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. After much persuasion I commenced to take them, but I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I commenced to experience relief. I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes I was cured, and when I appeared on the street my friends said. 'The dead has come to life,' and this seemed literally true, because I certainly was at death's door."
(Signed) MRS. JAMES FENWICK.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box—6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c, or sent post-paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

AGRICULTURE IN ONTARIO

The annual report of the Ontario Bureau of Industries is at hand. Agricultural statistics show the total value of field crops in the province was $161,077,282. Farm help (male) was fairly plentiful, but female help is still an unsolved problem.

The number of acres assessed in Peterborough County is 573,993, of which 257,193 are cleared, 131,075 in woodland and the balance in slash and swamp land. Fall wheat has been lower in price than in some recent years, while spring wheat was a little higher. Barley shows a decline in price over 1907, oats ditto, while peas were higher. Corn was lower and rye about the same as in 1907. The number of milch cows shows a material decrease as do cattle also. Sheep, lambs and swine are much below what they used to be, but poultry shows an increase. Wool is a "lost art" and even bees do not buzz as they used to do.

Farm land has decreased in value below the preceding year by 3 millions of dollars, while buildings, implements, &c., remain about the same. The rental and actual value per acre has declined. Chattel mortgages against farmers have increased by about 700, and the amount involved by $330,000.00.

THE FARMER'S PERIL

The decline of the cheese industry in Canada is a sign of the times. The cheese industry has gone back to the tune of $1,000,000 (one million) in one year! It will be satisfactory, perhaps, to the farmers to know that railway contracting has gone on as never before. The surplus of taxes which Canadians have paid into the national treasury are reserved for expenditures upon the G.T.P., steel bounties, Georgian Bay canal ventures and the like. Anything is good enough to spend money on but the Canadian farmer who, in Ontario, is getting poorer year by year. This was not the case fifteen years ago when farming was profitable and the trade of our farmers overseas was well looked after and increased tremendously in bulk. But it's the case now. It is not the sudden descent of an epidemic. It is the gradual result of ascertained causes.

The development of the west is ruining the farmer of the east. The very best land in the west is $30 an acre. Allowing for differences in freight, the very best land in the east will not, therefore, be able to bring more than $35 an acre in the near future. Land, like anything else, must find its level. Competition brings similarity in prices. The decline of the farming industry in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces has been as sure as death, and of a similar character.

The legislation of the Laurier regime is, one might almost say, deliberately hostile to the farmer. But why is it so? Surely no man would deliberately seek to ruin the farming industry. This is a natural answer. It would be the true one if facts did not show that the Laurier policy is a POLICY of EXPENDITURE, here, there and everywhere. The financier in London, Montreal or Toronto finds in Sir Wilfrid the ideal Colonial Minister. Under the name of "development" money is imported on the credit of the country, and labour is imported to almost the ruin of the labour-market and to the moral and physical condition of the country. Canada, at present, is the appanage of the moneyed men. He is "farming" it with the help of Sir Wilfrid to the best of his ability, and to "the last drop of sweat" in the taxpayer's body. And yet, in the face of this enormous and unnecessary expenditure THE CHEESE INDUSTRY OF CANADA LOST ONE MILLION DOLLARS IN ONE YEAR! Is cheese not a fair index of our prosperity, especially in the east? It is, most certainly. It represents more surely than any other commodity, the condition of Eastern Canadian agriculture.

The American farmers are laughing in their sleeves. They are given the greatest inducements to take up land in the west, and have done so. The railways want them to do so. It was "pie" for them. But it has been death to the Ontario farmer.

Sir Robert Perks says he will not stand again for Parliament in England. "All his time will be taken up with the Georgian Bay Canal," which means an expenditure of $150,000,000 (one and fifty millions). If the Canadian farmer allows this preposterous expenditure to go through he deserves his fate. His wheat lands have decreased in value. His pasture lands must follow in the wake of a decreasing return from cheese. His prospects are gloomy and will become rapidly worse if this insane idea of sacrificing Canada on the altar of extravagance is not curbed without delay. The navy is only one more straw. It is to fight when we say so, and only then. A majority in Parliament might say that an attack on revolutionists—if there were such—in Ireland was no cause for our flying to assist in it. It might mean the disintegration of the empire. It certainly is as an "independent Canadian navy" a mad and useless piece of extravagance. And yet the money the farmer has to pay in taxes for it is becoming less and less! If our national revenues are so large, WHY IS THE TAXATION FOR REVENUE NOT LOWERED? Why is it kept up and the money spent in G.T.P.'s, navies and the like, as if it were hard to find ways of spending it?

We are living on the prairies of the west. They are our last asset. When they are gone what will the financiers lend their money on? The lure of "enterprise" has become the line of national speculation. The farmer in the east has been the first to feel the effects of it. Canada is buying on margin. Her present policy is one of Pay! Pay! and trust to the future. What does the cheese-maker think of it?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Cheer up! Lots of bad times yet. An ex-naval stoker has died of sea-sickness. Nice prospect for the feeble-stomached.

Some people think that the game of "Bridge" is named after the Quebec bridge because so much was lost by it.

The assets of the farm have gone down by 25 per cent. in Ontario and yet the Globe says the redemption of N. Essex by the Conservatives was merely the result of over confidence in the Laurier Administration. Bully for the Globe!

The country at large is now beginning to appreciate the principles of Liberty as preached by Mr. Goldwin Smith. His style is notable, above all others, for the use of the true English idiom, a thing as necessary to a true stylist or writer of note, as water is to a well.

"The defeat of the Liberal candidate in this constituency by a considerable majority is disappointing, not so much because it lessens the Government's large majority as because it deprives the party in power of the support of an able and tried politician in the House of Commons. Mr. McKee served a term in the Ontario Legislature and was for some time the Chief Whip; the savoir-faire he then acquired would have stood him in good stead in the wider Parliamentary arena.

Any attempt to make this incident serve as an indication of the hostility of the electors to the naval policy of the Government must fail, for the matter was seldom referred to and was never discussed during the campaign. Evidently it was by the speakers and voters on both sides assumed to be in good hands when Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden are known to be at one as to what Canada should do by way of contributing to the defence of the Empire. The vast majority of the people of Essex, like the vast majority of Canadians everywhere, know how to show respect for both themselves and their country.

The Essex Liberals would not be justified in regarding this temporary set-back as a disaster. If they work intelligently to perfect their organization and attend to the voters' lists they will win easily when the general election takes place. The riding has had a somewhat fitful political record, and it should not be difficult to replace it in the Liberal column."—The Globe.

And it was "replaced" accordingly.

SENT TELEGRAM TO MR. WILCOX

The Conservative Club held a little celebration of its own last night to the Wilcox victory in North Essex. Lt.-Col. Miller, Mr. J. H. Burnham and Mr. C. N. Brown, the president of the club, were the speakers who all agreed that the time had come in Canada for less attention to party politics and more to the needs of the country. The policy of a brand new expensive "Canadian Navy" was disapproved as unnecessary and for the reason that it was to go into action only when the Canadian Government was thoroughly satisfied of the justice of the war, more like impudence than imperialism. It was moved by Mr. W. E. Murphy, vice-president, and seconded by Mr. Geo. Coons, "That the president wire the club's congratulations to Mr. Wilcox, M. P." The resolution carried with cheers and was wired at once.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

FURTHER OBJECTIONS TO LOCAL OPTION AND ANSWERS TO THEM.

Last Saturday we published some of the objections to the introduction of local option in Peterborough that are heard once in a while. The following are some additional ones with such incomplete answers to them as our space permits us to give. Again we would draw the attention of Peterborough ratepayers and citizens to the point that now is the time for these matters to be discussed through the press and on the public platform. Any arguments that the liquor interests may have against local option should be brought forward now while there is plenty of time for them to be discussed. Be on your guard against statements that may be circulated during the last few days or couple of weeks of the campaign.

GOOD AND BAD FEELING

Objection No. 1.—If we adopt local option it will create bad feeling. Let us look at this objection closely. What creates the bad feeling?

Is it not the bar-room and the attempts of bar-room votaries to defy and break the law after people have said that the bar-room will be abolished?

The law against usury creates bad feeling among money-lenders.

The law against dishonesty creates bad feeling amongst thieves. The law against perjury is disliked by liars. Every law creates bad feeling amongst those who are prevented by that law from following the bent of their own inclinations or from preying upon the weakness of their fellowmen.

The remedy, however, is not a poorer law, but better people. Local option will bring this about, for the moral uplift and educational improvement will work such a change in the individual and public mind as to bring about a better understanding and a better and more cordial sentiment all round.

LOCAL OPTION STAYS

Objection No. 2.—Local option has not been a success in other places.

Is it not strange, then, that where they have them, the people do not repeal local option by-laws?

It is still more strange, that instead of showing their dissatisfaction, the electors in local option municipalities have almost invariably increased their majorities in favor of that measure the first time they have had an opportunity.

If we take the results of the past four years we find that out of one hundred and twenty-eight opportunities to repeal local option by-laws by a simple majority of the votes polled, there had been only fifteen attempts, up to last December, and only two of these attempts had been successful.

In one other case the majority was reduced by five; in the other thirteen cases the people sustained the measure by increased majorities.

Local option is a most pronounced the people living under the operation of local option by-laws being themselves the judges. They ought to know. They do know. That is why they vote to sustain the measure.

DRUGGISTS DON'T DO IT

Objection No. 3.—That it will only add to the pockets of druggists.

Druggists have no more right to sell under local option than they have under license, and the law regarding the sale by druggists is precisely the same under one condition as under the other. It is a base slander to insinuate that the druggists of the Province of Ontario are the kind of men who will engage in the illicit selling of liquor. They are not.

One way of answering this objection would be to ask the question. Why have druggists not become dive-keepers in places already under local option?

The detectives of the Provincial License Department have detected practically no violations of the law by druggists. It would be business suicide for a druggist to do as this objection suggests they would do under local option. Druggists as a class

It is beneficial from the standpoint are not either bad enough from a business standpoint to violate the law in this regard. Our Peterborough druggists have already agreed among themselves that they will endeavor to see that the provisions of the law, as it relates to things are not evaded.

MAKING AND WASTING

Objection No. 4.—Local option would mean the raising of taxes on account of the loss of revenue from license fees.

That this would not be the case is shown by the experience of other places in Ontario and of cities in the States which have adopted local option. When a person raises this objection challenge them to name a single municipality any where in which the taxes have been raised as a result of the adoption of local option. They can't do it. While there is a direct loss in revenue when no license fees are paid this is far more than offset by the saving in police court and other criminal prosecutions in the keeping of prisoners in the jail and by the increase in the value of property in places where the saloons are closed.

Under local option there may be some depreciation in the assessment of premises formerly under license, but there will be an increase in value in other property in the community, and the revenue from this increment of value in other property will far more than counterbalance the depreciation in assessment of licensed property and the loss of license fees.

If the money now wasted over the bar-room remains in the pockets, or is invested in the business of those who now spend it, or if it goes into the channels of ordinary trade, much of it is bound to take some taxable form. For example:

A hardware merchant in the town of Thornbury was asked for some specific instance of a man who had been benefitted by local option. There were two little girls in the store at the time and the merchant did not answer. As the girls went out he said the father of those two girls was at one time an almost worthless drunkard. Since local option had come into force he had straightened right up. He was now building a home for himself, and had paid him cash for all the hardware used in the construction of the house.

There was an instance in which the money which formerly went over the bar was assuming a taxable form in the community. The wealth of the community was being increased. This we would naturally expect to a greater or less extent. This we actually have.

A pertinent question is, Who pays the revenue? All revenue in end must be paid out of wealth created. If taxes are paid by individuals or institutions that do not produce something of value, then that institution or individual is simply the medium through which the producer pays. This is particularly the case regarding the bar-room. The bar-room produces nothing of value. Indeed, it is a positive bane to the community, but it is the medium by which revenue comes from the pockets of the producers into the coffers of the state. The difficulty is that it is a particularly expensive medium. Take it municipally. The aggregate municipal revenue in Ontario for the license year 1906-07 was $411,916.71. This was paid through 2,568 licensed bars or shops or an average of $160.40 per license. Say that these licensed places take in on an average of only $5,000 during that year. It will be seen that the tax collection agency, which keeps so much out of every dollar it collects, is a rather expensive medium.

WHO IS HURT?

Objection No. 5—Local option is detrimental from an economic standpoint.

Yes and no. It is detrimental from the economic standpoint of the men who now sell liquor.

It is beneficial from the standpoint of the people who now spend their money for liquor, and of the tradesmen who will get this money, and of the employers, who will have their working power increased, and of the wage-earners, who will have their working power increased, and of the community at large, because of the reduction in the expense now entailed by crime and pauperism and lunacy and sickness and death.

The question is: Whose economic interests are to be considered? The interests of the few men who now make money by selling liquor, or those of the great mass of the community who are hurt by the liquor traffic?

PAY FOR WHAT YOU GET

Objection No. 6.—That the hotelmen will require to raise rates on board and lodging, in order to meet current and necessary expenses, thus causing the traveler and moderate drinker an unnecessary expense.

This objection may appeal to dishonest men, but will not appeal very strongly to those who wish to pay their own way in the world. People rightly constituted, mentally and morally, will take little satisfaction out of the fact that they are securing their meals and lodgings cheaper because some poor fellow is being ruined at a bar-room. Most Canadian citizens are independent enough to want to get what they pay for and to pay for what they get.

The business of hotel-keeping will be put upon a solid, sane, business basis by bar-room abolition. It will then be regulated by the law of supply and demand, the same as other business. One difference, however, will be the hotels without bars will be safer for life and property.

Experience throughout the province of Ontario and elsewhere has proven the fallacy of the cry that local option will injure the hotel. It has benefitted the hotels. It does not mean the raising of rates above a fair business level; these they should be anyway.

THE BAR RETARDS DOES NOT HELP BUSINESS

Objection No. 7.—Local option will hurt business and people will go to other places to trade.

This objection might have more weight if there was any other place around Peterborough, where they could go to trade, Lakefield and Norwood both have local option and are well satisfied with it, so people would not go there to trade.

Let a thinking man walk up and down the streets of Peterborough. Let him look at the comfortable homes, at our splendid public institutions, at our prosperous business enterprises, at our manufacturing establishments. Will he not ask the question, what distorted shapes must the grey matter in the cranium of some men have assumed when they imagine that all this, which is the test of true development in Peterborough, depends upon the maintaining of a few bar-rooms.

The proposition is, on the face of it, utterly absurd.

How can it kill business to make men more sober and more saving? How can it kill business to stop the leaks? What is the testimony of business men in this connection in Local Option towns?

SOUTHAMPTON

The town of Southampton was visited. Every business man in the town was interviewed, with this result: "Eighteen said business had been helped, nine noticed no appreciable difference, three said business had been hurt. All the three above named had been, and were, bitter opponents of Local Option. Many of the eighteen had formerly opposed the measure but were now supporters of it.

BRIGHTON

The village of Brighton was visited. Two statements were placed before each merchant, one to the effect that Local Option had hurt the town, the the other that it had helped the town. Not a man would sign the statement that it had hurt the town, and almost every merchant in the town put his name to the document that the town had been helped.

WEST TORONTO

West Toronto was visited. Practically every merchant interviewed testified to the good effect upon business of the enactment of Local Option.

A sample case is that Mr. Whetter, a prominent provision dealer, who gave the following statement of his cash receipts before and after the closing of the bars:

September, 1903, under license, $2,148.

September, 1904, under Local Option, $2,690.

September, 1905, under Local Option, $3,427.

September, 1906, under Local Option, $3,791.

OWEN SOUND

In Owen Sound, out of twenty-seven men interviewed, nearly all of them leading business men, only four were found opposed to Local Option.

ACCOMMODATION FOR THE PUBLIC

Objection No. 8.—You cannot have proper accommodation for the public if you do away with the bar.

Those things that go to make a house of accommodation attractive or pleasant to the travelling public are not helped in any way by the bar. For example, if there were two hotels exactly equal in equipment, service, rates, except that one had a bar, the other had not, the average travelling man would most certainly prefer to go to the place without the bar. Why? It would be safer for life and property. It would be quieter. It would be more decent. It would be more pleasant for sight and sound and smell without a bar than with it. In other words, a bar-room adds absolutely nothing to the desirability of a house of accommodation, but rather detracts from it.

The entire divorcement of liquor-selling from hotel-keeping would result in a vast improvement in the character of the hotels. The hotel business would then be regulated by the law of supply and demand. People would get what they paid for. They would be able to pay for what they got.

As a matter of fact, to-day, in the Province of Ontario, there is just as good, and even better hotel accommodation in the towns and villages of the Province under no-license as as there is in towns and villages the same size under license.

Local Option will not make a good hotel-keeper out of an incompetent man. It will not transform a liquor-drinking establishment into a nice place for the accommodation of the travelling public. It will, however, make the hotels that are good hotels, cleaner, and brighter, and better in every way.

LOCAL OPTION A SUCCESS IN CITIES

Objection No. 9.—That while Local Option can be enforced in country districts, it can't be enforced in a city the size of Peterborough.

If this is the case will someone please explain how it is that local option is enforced in over 50 cities in the United States, all of which are larger than Peterborough. Can't we enforce our laws as well as the people of the United States do theirs? Out of many letters that have been received in Peterborough from the majority of cities in the United States where they have Local Option, the following from the Mayor of Somerville, Mass., is taken as a sample to prove that local option can be made a success in cities as large and larger than Peterborough. The letter follows;—

Chairman Press Committee,
Peterborough, Ont:

Dear Sir,—The open bar is prohibited in the city of Somerville. This has been the case ever since the Massachusetts local option law went into effect nearly twenty-eight years ago. At every annual municipal gathering during that time the voters of Somerville have voted for no license in a most decisive manner.

The only licenses granted are sixth-class licenses to druggists for the sale of liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes and to expressmen for the purpose of transportation of liquors into the city. Such licenses are granted annually, and are, of course, governed by various restrictions of law.

We have not found any great difficulty in enforcing the law against the open bars and our citizens are still, as they have been for many years, strongly against licensing saloons.

Very truly yours,
JOHN M. WOOD,
Mayor

"CAMPAIGN NOTES"

The question has been asked if License Inspector Steward will be continued in office in Peterborough by the Ontario Government after local option is adopted in Peterborough next January. When Mr. Saunders, of the Provincial Secretary's Department, was asked this question yesterday, he replied: "Most assuredly he will. It will be his duty then to see that the local option laws is enforced."

Archbishop Ireland says;—

"The greatest cause of social crime is drink; the great cause of poverty is drink. When I heart of a family broken up and asked the cause—drink. If I go to the gallows and ask its victim the cause, the answer—drink. Then I ask myself in perfect wonderment, why do not men put a stop to this thing?"

Clinton N. Howard, of Rochester, New York, possibly the greatest temperance speaker on the continent, will address the meeting for men in the Opera House to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock. In the evening, right after church, he will address a mass meeting, open to everybody. These meetings are proving very successful. Attend and hear this great speaker.

Note How Long It Lasts

A cake of Taylor's Infants' Delight Soap wears down thin as a wafer. The last bit lathers freely and is just as healing, mild and soothing as when the bar was first unwrapped.

It is expensive for us to make the soap this way. It means expensive machines, for each bar of Infants' Delight is subjected to a pressure of 60,000 pounds—thirty tons—to make sure that every bit of moisture is removed. By this expensive means alone can we produce the solid, compact bar which, beside being the safest and most soothing soap for baby's bath, is also the most lasting soap you can procure.

Infants' Delight Soap

is a favorite with mothers everywhere. It goes a long way toward keeping the little ones sweet tempered and sunny.

LECTURE BY MISSIONARY

Miss Brooks Gave Two Interesting Discourses at Charlotte St.

On Thursday afternoon the Mission Band of the Charlotte street Methodist church was addressed by Miss Brooks, Missionary to China, and in the evening she addressed the Girl's Mission Circle. There was a good attendance at both meetings and Miss Broks' address proved highly interesting and profitable.

At the evening meeting Dr. Ryckman was in the chair and a solo was sung by Miss Pringle.

Cobourg's church census is: Church of England, 1,047; Roman Catholic, 1,026; Methodist, 943; Presbyterian 891; Congregationalists, 354; Baptists, 211; Salvation Army, 85.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

The special services which have been in progress during the last two weeks in St. Paul's came to a close last night, when the attendance far exceeded any other night, except Sabbath evening. Mr. MacBeth chose as his text the words of the Master: "He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not scattereth abroad." He said: "These are the words of the most loving of men—hence are words meant for our good. The Lord Himself here declares the impossibility of our being neutral in matters of relation to Himself. We should notice what Christ says as to the work of Christianity. He that is with Christ builds and gathers, but he that is against Christ scatters and destroys. This was applied to the individual and to society. Are you a builder or a destroyer? Are you building up or tearing down? Society to-day is moved by much unrest and we can save ourselves from revolution only by quickening the religious life of the country. Will you strive to do your share in this great work? Indifference to Christ deepens into enmity and enmity against Him would mean our death. Let us not harden our hearts, quench the Spirit, or reject the influence of His power—but let us decide for Jesus Christ and get into harmony with His work of regenerating the world."

At the close of the address, decision cards were again distributed. Some signed these, indicating their wish to live the Christian life, who had not done so before. Mr. Pogue then rose and spoke some words of appreciation of the excellent services which Mr. MacBeth had rendered the congregation by his presence and message during the two weeks of the mission. He had endeared himself to all who heard him by the sanity of his methods, and by his loyalty to the grand old saving truths of the Gospel of Christ. Mr. Shook and Sheriff Hall also spoke warm words of praise and expressed the thanks of the congregation to Mr. MacBeth in leaving his own work and coming to us for two weeks at such sacrifice to himself.

Mr. Pogue thanked the choir for the loyal support they had given him in this special effort by their attendance every night. He also thanked the press of the city for the very full reports they had given of all the services, thereby giving many the advantage of reading what was being said from night to night.

Mr MacBeth, in reply, expressed the pleasure he had felt in working side by side with Mr. Pogue in the great work of evangelism. It had been his first experience outside his own pastorate in such work, and the people had loyally supported the mission and made his first experience a most happy one. He also thanked the choir and the press, and spoke of its influence for good and in moulding public opinion when working in harmony with the churches and other forces that make for righteousness. The congregation then sang a verse of "God be with you till we meet again," and so ended a mission of great power and blessing to the congregation of St. Paul's, a mission whose influence is sure to be felt in the coming days in a more devoted consecration of the people to the service of the church and of humanity.

Knox Church

Knox church was crowded last evening to its fullest capacity when Rev. Dr. Farquharson and Rev. J. D. Morrow gave the closing addresses of the evangelistic campaign. The choir was out in full force and rendered special service. The song service at the opening of the meeting was entered into by all. Dr. Farquharson gave the most effective address of the series and his work throughout has been much appreciated. He spoke last evening on the need of living a true and noble life and he pointed out that it was not an easy task to be a Christian. It is not easy to overcome drunkness, or a vice, or meanness, and it is much more difficult to overcome the world.

It is not the making of money, or pleasure or amusement, it is the attitude of the soul to God in all things, the giving up of one's self to right and to Jesus Christ. He appealed to all to put their faith in overcoming the world.

Rev. J. D. Morrow followed, taking as his text and theme, "Not far from the Kingdom of God." His address was most realistic and his illustrations were drawn from life. He touched upon different phases of high standards of education, culture and church membership and pointed out that one might have one or all of these and yet be outside of the Kingdom and in the dark. An urgent appeal was made to all to enter the Kingdom of Christ.

There were many warm expressions of help received during the meetings.

"MERCURY CHARMED BY HIS OWN INVENTION" PRESENTED TO CITY

Offer of Miss Katherine E. Wallis to Donate Plaster Paris Cast of Her Best Work Was Accepted by City Council —Will be Plased in New Public Library.

Miss Katherine E. Wallis, who is now in Paris, France, has presented to the city of Peterborough the original plaster paris cast of what is considered her best work, "Mercury Charmed by His Own Invention," the stone execution of which was purchased by the Ontario Government. When the figure arrives here it will be placed in the new public library. Miss Wallis made her offer to the city in a letter to Mayor Rush, which was read at the meeting of the council in committee of the whole last night. The aldermen and citizens present were much pleased with it, and it was decided to accept it at once.

The letter from Miss Wallis was as follows:—

Paris, France.

Mayor Rush,—I have made up my mind to offer to the city of Peterborough the original and only plaster cast of my statue, "Mercury Charmed by His Own Invention," of which the execution in stone is now the property of the Ontario Government. Thus my native city and province will be in sole possession of the work which cost me the greatest effort of my life, and which obtained for me such success here in Paris. It is a great pleasure to be able to offer it to Peterborough, and the only condition imposed is, that the city pay the expenses of packing and transportation, amounting to perhaps about $30. I would beg you to give me an answer to this before the first of January, 1910.

I have sent Miss Hatton an Indian ink drawing of the proposed Nichols monument to be exhibited and placed before the city authorities. I have in this drawing carefully avoided all attempts at likeness or detail, that attention might be concentrated solely upon the mass of the monument in its place. I trust that this may fully decide the authorities to entrust me with this work, on which I am earnestly resolved to bestow all my experience and ability. Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,
KATHERINE E. WALLIS.

It was moved by Ald. Bailey, and seconded by Ald. Phelan, that the mayor be instructed to accept Miss Wallis' very kind and generous offer, and to convey to her the sincere thanks of the council and the city. The motion was carried unanimously.

FIRST PRIZE IN WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION

The prize for the month of October in the window dressing competition of the Dry Goods Review Magazine has been won by Mr. Jas. McNicholl, window trimmer and show card writer of Richard Hall & Son. To secure first honors in the competition is an achievement which is highly creditable to Mr. McNicholl, whose original and artistic work along these two lines has already met with much favorable comment. The window which was entered demonstrated the fall opening of millionery and this will be reproduced in the December number of the magazine. In the October number the show cards, which were displayed in the window at the time of the fall opening are reproduced and are referred to in flattering terms.

UNDERWRTRSIE HELD MEETING

Addresses Made by Visiting Officials of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada.

A very enthusiastic and well-attended meeting was held last night by the Central Ontario Life Underwriters' Association in the board room of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company.

Addresses were made by Messrs. J. A. Tory, of Toronto, and T. B. Parkinson, of London, secretary and vice-president respectively of the Life Underwriters' Association of Canada, both of whom were tendered a flattering reception.

It is very evident from the earnest manner of the members that in future the association will take a strong part in the eradification of the unscrupulous agent.

COMBINATION OF ARTISTS

For Concert at Grand Opera House Monday Evening

Jessie MacLachlan, who will sing at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening, is conceded to be the world's greatest ballad singer. Tickets are on sale at the box office of the Grand Opera House and the prices run from twenty-five cents to seventy-five cents.

Miss MacLachlan will be assisted by Mr. Buchanan, accompanist, the Heather male quartette of Toronto and Piper Pollock, late from Scotland. We Are Responsible for the Furs We Sell

Your confidence in our integrity of judgment and of statement in the matter of Furs is absolutely necessary to gain for us your trade.

It would be folly on our part to lose the trust of any of our many patrons by an indiscriminate guarantee of everything that is sold as Furs, but we do guarantee such Furs as we know to be good, and we stand back of our guarantee by making them right at any time should they not prove to be as represented.

With a guarantee like this you are assured of your money's worth every time, as it entails upon us the greatest care and the most careful examination of all Fur skins which enter into a job, so that the possibility of extra expense for making good later on is not forthcoming. The lowest priced Furs are not by any means the cheapest, as it pays to pay for quality.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

SHALL IT BE "INDEPENDENCE"?

The Toronto Star (Liberal) springs to the defence of the Laurier naval policy. But the defence is a melange of argument and inuendo, the latter we fear, predominating.

Let us take a view of the argument put forth by the Star. If it is strong the public may be convinced of the correctness of the policy. If it is weak, the public will be convinced that the policy is weak, for the Star has evidently "come to the rescue."

The leading article in question opens thus: "While the Kingston Standard argues that a Canadian navy is a step in the direction of independence, a citizen who has given much thought to the subject, tells the Star that it will be a blow at our autonomy."

This opening is meant, no doubt, to assure the public that the question is at least a debateable one. The "Mrs. Harris," who, in the form of a certain "citizen," has come forward at such an opportune time, has established that fact by the very simple device of having his judgment certified to by the Star itself. The Star, therefore, has practically verified its own opinion "in two bands" before starting in to "draw conclusions." It has given the anonymous, but no doubt respectable "citizen" the weight of its approval and then quotes him in support of its own argument!

But the "reflections" it speaks of are even more "obvious" than it asserts.

They show the same old lack of sentiment, of the sentiment of loyalty to the empire of which we are supposed to form a part. The paragraph is as follows:—

"The most obvious reflection is that Canada in organizing a navy of her own, takes a step which will eventually put an end to one form of dependence. Canada is now entirely self-supporting except in regard to naval defence. Naval defence is now to be placed, as nearly as possible, on the same footing as land defence, and all the other services which are now maintained and controlled by Canada."—The Toronto Star (Liberal)

The last three words, if carefully studied, set out with perfect clearness the true pith of the Star's case and the Laurier Policy. The Navy is the last link of empire, of a united, a blessed empire. When we get this Laurier Naval Policy we shall cut off that last link. NO OTHER SERVICE REMAINS to be "controlled" by Canada. The Star delights in that fact. But is this what the people of Canada want? Is it desirable to cut ourselves off, to divorce ourselves from the old-time state of mutual dependence, interest, unity and affection?

This last act of renunciation will mean, both in Britain and Canada, the veritable "parting of the ways."

It is useless to contend that the Admiralty of Britain approves of the Laurier policy. We know quite well that the Laurier Government has "put it up to" the Admiralty, and the Admiralty has acquiesced in all that was presented to it to acquiesce in. It was Hobson's choice.

In everyday life it does not take long for old friends to drift apart when the painter is cut, when the habit of associating as friends together has ceased to exist. Who will deny that Canada has all the liberty in the form of home-rule that one desires or needs. To sever the last link of union may be to range us as a friendly nation, but certainly no longer as a part of the British Empire.

What the underlying motive of this policy is, we cannot stop to investigate. It matters little whether it is to please supporters or to increase expenditure. The fact remains, and to our view this new policy should be relegated to the limbo of the forgotten dead as soon as possible. And the Star continues: "Canada cannot afford to be tied to the tail of a war-party in England." This is, doubtless, the obvious reflection referred to. What more need be said!

The three sons of George Uttick, Berlin, were locked in the house during their parents' absence, and two boys were burned to death.

THE STORY OF "THE WOLF"

— Written by —
HUGH STEWART CAMPBELL

Plan Opens Tuesday

Carl Anthony and Marian Pollock Johnson in "The Wolf"

Eugene Walter's Great Play at "The Grand," November 18th

Canada has long been the land of romance for the story-maker. "The Wolf" is the first striking realization of Canadian atmosphere in a play. Eugene Walter, who has given us this clean, bold picture of elemental passions, calls it a melodrama. Rather should it be classed a romantic drama, so grave, spacious and poetical is the movement. This is no intellectual word-sparring of a silken boudoir, but a conflict in which men "stand on their feet and fight" for supremacy in love. The action culminates in the events of a single day.

Andrew McTavish, granite-hearted, bible-quoting old Scotchman, believes all women wanton in their love. To remove his motherless daughter, Hilda, from possible friendship with any of the opposite sex, he has built a log hut on the banks of the Wind River, in the northern forests of the Hudson Bay country—in stern determination to "keep her soul white." In spite of the emotional barrenness of her life, the bitter taunts of her father because she resembles her mother who has deserted them, Hilda grows to young womanhood with a heart pure, sweet and patient. The only one who has ever sought to strengthen her with sympathy is a young French-Canadian, Jules Beaubien, who prefers the wilderness to Montreal or Quebec, and in his wanderings has come every summer to talk and smoke with old Andrew. Baptiste le Grand, a Hudson Bay trader and nomad, is his faithful "dog." Jules has the enviable distinction of being the only one who can make Andrew McTavish laugh. So Andrew has smoked and drunk with him and let him see much of Hilda. Besides, "French-Canadians are only half men," so no harm can come from Jules.

This summer Hilda is 18 and the responsibility of "keeping her soul white" devolves upon herself. In the years that Andrew and his daughter have been isolated from the world, a great change has been taking place in the wilderness, unknown to them. The land of the Hudson Bay region, reserved for centuries to the hunter and the trapper, has been discovered to be enormously valuable as a wheat producer. The railways have stretched their tentacles rapidly through the wilderness, leaving towns and grain fields in their wake. While directing the surveying for a branch line near the Little Bear River, William McDonald, an American engineer, takes temporary quarters in the McTavish home. With him is George Huntley, a young assistant.

McDonald is familiar with all that innocent Hilda longs for with the intensity of long-unsatisfied feeling. Even Jules, Hilda's "one friend," as she calls him, does not talk to her of the houses and ladies and magazines of great cities. Jules has been to Montreal and Quebec, even to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, true, but he loves the forests of the north. "A man's heart," he tells Hilda, "calls it where it will, and he can give no reason. I have been told that some love the songs of the sea, and some the song of the cities—that men cannot live only where there are thousands of men, and that men cannot live without feeling the roll of the ocean under their feet. But me—I am a French-Canadian. For six generations we have borne our children close to nature. To me, Hilda, the forest speaks as my comrade; the blank barrens welcome me to fight them, the snow, the ice, the cold, the dogs, the sledge—they are all part of my heart. The north has been my only bride, and she is always young, with a smile on her face."

Besides, Jules does not think it wise to talk of places one may never visit. So he had never told Hilda of the bustling, varied, multi-colored life of cities. McDonald is not so scrupulous. With his wealth of information he gains Hilda's attention. Through attracting her interest he intends to win her love. This is his pastime, the recompense he allows himself for the difficult life of an engineer. He has a wife and children at home, but he must find someone to amuse him wherever he goes.

Such is the adjustment of relations among the characters of "The Wolf," when the play opens upon a background of autumnal woodland.

In the foreground is the log hut of McTavish, a bearskin drying over the entrance. Rich, full-blooded colors of autumn dominate the scene. Endless leagues of forests stretch into the distance, wholly obliterating the horizon and revealing glimpses of a quiet lake.

Andrew McTavish, sitting before his door and whittling leisurely as he listens to B'aptiste le Grand, feels none of this autumnal beauty. B'aptiste, as is his wont when he has a companion, talks to the American for whom he and Jules search. They have never seen him. Yet they will find him some day for what he did to Annette, Jules' sister and B'aptiste's sweetheart. She was Jules' half-sister, to be exact, for although had the same father, Annette's mother was an Ojibway Indian. Annette was a good girl in spite of the fact that she had loved the American and killed herself when he deserted her two years ago. B'aptiste had been far to the north, trapping, when this thing happened. But he and Jules will find the American some day.

McTavish ridicules B'aptiste's belief in dead Annette's goodness. No Women are all alike. Their hearts are black. Did not his own experience prove it? He had married a young Swede off the streets of Montreal. The least she might have done to repay him had been to give him a son. Had she done it? No; Hilda was his Christmas present, a yellow-haired Swede in her mother's image. The mother had deserted him for a lover. Yellow hair indicated a taint of the original sin, and Hilda, too, is predestined to destruction.

CARL ANTHONY

As "Jules" in "The Wolf"

Hilda, however, finds an aggressive partisan in young Huntley. He and McTavish have a standing dislike for each other because apparently Huntley "has na respect for gray hairs." In spite of the laziness and love for fun which often temporarily blind him, young Huntley sees clearly that McDonald intends to amuse himself at Hilda's expense. Now he has worked for McDonald many years and looked silently on while McDonald pursued similar methods of pleasure in New York and the villages where his work led him. Hilda is different. This time Huntley resolves to act, though as yet his impulses are not formulated into a definite plan.

He gives her what she needs unconsciously to strengthen her against McDonald's influence; an expression of his belief in her goodness. He has heard her mother's story from the railroad men, who dub McTavish the "Madman of the North." "It's a shame the way he treats you. I heard how he married your mother, and she was pretty, just like you, and he treated her awful rough. There are some people who are just naturally bad and some, like your mother, are driven to it. And I believe that those who are driven stand an equal chance with those who are always good."

McDonald has no outward grossness to repel Hilda. He is a clean-cut, vigorous man and efficient worker. His excellent outward appearance gives authority to what he chooses to tell Hilda. He chooses to tell her that he loves her, that the life she will lead with him will contain pleasure, affection and material comfort. Hilda listens. Is this the response to the "great desire" within her? She sees no outward mark on the man before her to guide her. She knows that the bitter life in the forest with her father cannot be endured longer. She shakes her head. "I cannot answer now. I don't know." Then as her father's strident voice calls her into the house: "All I know is that I cannot stay here."

Beaubien appeared, on the path, tall and lithe, wearing his leather clothes and cigarette, with characteristic French-Canadian grace. He greets McDonald heartily; he has come from his wanderings to spend his customary few weeks near the McTavish home. McDonald frankly likes him as they sit under the trees and talk he frees his thoughts intimately.

The principal fault McDonald finds with the northern woods is that they have no women.

"No; of course, there are no ladies, that is a great disadvantage."

"I have found one even here."

Jules is puzzled for a minute. "You mean—Hilda? She is but a child, an innocent child."

"They are not attractive with the bloom off."

"You—like—her?" Jules queries.

McDonald laughs and folds his arms slowly "That—is—my—business."

"Of course," replies Jules, with his soft, pleasant laugh.

"And you?" asks McDonald. "Are rivals? Do you l-i-k-e—her?"

"That is my business, also."

With this apparent reticence, each man clearly reveals to the other where he stands. Jules has heretofore considered Hilda too young to receive his love. He comes summer after summer until she shall be old enough to realize the desire that is in his heart. McDonald's discernment of the fact that Hilda is beautiful and desirable opens Jules' eyes abruptly to the fact that McDonald has progressed far in Hilda's regard and that he, Jules, may lose the prize he has waited for.

McDonald is recalling former conquests. "Unless a man is satisfied with a squaw, he is hard put to it for amusement." He himself a few years before had discovered "a beautiful half-breed and lived with her until the girl began to talk 'priest and marriage' so strong that he had to leave. She was a beauty, too—an Ojibway—"

Jules is keen attention. His dead half-sister Annette was an Ojibway.

"And what was the girl's name?"

The concentration in Jules' eyes puts McDonald on his guard. He has forgotten the girl's name. At all events he heard—from what source he knows not—that she killed herself after he left.

"An' you think," Jules approaches him until he quite towers over the sitting McDonald, "that it was right for you to go away and leave this girl alone to die?"

"But I have a wife and children at home. And the girl was only a half-breed—what should I do?"

"I will tell you, sometime—I, Jules Beaubien, who am speaking to you now. I will tell you—what—I—think," answers Jules.

To avert further unpleasant conversation, McDonald enters the house.

B'apiste appears. Jules grips his arm.

"B'apiste—you know—the American for whom we search—I think I have found him."

"Sacre!" mutters B'apiste.

"If it is he, he is trying to do the same thing with Hilda that he did to Annette. When I find out for sure ——" he taps B'apiste's arm significantly.

"Kill," mutters B'apiste.

"No, not you—I will kill him. I have the first right. Annette was my sister."

As Jules, too, enters the house, B'apiste is left alone. He raises his gun with prayerful hands to heaven and supplicates;

"Please, God, let B'aptiste kill the American."

It is afternoon of the same day.

The second act shows the living room of the McTavish house. The left wall is taken up with a fireplace—empty, as yet, of logs. Through the open casement of the broad window at the rear, leafy boughs of trees are seen. At the right a door leads to the open. A shaft of sunlight streams through a window near the door.

McDonald's arms sprawl over an ample table in the middle of the room as he pores over maps of the country. Huntley interrupts him. He has had a conversation with Jules. At last his impulses toward helping Hilda are going to break into speech.

Never before has he interfered with McDonald. Indeed, his principal asset in his relation to McDonald's work has been not ability but "minding his own business." Now he feels the asset slipping. He warns McDonald that Jules is alert to prevent harm to Hilda, and that "if it comes to a showdown about the girl—I've declared myself—job or no job."

As Huntley leaves, Hilda enters hurriedly. Before she can escape by the opposite door, McDonald calls her back to ask whether she has decided to go with him.

She looks very young and very childish in her rough, shapeless dress and heavy braids as she shakes her head, helplessly. "Still, I don't know."

She has come to one conclusion. If there is to be any shame connected with going away, she will stay, regardless of the bitterness of life here. Her father must not be able to say that her heart is black. People must not talk about her as they did about her mother.

"But if your father consents. If, after I talk with him he wishes you to go?"

She hesitates, almost convinced. McDonald is promising her all she asks. The desire to live her own life, to be free, to pierce the mysteries which beckon her from the country beyond the pines and barriers, struggles with the instinctive fear of McDonald which has lodged in her heart, she knows not why. Yet uncertainty masters her. "Still, I don't know."

McDonald realizes that the sure way to reach Hilda is, after all, through her father. When McTavish comes in, McDonald approaches him adroitly. He begins very far from his object. He offers to let McTavish invest his scanty savings in a "sure thing." The railway for which McDonald surveys is directing its course towards the Little Bear River. When the line is completed, the land at the mouth of the river will be valuable. McDonald has invested there sufficient capital to return him a fortune. If McTavish wishes to invest he will relieve him of making all arrangements. When McTavish has the money he can travel—he can even go back to visit Scotland.

At the suggestion of Scotland his "boyland," the old man softens for the only time during the plan.

"Mon, I ha dreamt o' Scotland these twenty years. I've dreamt o' it in the long cauld in winter, and under the pines in the summer time the wind has sung her sweet dear ballads. I hae closed my eyes and me heart's near cracked at the thought o' me bonnie land. Scotland—mon, 'tis the thought of her that has kept the life in me body these long, lonely, weary years."

Stirred by this prospect, McTavish listens favorably to McDonald's further proposition. When the railroad goes through near their home, there will be many men on the construction gangs. Now, McDonald has a godly mother in New York who would make it her delight to continue the work of guarding Hilda. McDonald himself will gladly take her to New York to place her under his good mother's care.

His words lifted a weight of anxiety from Tavish's mind. McDonald had his complete confidence. Freely he consents to the plan and goes to tell Hilda of the change in her circumstances.

At that moment McDonald smells a whiff of cigarette smoke. He wheels abruptly. On the window casement leans Jules.

"In the United States we would call that eavesdropping."

"Twould be the same in any language. Yet—you have heard 'all is fair in—love—an—war.'"

Jules' pleasant voice and soft smile disarm his enemies. One may fight with him, but never quarrel.

"Won't you come in?"

MARIAN POLLOCK JOHNSON

As "Hilda" in "The Wolf"

"Thanks." Jules leaves the window and reappears at the door.

"You were lying to that old man."

"No. Only following your method—promises."

McDonald eyed him defensively. Suave and courteous as Jules is, Huntley's warning has made McDonald wary.

McDonald makes a generous proposition. He feels his position impregnable. John knows that he has a wife back in the States, but he cannot use his information against McDonald. Hilda's choice must be the culmination of her own impressions and desire. McDonald proposes that before he sees Hilda, Jules shall have an interview with her. "Though I tell you now—you haven't a shred of a chance."

Jules says not a word to Hilda of his love of her. He tells her of his sister, Annette. Love is not always good. It was not not good for her.

Hilda cannot explain her own desire for love. When the wolves howl on winter nights near the door, she longs to be with them, free to choose a mate and her own way of living. Is this love?

"I do not know, Hilda. All men do not love alike. Love is the great desire and all that live have it. In the spring when the snow melts and the ice crashes down the river, when the pink flowers of the crest peep from under the snowdrifts, then the world is full of love. The ducks and the geese are noisy in their romances. The he-wolf kills night and day to feed the mother of his cubs. The bull-moose bellows in the pride of his fatherhood. The robin watches his bright-eyed mate on the next tree waiting for those three little eggs to bring new life into the world. And all this, Hilda, is the love God wanted man to have. But it is not so, Hilda. Some men some time have sinned, and the great desire is not always pure, Hilda. I have had the great desire, like all men. I have not always been good, but, having been bad, I have learned much, and now always I wish to be good. Love comes to a man in his loneliness and tears at his heart like the fangs of a wolf. I have been in the north when at noon the red rim of distant sun is the only message of warmth and glow of the distant southland. And then, in the cold loneliness, the great desire has come upon me. I loved, and somewhere I knew my mate was waiting for me and I'd curl up among my dogs and sleep peacefully."

One phrase of Jules lingers longest in Hilda's consciousness. Annette's love was not good; she trusted a man who deceived her; he was not of her race nor of her tongue.

When McDonald tells her that her father has consented to her going away with him she shrinks from him. While he dilates on the expanded life this means, she sits at the window, thinking of an old Indian superstition. Last night the wolves formed in a pack. She heard them howling. Did not he know, she asks McDonald that the wolves never form in a pack in the summer time unless someone is about to die? He laughs at her childish fears. Then, as the shaft of sunlight glorifies her hair and slender face a passion for her sweeps over him. He catches her in his arms, telling her how much he loves her, though he is not of her race nor her tongue.

The embrace terrifies her. The words awaken the latent resistance to him that Jules has fostered. Now she sees the whole plot. Her father and this man have conspired to blacken her soul.

Her shrieks bring McTavish and Jules. Hilda cowers behind Jules for protection. Believing that Hilda has refused to go to McDonald's mother because Beaubien is her lover, McTavish would tear her with his bare hands.

At this moment Baptiste's gun appears at the window. He covers McDonald and McTavish until Jules and Hilda have escaped through the door and out into the forest.

The third act shows that by evening the fugitives have advanced as far as the portage of the Little Bear. The soft coolness of the twilight is creeping up from the river. A red rim of the sun still glows dully on the horizon. The vivid forest hues sink in the shadowy light to quiet down.

Down the rocky path of the hill Jules and Huntley, who has cast his lot with them, carry the canoe. While Hilda, worn by the day's excitement, rests on some blankets near a log, Jules unfolds to plan to Baptiste and Huntley. They are to take Hilda in the canoe further down the river, while he waits for McDonald. If Jules does not appear the next day, B'aptiste is to return to take Hilda to Montreal. Jules has made a rude craft of a will. Huntley is to arrange that Hilda shall possess the modest fortune Jules leaves for her in Montreal.

"Nice, cheerful little document to hand a fellow," mutters Huntley.

The sun has quite disappeared. The only light comes from the fire Jules has kindled for Hilda. The gloomy blackness of night, fast limiting their vision, urges them forward.

The times has come for Jules to bid farewell to Hilda. Her emotions are no longer pale and childish. The revelations of the afternoon, the active resistance of her father, the direct expression of deep feelings, have changed the passivity of a child. She knows now. Her "desire" is no longer vague. She loves Jules.

Gently, his arms around her shoulders, Jules tells her that he must wait for the man who follows them.

"Do not be afraid of McDonald. To-morrow at noon, Hilda, ma chere, I will meet you at the fork of the Little Bear River, with M'sieu Huntley, and there will be a priest there and there you will be my wife. Wait until to-morrow, and if, to-morrow at noon, at the fork of the Little Bear River, I, Jules Beaubien, doesn't meet you, remember that I am waiting for you at another river that has no ending, where there is but one father, who is a kind father, and where there are no hardships or complaints and where there are thousands and where there are thousands and thousands of canoes, and all of them filled with angels and floating in the sunshine forever on its peaceful waters. Always will I wait there and whenever you come I will be there, to take you in my arms.

Hilda, I love you. I love you."

As the soft paddle strokes fade into the night, Jules makes sure that his knife slips readily from his belt and that his revolver is filled with cartridges. Then he waits.

The night is black with hiding all but the upward flickering ribbons of the fireflame. Jules is a shadow, perceptible only when he moves. In the the distance wolves beging to bark—snarling crescendoes of shrill menace. It is the pack that Hilda had heard the night before.

JOSEPH GREENE

As "McTavish" in "The Wolf"

Suddenly, there is a crashing descent on the rocky path, a revolver shot. Quickly Jules thinks of the fire and hurls himself headlong across the open space to the fire, smothering it by his fall.

A silence.

Then someone stirs—creeping stealthily, warily down the path. Cautiously he approaches the long shadows, where, near the log, the fire has burned. He stirs the huddled mass on the ground with his foot. No response.

Suddenly there is a quick uprising. The two men grapple. Back and forth they force one another. In the heavy gloom their faces and forms are indistinguishable. Neither marked a sound; the struggle is intense. Hardened by years of exposure and combating against nature, the men are pitted equally.

Then there is a choking cry. One of the men has the other by the throat. He forces him to his knees. There is a swift flash of a knife. Another choking gurgle. Then quiet.

The man holding the knife straightens himself with a contented, cheerful grunt. He strikes a match to satisfy completely any doubt of the other death.

The momentary flame flickers over McDonald's lifeless face.

NOTED SPIRIT MEDIUM COMES TO AMERICA; SEANCES FROM WHICH SPECTATORS FLED

New York, Nov. 12.—Eusapia Palladino, the wonderful Neapolitan medium, who has baffled science from all over Europe by her spiritualistic seances, arrived here to-day on the Princess Irene of the North-German Lloyd line, and when the ship arrived officers and passengers related that the illiterate woman had given three seances on board that were of the most amazing character ever heard of.

Surrounded by scientists, doctors, opera singers and ship's officers, Palladino caused white hands to appear and flutter before their eyes; white faces peeped out of the folds of curtains, a heavy table rose two feet in the air without a hand near it, and uncanny voices were heard whispering messages said to be from the dead.

SPECTATORS FLED IN HORROR.

Every precaution was taken to provide against fraud, and the officers and physicians of the Princess Irene say that it was impossible for any human confederate to have aided the medium. [illegible], the Seattle tenor, who has been studying in Milan, said that he was so horrified by what he witnessed at the seance aboard the German liner that he fled from the room.

The Italian medium was brought to this country by Hereward Carrington of this city, a member of several societies of psychical research, who was sent abroad to investigate her methods. He has arranged to have her sit before Prof. Hyslop, Prof. William James, of Harvard, and Prof. Quackenbos, of Columbia, and a dozen other American scientists.

The first demonstration of the Neapolitan's mediumistic powers given aboard ship occurred in the cabin of Dr. Valentino Duranti, the Royal Italian Commissioner. There were present in the cabin besides the captain of the ship, Dr. H. Jelden, the ship's doctor; Dr. E. Oteri, a noted Italian practitioner; Mrs. Robert Underwood Johnson, of Memphis, Tenn.; Giuseppi Bonfiglio, ballet master for the Metropolitan Opera House, and Mrs. Bonfiglio.

NONE SAW HER BEFORE

None had ever met Palladino before, and she was brought into their presence without the preliminary of an introduction.

When the short, broad-shouldered little woman sat down to the table about which the passengers and officers were grouped Mr. Carrington made her show that her hands were empty and that nothing was concealed in the folds of her dress. Then, after she had lapsed into a trance, she began her demonstrations.

First, Dr. Oteri, was asked if he would like to receive a message from his father. He assented and questions were asked and responded to by raps. The knocks were heard in all parts of the cabin.

The medium spoke for the spirit of the physician's father, duplicating the voice of the dead, Oteri said. Then she spoke for the elderly doctor's mother, and the physician was so affected that he wept.

LIGHTS IN THE ACBIN.

The doors and windows of the cabin were shut and dim lights were burning. Following the communion with the spirit a cold wind was felt in the cabin, though it could not have come from an aperture. Then a white hand appeared on the curtains. A murmur of horror ran round the cabin, which was followed by startled cries when a face glowed out of the darkness above the medium. Then the white hand fluttered about the room and came and fell on the shoulder of Dr. Oteri. Blows were felt by all those present.

At a second seance held in the cabin de luxe of the steamer three more of the ship's officers were present, as well as the famous Italian portrait painter, Milo S. Smeragliulo. The painter asked for his mother and declares that his mother appeared to him and made the sign of the cross on his breast. He was so affected by this that he became hysterical and had to leave the meeting.

It was at this seance that the table, a solid mahogany table, rose two feet in the air without any apparent support, and then fell gently to the floor again. The medium's hands were held away from the table at this time.

All were amazed and terrified by these demonstrations and they declared to-day that fraud was impossible.

Palladino can neither read nor write and speaks no English. She never was educated and knows nothing of metaphysics. She has puzzled Europe and Mr. Carrington believes she will mystify America. He says that she is even a more wonderful medium than Mrs. Piper.

Jack Johnson is now a taxpayer in Chicago. The negro has purchased property worth $11,000, on which is a fine brick house. The purchase was made for his mother and sister.

Shrubb and Longboat will likely meet for a race in Winnipeg a week from to-day.

One United States football critic says that unless the teams across the line adopt the Canadian game, the interest will soon decline. Another says that unless Canadian Rugby authorities adopt the forward pass, our rugby will lose its followers.

Tigers of Hamilton are not over anxious to have Chaucer Elliott coach them for the balance of the season.

The sporting editors of the Ottawa and Hamilton papers should be taken in turn, laid across a pair of substantial knees, and then have some one lay on the wood good and hard. This would be pretty nearly fit punishment for the rot they have been turning out lately about the rugby war between the two cities. It reminds one of two kids quarrelling in the back-yard in school when the dialogue would be something like this:

"I'll knock your block off."

"You can't do it."

"I can't, eh! We'll see about that."

"Just try it and see, you mutt."

"Don't give me any of your sass."

"Oh, shut up. I wouldn't dirty my hands on you."

By this time someone interferes and knocks the wind out of the prospective scrappers with the immortal question, "Who did you ever beat?"

Owing to lack of interest prospects are poor for a hockey team in town this winter. A second meeting to reorganize was held on Wednesday evening, but no one turned up. WATCHING FOR THE COMET

Astronomers Keeping Close Watch for Celestial Wanderer--Has Been Sighted in Several Places

Astronomers all over the country are on the watch to catch a glimpse of Halley's comet—the celestial wanderer that has been out of the view of earthly mortals for the past seventy-five years. The comet has been observed at several of the large observatories, including the government observatory at Ottawa, where the comet was first sighted on Tuesday night of this week. Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, has been keeping a close watch for the traveller and one night this week saw something that might have been the comet. It was very faint, however, and the condition of the night made it a difficult matter to get a good observation. Dr. Marsh will again attempt to locate the comet to-night. Dr. Marsh informed the Review to-day that the comet, when it comes in view, will be visible directly over head about two o'clock in the morning. It will be several months before the comet will be close enough to the earth to be visible to the naked eye.

An Explanation

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—With reference to a letter which appeared in the Daily Review a few days ago, signed "Temperance," I wish to explain that the letter was not written with the object of its having a bearing on the contest now going on, but it did express my personal view and feeling that the use made of the placard referred to was one that might well have been avoided in the general interest of sentiment, feeling and charity. We may seek to carry out certain objects, and in so doing we should endeavor not to gain our ends at the expense of either personal or public humiliation.

"LITTLE DORRIT" WAS THE SUBJECT

Interesting Paper Read at Meeting of St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. held one of their very interesting literary evenings last night, Friday, Nov. 12, at which a very interesting paper paper on Charles Dicken's "Little Dorrit," was read by Miss Edith Connor, and a very entertaining musical programme enjoyed by an appreciative audience. Among the numbers were a duet by Miss S. Kelly and Mr. A. C. McIntyre, also a vocal solo by Miss L. Kearns, accompanied by Miss M. Gorman.

The discussion of such an interesting subject as one of Charles Dickens' work should prove of interest to anyone who has read this great author's works. Miss Connor's treatment of the subject was most comprehensive and entertaining, and we regret that space does not permit an entire account of the essay.

We are introduced to Little Dorrit, in the Marshalsea prison with her father and the other members of her family, a mere child, motherless, and yet herself called the "Little Mother," not only on account of her tender devotion to and care of her poor, weak father and the members of her own family, but also on account of her charitable offices to the other unfortunate members of the prison. Her motherly watchfulness over her sister, Fanny, and her brother, Edward, Tip for short, of the Wandering Jew propensities, have endeared her to all readers. Later we find Little Dorrit, a self-taught needle-woman in the employ of a stern, harsh woman, Mrs. Clennan, by name, whose meagre good-will Little Dorrit has succeeded in winning. Later we find that this woman's husband had been instrumental in defrauding Little Dorrit's father out of his rightful possessions. Mrs. Clennan had one son, Arthur, who, having been present at his father's death-bed, had found out that reparation was due someone, name unknown by him, and who when he saw Little Dorrit had beheld his mother's interest in her, had suddenly felt that the object of his quest was found. Little Dorrit returned his interest in her, had suddenly felt that the object of his quest was found. Little Dorrit returned his interest in her by loving her with all the strength of her true, brave heart.

While sewing at the house of Flora Casby, a friend of Mr. Clennan, Little Dorrit met a gentleman by the name of Mr. Pancks, who was agent for Flora's father. This gentleman took an interest in Little Dorrit, and succeeded after looking up the accounts of the Dorrit family, in finding that they were, not poor, but, on the contrary, very wealthy. Her father was no wreleased from prison and the family left England for a tour on the continent. During their stay in Rome her father had a stroke of paralysis and died. On their return to England Little Dorrit learned with much sorrow that her friend, Mr. Clennan, was in prison, on account of some unsuccessful investments which he had made. When Little Dorrit heard of his misfortunes she longed to be of use to him, and it was through her tenderness and thoughtfulness for him during a long illness, which he contracted in the prison that he learned how dearly he loved her. Little Dorrit had found out by a confession from Mrs. Clennan that it was her husband who had defrauded her father, but Arthur Clennan never knew, that it was indeed to Little Dorrit that his father owed reparation.

Anyone who has read much of Dickens knows the numberless characters he puts in his books simply for the purpose of amusing, and "Little Dorritt" is no exception. The Barnacles, and many others, tend to make "Little Dorrit" one of the most interestings books I have ever read, and I am sure that all who read this charming book will agree with me.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Gardiner, Maine.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease and weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation but I could not bear to think of it. "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R.F.D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

So. West Harbor, Me.—"I suffered for years with painful periods, backache, headaches, nervousness, irregularities and inflammation. I consulted two physicians and one advised me to have an operation.

"I was completely discouraged when I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me a well woman. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lillian Robbins, South West Harbor, Me.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

AMERICAN MANUFACTURING CO. INTERESTED IN THIS CITY FOR BRANCH FACTORY

A knock-down furniture and boat manufacturing company with headquarters in the United States, is looking for a location in Canada and have made representations to Peterborough. Representatives were in the city yesterday and met the City Council last night when the proposition was placed before the aldermen and a number of the leading citizens who had been invited to be present.

The company has done well in the United States. In nine years they have grown from a $3,600 investment to a quarter of a million. The business was built up from profits and no new capital has been added. The turn over last year was $300,000.

The proposition is that the American company furnish their patents, patterns and business experience, lithographs, etc., and get one-half interest or $30,000 in stock and that Canadian capitalists put up $50,000 in cash to establish the factory, machinery, raw material, etc., a local board of directors to control the management.

The representative of the company was asked to secure considerable information in reference to the business which he did not have at hand. This he will do and will return to Peterborough in a few days, and interview a number of the financial men here.

After evading the authorities for a considerable time, Arthur Baxter was arrested in Cobourg yesterday, and brought to this city this morning by P. C. He elected to a summary trial but did not plead, stating that he wished to secure the advice of his counsel, Mr. F. D. Kerr. The offence for which Baxter has been arrested is alleged to have been committed on the fifth of August last, while he was in the employ of the Assurance Company. Since that time his whereabouts could not be ascertained, but it is known now that he has been as far west as Vancouver. When arrested he gave his name as Austin.

Baxter was remanded until Tuesday morning.

AMATEUR NIGHT AT THE GRAND

The Long Sisters Won First Prize —The Downfall of Mr. Jones

It was a first night audience in regard to size that greeted Marks' Bros. production of "The Rose of Killarney" at the Grand last night, a very large crowd being in attendance. The play was warmly applauded and the specialties were also cordially received.

The appearance of the amateurs in the contest at the conclusion of the play provided additional entertainment. The Long sisters, two particularly bright and clever juvenile performers, obtained the largest share of applause, and consequently first honors. They sang the effective slang number "Make A Noise Like A Hoop and Roll Away," with true professional ease and expression and their work would make an interesting specialty with any theatrical organization. They have ability and confidence and are the most entertaining pair of child artists seen on a local stage in a long time. The Hall sisters also were well received in their rendition of "Captain Baby Bunting." Of the other performer, Fred Jones, we would like to say very little. His appearance and unsuccessful attempt to sing "I Want a Man Like Romeo," gave source to loud and persistent cries for the hook and before he had a chance to sing two lines he was gaffed much like an unfortunate sucker in a spring freshet. In an interview with the dramatic editor this morning he said he had given up all idea of going into musical comedy and will continue to hold down his job on the ice waggon.

Through the courtesy of the management the uninitiated in the matter of stage setting were given an interesting exposition of the work by the stage staff of the Grand. The setting for the last act was taken down at the conclusion of the act by the "men behind" and replaced by a scene representing the interior of a furnished drawing. Mr. Marks in his announcement took the opportunity to compliment the stage staff of the theatre which he said was as efficient as any he had come in contact with in his travels.

Morrow on Sunday Sport

The ministers came in for a few raps at the afternoon session of the annual meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance in Toronto. The first one was given by Rev. J. D. Morrow, who addressed a meeting at the Opera House here a few weeks ago, in speaking on Sunday sports

"It is not the baseball, hockey and running clubs that desecrate the Sabbath. Instead it is mostly the golf clubs. It is also strange that ministers never have anything to do with the former clubs, but in the latter they are usually to be found enrolled as members."

The speaker held up Bobby Kerr and other prominent athletes as shining examples. Kerr, he said, was a noble Christian boy, and his influence for good was unlimited. In the church of which he was a member they never had any trouble with their young men leaving. They all thought it an honor to work beside such a man. In concluding he said that it would be advisable for the church to get hold of the heroes of sports and then the young men problem would be solved to a great extent.

More bread and Better bread
—And the Reason for it

A STRONG FLOUR can only be made from strong wheat. Manitoba hard wheat is acknowledged the strongest in the world—and that is the kind used for Purity Flour.

But that's not all. Every grain of this wheat contains both high-grade and low-grade properties. In separating the high-grade parts from the low-grade the Western Canada Flour Mills put the hard wheat through a process so exacting that not a single low-grade part has the remotest chance of getting in with the high-grade.

Of course this special process is more expensive to operate but it means a lot to Purity flour users—that's why we use it.

It means that Purity Flour is made entirely of the highest-grade flour parts of the strongest wheat in the world.

It means a high-class, strong flour and therefore yields "more bread and better bread."

Purity may cost a little more than some flours, but results prove it the cheapest and most economical after all.

PET DOG KILLS THIS STRONG MAN

Champion Weight Lifter Died in Agonies of Hydrophobia

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 9,—William Scheerer, a professional strong man, who has exhibited in all the large cities in America, died this afternoon in the Elizabeth General Hospital from hydrophobia. The 250-pound giant expired in great agony.

Scheerer was forty-two years old and had been a weight lifter and professional strong man fifteen years. Three months ago he was bitten on a finger of the right hand by a pet dog. He had the wound cauterized, and it healed rapidly. He had forgotten all about the bite when he became ill six days ago.

Even then he did not ascribe his illness to the bite, and it was not until yesterday that his wife sent for a physician. Dr. Otto Wagner diagnosed the case at once as rabies. The strong man had been seized with violent convulsions during the night and had broken the bed on which he lay.

GIANT WRITHES IN FRENZY

An ambulance was summoned and four men assisted the surgeon in carrying the stricken athlete to the vehicle. When he arrived at the hospital he cried for water and tried to drink it. The muscles of his throat contracted, however, and he was unable to swallow.

This seemed to drive him into frenzy and he became so violent that his arms and legs were bound. Even then it was a struggle for the nurses and attendants to hold him on his cot. He begged to be poisoned for relief from his agony.

Scheerer was a member of the local German Turn Verein and the champion strong man of the State of New Jersey. One of his most remarkable feats was to support a merry-go-round, holding sixteen persons on his chest. Now and then he would vary the entertainment by lifting a team of horses or a grand piano.

The dog that bit Scheerer also bit his three children, but they have developed no symptoms of rabies, and it is hoped they have escaped infection.

After it attacked Scheerer and the children the dog was shot and killed by Dr. S. A. Zucker, who sent the head of the animal to the Pasteur Institute in Manhattan. Subsequently word was received that the dog had suffered from a very bad case of rabies.

DISFIGURING TORTURING SKIN TROUBLE

Cannot be Cured by Salves and Ointments—The Blood Must Be Purified

A blemished skin, irritating sores, pimples, eczema, salt rheum and other skin disorders are all signals of distress telling that your blood is impure or weak. You cannot cure eczema and other skin troubles with ointments and outward applications. These things may give temporary relief, but cannot cure, because the trouble is rooted in the blood, and can only be removed by purifying and enriching the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily cure skin troubles because they enrich, purify and build up the impoverished blood that caused the trouble. As they feed and cleanse the blood the skin grows fair, the bloom of health returns and new strength is found. No other medicine has ever had such wonderful results in curing all diseases due to bad blood. Miss Elizabeth Gillis, Kensington, P.E.I., says;—"Words can hardly express how grateful I feel for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. For seven years years before I began their use I was troubled with salt rheum. My hands and arms were nearly always a mass of torturing cracks and sores. I tried several doctors and spent a great deal of money without getting any benefit. Indeed, my hands seemed to be getting worse all the time. Finally my brother persuaded me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I am happy to say they have completely cured me. I used in all seven boxes, and I would not be without them in a case of this kind if they cost five dollars a box instead of fifty cents. I hope my experience will be of benefit to some other sufferer from skin trouble."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Marx's Secret

This is the season of new books and the temptation to buy them is very strong, for they look so interesting and inviting in their pretty covers and dainty illustrations. Amongst those that are selling the best, and one of the cleverest that has appeared for some time is "Mr. Marx's Secret," by E. Phillips Oppenheim. It is published by Ward, Lock & Company, an English firm who have a branch in Toronto. The story is very interesting, and deals with the subject of dual personality, and it is well worth the reading.

The book sells at $1.25, and may be bought at all the bookstores in the city. As this firm are well known as only publishing the best class of books this fact alone would bring to the notice of the public "Mr. Marx's Secret."

Tax Notice

The tax office will be open each day for last payment of taxes from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. After Monday next (15th inst) 5 per cent. will be added to all unpaid taxes. Come early and avoid the rush.

OF INTEREST

Evolution and Original Sin

The Quarterly Review, October, has a very notable article by the Rev. F. R. Tennant on "The Influence of Darwinism Upon Theology," in which he points out the tremendous change in opinion which the scientist's theory wrought.

He begins by pointing out that it was the Church's lasting loss that theologians did not discover the secrets of natural philosophy. He suggests that if Basil or Augustine had done so, the chain "with which the Church was destined, in later times, to fetter science" might not have been forged.

HOW SCIENCE HAD TO FIGHT.

"When modern science was born, it had to enter, for its own freedom, upon a warfare with theological dogma and ecclesiastical authority. Each new science that successively came into being—geography, astronomy, geology, evolutionary biology—had to join battle afresh. The theological beliefs which these sciences opposed were strongly entrenched, and they seemed so obviously to guard the key to the whole Christian position that they were defended with the tenacity which refuses to recognize defeat. Certainly they died hard. The cause of dispute has been one, though the ground of battle has shifted from point to point.

"If it be now practically ended, as almost everyone will probably agree it is, we may say that it was the teaching of the great scientist whose centenary we are this year celebrating that constituted the final and irresistible onslaught of science on the old view as to the nature of Biblical authority, and the physical doctrines to which that view seemed to give firm foundation

CHURCH AND EVOLUTION.

"Here, then, we come upon the most direct and immediate influence which Darwinism has exerted upon theological thought. Never, perhaps, did a great scientific generalization or theory so speedily become popular and attain to the height of its influence on the common mind.

"The truth, that the world, including man, is a product of gradual evolution, however it may stand with Darwin's account of the process, is nowadays received practically without exception amongst Churchmen equipped with any knowledge of modern theology and many at least can say that the truth has made them free.

ORIGINAL BRUTISHNESS.

"Theologians have been taught, through the influence of Darwinism, to take their knowledge of the physical world henceforth from science alone. This they have found comparatively little difficulty in consenting to do, except in the case of the knowledge of man's origin which science has brought us. Original brutishness, implying a nature governed only by animal impulses, is a condition which some theologians still find it hard to believe to have ever belonged to one human race. They cling tenaciously to the idea of an original state, if not of perfection, yet of unsullied goodness or conscious moral innocence.

"This tendency is partly due to the mistaken notion that it is derogatory to the Divine Holiness to attribute any other kind of human nature to God's direct causation.

DARWIN AND ORIGINAL SIN.

"But one of the most important effects which Darwinism has wrought upon recent theology is the undermining of the traditional view as to man's primitive state and the cause of the universality of moral evil. The doctrines of the Fall and of Original Sin, or the propagation by heredity of an abnormal or morally diseased nature throughout the race, have of late come to be seriously question within the Church. And here again, as the present writer believes, the Church owes a debt to science, and to Darwinism in particular, for aid in getting rid of an antiquated doctrine long felt by many Christians to be an intellectual burden.

"SIN CANNOT BE ORIGINAL."

"Theology has been shown a way of escape by Darwinian or evolutionary anthropology. Quite apart from Darwinism, it has become impossible to speak of "original sin", in the only sense in which the phrase possesses ethical significance. 'Sin' cannot be 'original'; and what is original cannot be sinful. And, again, independently of the theory of man's derivation from a lower animal form, the theory of inherited moral corruption is nowadays seen to contain many inherent difficulties, physical as well as moral.

"Yet Darwinism, as applied to the human race, has helped to do away both with the grounds on which the theory of original sin was based and with the main motive—that of plausible explanation of the universality of sin—to its general acceptance with all kinds of thinkers other than professed theologians; and it has also suggested the construction of a positive theory of the origin and universal spread of human sinfulness which imposes neither difficulties nor burdens on the modern mind.

SIN AND THE MORAL LAW

"We are enabled to attribute the perennial existence of evil simply to the enormous difficulty imposed upon every individual alike, of coercing his inherited organic nature into obedience to moral sanctions which he has only gradually been led to discern

"The first appearance of sin in the human world, from the evolutionary point of view, would not be of the nature of a catastrophic plunge, such as the old doctrine of the Fall represented; it would rather consist in the continuance in certain practices and in satisfying certain natural impulses, previously innocent because unknown to traverse any moral law, after such things had come to be regarded as precluded by ethical sanctions.

"The evolutionary anthropology and ethics for which Darwin paved the way would teach that the sinfulness of such acts would gradually increase, from the zero which was its value in the time of man's non-moral influence, as the ethical code grew more exacting and richer in content, for it assures us that conscience, or the subjective sense of moral distinctions, are expressed, are alike the outcome of development."

THE UNERRING POLICE DOGS

Sagacious Animals Traced Footsteps of Accused Negro Murderer

Cairo, Ill., Nov. 10.—Excitement over the murder of Miss Annie Pelley, whose body was found in an alley here yesterday, is at fever heat. Citizens are aroused by the developments since midnight and there is talk of lynching Will James, one of the negro suspects held in the city jail in connection with the crime.

The feeling against James resulted from tests by bloodhounds. The dogs wound up at a cottage where lives "Lovey" Green, a negress now under arrest, whom James acknowledged having visited on the night of the murder. From the cottage the dogs followed the scent to the ice factory where James worked and from there to the restaurant where he met Mrs. Green the night before last.

Given the trail at the street corner where James was arrested yesterday they rushed over the route by which the negro was taken to jail and yelped at his cell door until driven off.

Twice last night the police were called upon to disperse the crowds that gathered threateningly about the city jail. The man has since been lynched.

Gravel Warded off and Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Manitoba Man Tells How His Urinary Troubles Vanished Before the Great Canadian Remedy

Hamrlik, Man., Nov. 12.—(Special)—Probably there is no disease to which man is heir that causes such a general dread as Gravel, or Stone in the Bladder. The frightful pains it brings and the terrible operations it necessitates cause a shudder of apprehension whenever it is mentioned. But there is really no reason why any man or woman should fear Gravel. It is purely and simply a Kidney disease, and as such can either be cured or guarded against by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Take the case of Mr. Calvin R. Snyder, well known here. He says;—

"In the spring of 1907 I was almost laid up from a lame back and was also troubled with excessive urination. I got a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and used them with satisfactory results. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best Kidney medicine I ever heard of."

If you follow Mr. Snyder's example and use Dodd's Kidney Pills for slight urinary disorders, you will never be troubled with Gravel. If you have Gravel, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

DINNER, theatre and evening gowns are at the moment the subjects of most earnest thought and consideration to the majority of women who, realizing that the winter social season is nigh at hand and that this same season bids fair to be especially strenuous socially, are anxious to get the first choice of the newest models exhibited. There is a wide diversity of style to choose from this autumn in the many attractive designs, colors and fabrics, and there is a delightful individuality to be obtained, so that women need not all look as though they were wearing gowns that had been turned out by the wholesale.

Black evening gowns for theatre, dinner and ball wear are to be far more fashionable than last year. Satin, velvet, lace, chiffon and many new lace nets and thin materials, as well as embroidered crepe de Chine, must be included in the category of popular fabrics for the all black gown, while jet, silver, gold and colored silk embroideries are one and all used for trimmings. There are new weaves of black satin, heavier than last year, with more substance and yet delightfully supple and most practical both for the draped folds and long lines; then once again the soft satin finish crêpe de Chine is regarded with favor and it also can be draped so as to emphasize to the best possible advantage the most fashionable lines of the modern dress. Both princess and two-piece models are in style, although there are probably more of the two piece gowns being made up at the moment; but, after all, it is the question of the more becoming that solves the problem every time.

Double or Tunic Skirts.

The skirts of the newest gowns are trimmed or made with tunic or double skirts, but not for one moment does the woman who knows how to dress well allow either trimming or double skirt to interfere with any lines that will make her look slender. This may be a time when every effort is being exerted to bring back full skirts, but the slim figure and the long lines will for many months to come be chosen by the smartest gowned women, and she who can successfully combat the newest fads or combine them with these slender lines will be the envied of all her acquaintances. Most cleverly is trimming introduced on the skirts; the front breadth is drawn to one side or draped back to show an underskirt of lace or embroidery, always of the most elaborate description, and the same trimming is repeated on the waist, but half hidden there also under the soft folds of drapery. White Venetian point lace on black velvet so treated is most regal in appearance, but the same idea worked out in jet or jet and silver on a black satin gown will also win well deserved praise. To display and at the same time conceal would seem to be one of fashion's main desires this autumn, and just the glimpse that is given of rare lace or costly embroidery is almost more effective than where there is a more flagrant and ostentatious display afforded.

Almost too artistic, almost too startling are many of the new models for evening gowns that are exhibited to the seekers for the autumn and winter styles. Draped so tightly that locomotion would be practically impossible is one of the new models. The material, embroidered crêpe de Chine of the most exquisite texture, forms the upper part of the gown, which is draped over a satin robe, the satin of the finest, softest description. In the original model the effect of this tightly draped gown is [illegible] extreme [illegible] line, but any woman with the [illegible] of dress can easily remedy the defects or rather modify the extreme [illegible] model fascinating and becoming possibility and give that touch of originality and individuality that will make it one of the most popular of the season's fashions.

Extremely delicate in coloring and general effect are many of the newest models. White has returned to favor once again, while pale shades of gray, yellow, pink and blue are in great demand. The silver, crystal and pearl embroideries are especially well adapted to these colors and to the light transparent materials that [illegible] are displayed in such numbers as to make the choice most difficult. The overskirt and double skirt style can be most easily carried out by the aid of the trimmings, for the latter are in themselves so attractive that when used to trim the upper skirt they not only do away with any hard lines, but in some fascinatingly mysterious manner blend into the material itself, and, while emphasizing a change of style from the long plain skirt, keep its charm of length and grace.

The embroidered tunic suit and the embroidered cuirass, which fit close to the figure, while so constructed as to seem like a loose armor, are both fashionable. The latter style calls for an almost perfect figure to be becoming; the former can be utilized to hide defects of nature and can be so dealt with as to display any good lines. Queer, odd colorings are immensely popular in these embroidered transparent tunics. Blue or cerise on black and gray, gold or silver on black and white, blue or mauve on pink and blue, all are fashionable, but the combination must be most carefully treated. Turquoise or coral beads, quantities of them massed together, are very smart on black and white net, the coral on the black and gray net being especially effective, while rhinestones are most cleverly utilized wherever and whenever possible to give brilliancy or lighten a too dark effect. A pale gray satin with an overdress of net, with trimming of coral beads and rhinestones, is a most charming color scheme, provided always that the right shade of gray be chosen.

Surplice folds over the shoulders are invariably becoming, and there are many most attractive gowns made up this autumn that exhibit to the best possible advantage this fashion. If the gown is of satin or satin crêpe de Chine the material lends itself wonderfully to the design. Brocades and the heavier fabrics are not so good for this purpose, and therefore Fashion most cleverly has commanded that with them shall be combined lace of the finest description, tulle or chiffon, and for the moment the tulle is the most in demand on account of its being the more becoming material so near the face. Here is afforded another opportunity for combining colors artistically and becomingly. The tulle can match or accord with the colors in the brocade or satin of which the gown is composed, or it can be in contrast, and white or pink can always be used if they are more becoming. It is a most effective fashion, and the beautiful fine laces with just the right cream tint not only are becoming to the complexion, but display to the greatest advantage any good lines of shoulders and arms, for the sleeves are invariably of the same material; the heavier material of the gown stands out in such contrast as makes it appear all the richer and finer.

FASHION DETAILS THAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

IN illustration No. 1 is shown a design for a bodice which may be of lingerie, crêpe, satin or chiffon, the last three to be made in colors to match any gown with which it is to be worn. The trimming is of embroidery and lace entredeux if the blouse is of linen or batiste. On a white crêpe de Chine blouse the design was effectively worked out with black silk embroideries and bands of jetted lace.

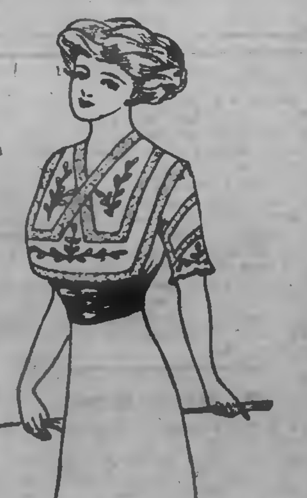

FIG. 1.—DESIGN FOR SEPARATE WAIST.

IT IS almost impossible for women to give up their dainty, airy scarfs, which have been worn, or rather draped, on themselves during the summer. The latest creations in these filmy trifles are made of chiffon of one color veiled under another and the whole edge of the long narrow wrap bordered with marabout. For evening wear they are most pleasing and the edge offers just enough weight to give the scarf a better line than if it were unornamented. And a little warmth is not amiss in such an adjunct. The delicate evening shades are charming, while black looks stunning when worn with a light colored gown.

In illustration No. 2 is shown a quaint evening gown for a young girl. There is a very decided suggestion of the Middle Age fashions, now so popular, although the skirt is not in the stereotyped Middle Age style. The gown shown was in pale blue peau de soie, trimmed with silver embroidery. The deep girdle was of velvet of the same shade, with a border of the silver trimming at top and bottom.

The entire upper part of the bodice had the material fulled on the loose pleats running horizontally. Narrow bands of silver trimmed the bodice.

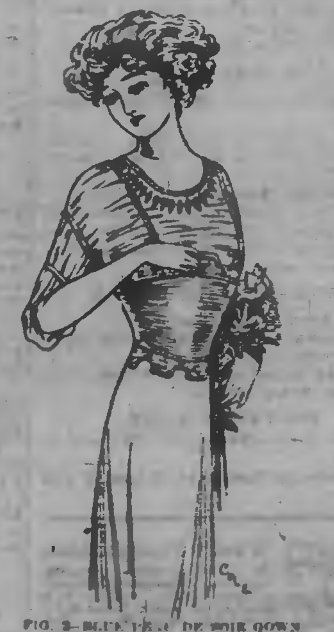

FIG. 2—BLUE PEAU DE SOIE GOWN

The sleeves were in one piece with it, and the round neck was finished with the silver trimming and a collar of embroidered points or petals. The skirt was bordered with the galloon set in a straight band around the hem.

THERE is so much excitement at present over tailor styles and modes for making up dresses to be worn on formal occasions that the simple house or afternoon dress is shoved into the background. At the same time there are many women who feel the need of these very styles, and they will be interested in the accompanying sketch in [illegible] Figure 3. Soft charmeuse of a rich green tint was used in making up this costume, and the belt was of the same color, fastening in front under a black satin ribbon buckle.

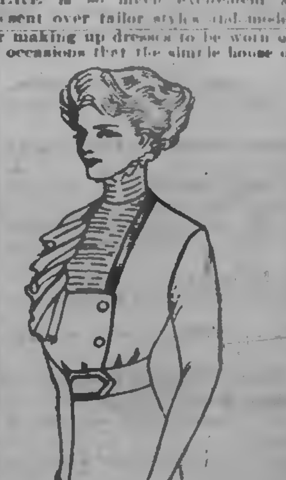

FIG. 3—GOWN OF GREEN CHARMEUSE

The rectangular yoke of tucked mousseline, with tucks running crosswise, has a collar of the same attached, and both are removable. With the other decoration this would be somewhat severe, but the soft frill of chiffon trimming the right side of the yoke relieves the [illegible] and gives a graceful touch to the dress.

A HYPOTHETICAL NAMELESS RIVAL.

His Suppositious Case Brought His Sweetheart to Terms.

By HENRY WALKER.

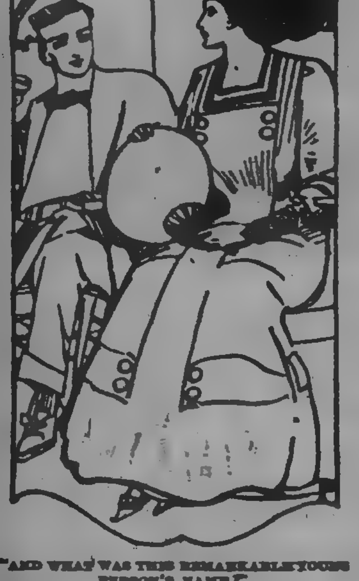
[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

They sat at the end of the porch and discussed the situation calmly. It was altogether too torrid for heated argument. If they felt any inward tumult they vented it through their fingers rather than their tongues, she by pulling her palm leaf fan idly to pieces and he by ruthlessly stripping the honeysuckle vine.

"What's your objection to next fall, Jean? I'm not quizzing you, you know, but I do feel a sort of impersonal curiosity."

"Next fall? Why, it's August now, and fall begins with September, and then it's no time before it's winter, and—I can't possibly fancy myself a settled, married person next winter!"

"Sober, indeed! Matrimony doesn't make people settled nowadays. You know you'll be on the go when you're ninety. A little thing like being married won't interfere with your tastes in that line."



"AND WHAT WAS THIS REMARKABLE YOUNG PERSON'S NAME?"

"You think so? I believe you're quite sincere."

"Thank you."

"But I'd feel bound to respect your tastes and preferences—sometimes. And, gradually, you know, I'd fall into the way of asking your opinion of things and people and adapting my own to it, and then before I realized it I'd lose my individuality, and then"—

"And then what? I'm interested."

"Oh, of course, when we began to think the same about things, why, naturally, you'd begin to bore me. And you know when married people begin to bore each other they're in a very bad way, with so many entertaining persons loose in the world."

He looked at her thoughtfully for a moment.

"I say, Jean," slowly, "I never thought of that phase before. There's a great deal in that. It is a terrible thing to be bored, even when the boree isn't bound hand and foot. I suppose one ought to weigh these considerations carefully and take no chances. Talk about being bored! I am reminded. Suppose you were a young fellow of some twenty-six years, with the average allotment of good looks and talents and a broken collar bone. Suppose you were shut up to recuperate in a Vermont farmhouse without a relative or friend within eighty miles—you must suppose glorious weather outside that farmhouse as you go. Well, suppose that a young lady of unusual beauty and charm and intelligence—golf intelligence and tub intelligence and canoe intelligence—should suddenly drop from the sky, or, rather, from Burlington, what would you do, even if you were engaged? Come, now, be honest! Would you not fall in love with her?"

Jean's fan lay quietly in her lap. The little upward curves of her mouth lent her smile a slightly strained look. She gave an unconcerned shrug at his question.

"Burlington! I never heard of that corner of the world. And what was this remarkable young person's name? You never mentioned her before."

"Oh, surely you don't want particulars in this weather! Your gloomy forecast set me thinking. Perhaps we are too adaptable. I suppose that's why we've liked each other so well. Isn't it awful to think the qualities that attract people before marriage may be the very ones to estrange them afterward?"

"Awful! Did Miss Burlington have indelible opinions? Persons strongly addicted to golf usually have."

"You're not going back on golf, I hope. Consider the Carwin cup! But, as I was saying, if an engaged man bored to a certain point is so susceptible, why not a duly wedded individual? It's only a difference of degree, you know."

"Unfortunately I can't duplicate my experience. I've never broken my collar bone, for one thing, and for another thing, the moment a girl is engaged all her masculine acquaintances feel bound to make themselves so absurdly dull that she couldn't care for them if she wanted to."

"Do you suppose the poor fellows try to be oafs?" He spoke protestingly, but his face wore the ghost of a smile.

"The result is the same. If I had it to do over again I wouldn't let people know so soon. There's no reason why a girl shouldn't enjoy herself."

"Why, Jean, I thought you were anticipating a hilariously happy winter. I've been mentally kicking myself for wanting to drag you away to dull old Italy."

The smile was quite gone from Jean's face. There was a suspicious brightness in the dark gray eyes.

"Yes," he continued, leaning lazily back in his chair, "I've been playing donkey. I'd forgotten what it means to be bored. I was even silly enough to think we'd enjoy long tramps in late October and lonesome breakfasts on rainy March mornings—I love March—and, oh, dozens of dull, prosaic things. But, goodness, we'd die of ennui before a year was out!"

She flung down the fan and rose, angry and hurt, the tears streaming.

"Charles," she sobbed, "you're inhuman! I came out here to—to—arrange things, and—and you th-throw that Vermont girl in my face and then tell me I'm a bore! You"—she controlled her voice with an effort—"go back to Vermont! But she'll never"—

He could endure it no longer. "Forgive me, Jean! You know I've never seen another girl since you said I might look at you! But I've set my heart on this fall, and you're so stubborn."

She straightened and looked at him sternly. He tried not to smile.

"Charles," she asked severely, "did you lie?"

"To you!"

"Was there such a person?"

"I never said there was. I just supposed a case. But, I say, Jean, will you make it October?"

"No!" She had reached the doorway. "September!"

He heard her running lightly upstairs. Stooping, he picked up the mutilated palm fan and folded its remains tenderly into his pocket.

The Frenchwoman.

The distinguished quality of the Frenchwoman is her strong common sense. She is not a sentimentalist, but is eminently practical. If there is so much comfort, substantiality and security among the French middle class the woman can take the larger share of the credit for it. In "France of the French" Mr. E. H. Baker says that all her domestic affairs are regulated by the strictest prudence, carefulness and foresight.

The domestic instinct is so strong in the Frenchwoman that the safety of her home is apt to become to her an object too absorbing, too exclusive, and to lead to the defects and drawbacks which attend all exaggeration. It is not the Frenchman so much as the Frenchwoman who "fills the stocking" with small savings, a little economised there, a little here, and who has built up a position of some substance for many a family who commenced humbly and knew hardship.

The power of patient industry of the French workingwoman is scarcely less admirable than her self abnegation. Her qualities stand out more saliently than those of the middle class because of her inferior opportunities and greater trials.

When one considers the wages that are earned by the working class in France and the cost of food one marvels at the degree of comfort to be found in their homes and the well looked after appearance of the children. This could never be without the solid qualities of the women.

Local Critics.

"Local color" is an excellent adjunct to a good story, but it cannot supply the place of incident and character. A young author now in possession of a promising reputation has related how this fact was first painfully impressed upon his mind. He had spent the summer in an ancient seaport of New England and desired to reproduce its atmosphere of quaint, old fashioned tranquillity in a story.

He worked hard over it. When the tale was done it occurred to him to try its effect upon a native resident, a retired sea captain, unliterary, but intelligent.

"Does it seem natural? Is it like the place?"

"Yes; oh, yes," replied the old man promptly. "It's like the place. But seems to me places were made for things, and so I been kind o' waitin' all along for somethin' to do doin', and the fust thing that happened was the end."

Still more crushing was the comment of another local critic who read the story after it was published. Some one asked her if it were not well written.

"Land, yes!" said she. "It's written real elegant and lifelike as nature, only whatever did he write it for?"

Some Doubt About It.

A reception was given by the Medical club in Philadelphia in honor of Sir Lauder Brunton, a noted English physician, and in course of the evening he was engaged in a discussion of nervous ill temper. After he had described the beneficial effects of various drugs upon nervous ill tempers he said:

"I remember a middle aged woman of most nervous disposition who told me with tears in her eyes how she had once said to her husband:

"'John, I know I am cross at times. I know that you find me unkind often. Sometimes perhaps you think I do not love you. But, John, remember, when such unhappy thoughts assail you that if I had my life to live over again I'd marry you just the same.'

"'I'm not so sure of that,' John replied shortly."—Philadelphia Press.

QUEER JAPANESE FISH.

One That Uses Its Fin as a Sail—How the Dorado Is Caught.

One of the most interesting of fish of Japanese waters is the oriental sail fish (Histiophorus orientalis). The generic name, given by Dr. Guenther, means the sail bearer and refers to the huge dorsal fin possessed by the species.

The fin stands higher than the body above it and is used as a sail before the wind. It is a large fish, ten feet in length and weighing 100 pounds. They swim about usually in pairs in rough and windy weather, with the huge fins above the water.

It is a favorite food fish, and the annual catch is nearly 2,000,000 pounds. The sail fish is caught by means of a harpoon.

Another food fish, known as a dolphin or dorado, is sometimes caught in a curious way. The fishes congregate under a decoy bush and raft made of bamboos and are then caught by hooks baited with squids, or the decoy bush is surrounded by a seine net, and the dolphins are driven by beating the surface of the water with sticks. This fish is eaten both fresh and salt and is as great a favorite in western Japan as the salmon is in the northeast.—Zoologist.

Scotch Sabbath.

For traveling, trading and all the things one must not do on the Sabbath, Scotland, of course, must ever hold the palm. Not in the seventeenth century alone, but through all the ages and even unto the present day the Scotch Sunday has a law unto itself. There is the experience of James Payn, for instance, in the Edinburgh of only the seventies. "In the street where I first resided," he wrote, "it struck me that to judge by the drawn down blinds the people spent a good deal of their time upon the seventh day in bed. On my second Sunday, however, I was undeceived, for my landlady came up and informed me that, though she had not spoken of it last Sunday, she must now draw my attention to the fact that it was not usual in Edinburgh to draw up the window blinds on the Sabbath and that the neighbors had begun to remark upon the 'unlawful appearance' of her establishment, which had heretofore been a God fearing house."

A Justifiable Protest.

"What's that?" cried the convicted incendiary. "Five years? Well, if you people ain't the worst I ever ran up against! Here I goes out in the evenin' an' sets fire to the tallest buildin' in town—sets fire to it so that in less 'n a minute the thing's a shootin' blaze a hundred feet up into the sky. The whole poppylation is there quicker'n scat, all of you tickled to death at the sight! For four an' five hours you stood there watchin' the fire—hours of solid enjoyment, too—an' it not costin' you a cent! Why, a circus or the theater or a scandal trial wouldn't have given you half as much fun, an' you know it! An' yet you sit there an' bring in a verdic' givin' me five years in the penitentiary—me that's shown you all a good time an' ought to be considered as a benefactor if there was any gratitude in the human boosum!"—Exchange.

Bran For Lambs.

While bran is not especially desirable for fattening sheep, it is quite satisfactory for lambs provided it is not used too freely. It, however, can be used to better advantage for dairy animals and even for horses.

No Difference.

Miss Wayuppe—It was my good fortune that my ancestors came over in the Mayflower. Miss Newrich—May flour! Why, my folks made their fortune in September wheat.—St. Louis Times.

Sarcastic.

"There's just one thing I wanted to say to you," began Mrs. Acid to her husband.

"Only one, M'ria?" queried he solicitously. "Aren't you feeling well?"

Spermaceti added to boiled starch gives the goods a gloss. Borax makes the starch stiffer.

Better Cattle.

Everybody acquainted with the conditions in this country can see that the giving over of the cattle ranges to the small farmers is resulting in a pronounced improvement in the breed of our cattle and an increase of the better grades. The old time cattlemen have fought hard to maintain the big ranges, but it was inevitable that the small farmers should take up the land little by little. The threatened cutting off of the meat supply is proving vain. Not only is there a little more cattle available for market, but the quality is of a better grade.

Reliable Profits.

Dairy products fluctuate less in price than probably any other product of the farm. Wheat and cotton and other crops may rapidly ascend or descend the scale of prices, but the dairyman knows that his products will sell at a fair margin of profit every month in the year.

Alfalfa For Hog Lot.

Alfalfa hay for use in the winter time in the hog lot should be cut just as the blossoms are beginning to show. If allowed to stand until well in bloom the stalks become woody, there is a greater loss of leaf in curing and there is much waste and loss of feeding value.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"You are going to meet her, aren't you?"

He gracefully concealed a yawn.

The woman's plan of attack took another form. "Last night, when you told me your story, I believed you."

He devoted himself to suppressing the temptingly obvious retort and succeeded; but, though he left it unspoken the humor of it twitched the corners of his mouth, and Mrs. Hallam was observant, so that her next attempt to draw him out was edged with temper.

"I believed you an [illegible] gentleman. It appears that if you ever were the latter you've fallen so low that you willingly cast your lot with thieves."

Having exhausted his repertory of rudeness, Kirkwood took to twiddling his thumbs.

"I want to ask you if you think it fair to me or my son to leave us in ignorance of the place where you are to meet the thieves who stole our—my son's jewels?"

"Mrs. Hallam," he said soberly, "if I am going to meet Mr. Calendar or Mr. Mulready, I have no assurance of that fact."

There was only the briefest of pauses, during which she analyzed this, then quickly, "But you hope to?" she snapped.

He felt that the only adequate retort to this would be a shrug of his shoulders, doubted his ability to carry one off and again took refuge in silence.

The woman abandoned a second plan of siege with a readiness that did credit to her knowledge of mankind. She thought out the next very carefully before opening with a masked battery.

"Mr. Kirkwood, can't we be friends?"

"Nothing could please me more, Mrs. Hallam!"

"I'm sorry if I've annoyed you"—

"And I, too, have been rude."

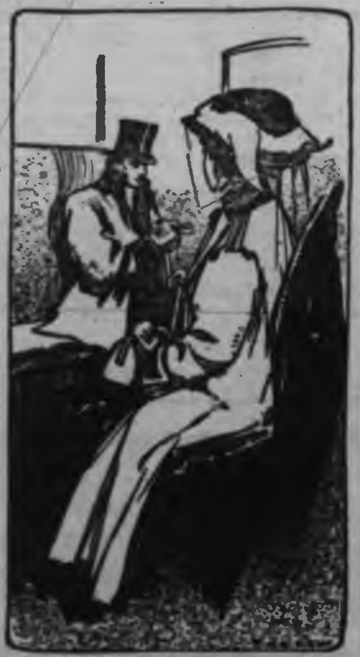
"Last night, when you cut away so suddenly, you prevented my making you a proposal, a sort of business proposition"—

"Yes?"

"To come over to our side"—

"I thought so. That was why I went."

"Yes; I understood. But this morning, when you've had time to think it over"—



He became aware that his solitary companion was a woman.

"I have no choice in the matter, Mrs. Hallam."

The green eyes darkened ominously. "You mean—I am to understand, then, that you're against us, that you prefer to side with swindlers and scoundrels, all because of a"—

She discovered him eying her with a smile of such inscrutable and sardonic intelligence that the words died on her lips, and she crimsoned treasonably to herself, for he saw it, and the belief he had conceived while attending to her tissue of fabrication earlier that morning was strengthened to the point of conviction that if anything had been stolen by anybody Mrs. Hallam and her son owned it as little as Calendar.

As for the woman, she felt she had steadily lost rather than gained ground.

"So," she said slowly after a silent time, "you are not for Queensborough. The corollary of that admission, Mr Kirkwood, is that you are for Sheerness."

"I believe," he replied wearily, "that there are no other stations on this line after Newington."

"It follows, then, that—that I follow." And in answer to his perturbed glance she added: "Oh, I'll grant that intuition is sometimes a poor guide. But if you meet George Calendar so shall I. Nothing can prevent that. You can't hinder me."

During the brief balance of the journey Mrs. Hallam presumably had food for thought. She frowned, pursed her lips and with one daintily gloved forefinger followed a seam of her tailored skirt, while Kirkwood sat watching and wondering how to rid himself of her if she proved really as troublesome as she threatened to be; also he wondered continually what it was all about. Why did Mrs. Hallam suspect him of designing to meet Calendar at Queensborough? Had she any tangible ground for believing that Calendar could be found in Queensborough? Presumably she had, since she was avowedly in pursuit of that gentleman and, Kirkwood inferred, had booked for Queensborough. Was he, then, running away from Calendar and his daughter to chase a will-o'-the-wisp of his credulous fancy off Sheerness shore?

Disturbing reflection. He scowled over it, then considered the other side of the face. Presuming Mrs. Hallam to have had reasonably dependable assurance that Calendar would stop in Queensborough, would she so readily have abandoned her design to catch him there on the mere supposition that Kirkwood might be looking for him in Sheerness? That did not seem likely to one who esteemed Mrs. Hallam's acumen as highly as Kirkwood did. He brightened up, forgot that his was a fool's errand and began again to project strategic plans into a problematic [illegible]

A sudden jolt interrupted this pastime, and the warning screech of the brakes informed him that he had no time to scheme, but had best continue on the plan of action that had brought him thus far—that is, trust to his star and accept what should befall without repining.

He rose, opened the door and, holding it so, turned.

"I regret, Mrs. Hallam," he announced, smiling his crooked smile "that a pressing engagement is about to prohibit my squiring you through the ticket gates. You understand, I'm sure."

His irrepressible humor proved infectious, and Mrs. Hallam's spirit ran as high as his own. She was smiling cheerfully when she, too, rose.

"I also am in some haste," she averred demurely, gathering up her hand bag and umbrella.

A raised platform shot in beside the carriage, and the speed was so sensibly moderated that the train seemed to be creeping rather than running. Kirkwood flung the door wide open and lowered himself to the running board. The end of the track was in sight, and a man who has been trained to board San Francisco cable cars fears to alight from no moving vehicle. He swung off, got his balance and ran swiftly down the platform.

A cry from a bystander caused him to glance over his shoulder. Mrs. Hallam was then in the act of alighting. As he looked the flurry of skirts subsided, and she fell into stride, pursuing.

CHAPTER XV.

SLEEPY Sheerness must have been scandalized that day and its gossips have acquired ground for many an uncharitable surmise. Kirkwood, however, was so fortunate as to gain the wicket before the employee there awoke to the situation. Otherwise, such is the temper of British petty officialdom, he might have detained the fugitive. As it was, Kirkwood surrendered his ticket and ran out into the street with his luck still a dominant factor in the race, for, looking back, he saw that Mrs. Hallam had been held up at the gate, another victim of British red tape. Her ticket read for Queensborough, she was attempting to alight one station farther down the line, and, while undoubtedly she was anxious to pay the excess fare, heaven alone knew when she would succeed in allaying the suspicions and resentment of the ticket taker.

"That's good for ten minutes' start!" Kirkwood crowed. "And it never occurred to me!"

Before the station he found two hacks in waiting, with little to choose between them. Neither was of a type that did not seem to advertise its pre-Victorian fashioning, and to neither was harnessed an animal that deserved anything but the epithet of screw. Kirkwood took the nearest for no other reason than because it was the nearest and all but startled the driver off his box by offering double fare for a brisk pace and a simple service at the end of the ride. Succinctly he set forth his wants, jumped into the antiquated four wheeler and threw himself down upon musty, dusty cushions to hug himself over the joke and bless whatever English board of railway directors it was that first ordained that tickets should be taken up at the end instead of the outset of a journey.

It was promptly made manifest that he had further cause for gratulation. The cabby, recovering from his amazement, was plying an indefatigable whip and thereby eliciting a degree of speed from his superannuated nag that his fare had by no means hoped for, much less anticipated.

In a period of time surprisingly short Kirkwood saw, from fleeting glimpses of the scenery to be obtained through the reeling windows, that they were threading the outskirts of the town. Synchronously, whether by design or through actual inability to maintain it the speed was moderated, and in the course of a few more minutes the cab stopped definitely.

Kirkwood clambered painfully out, shook himself together and the bruises out of his bones and looked back.

Aside from a slowly settling cloud of dust, the road ran clear as far as he could see—to the point, in fact, where the town closed in about it.

He had won, at all events insomuch as to win meant eluding the persevering Mrs. Hallam. But to what end?

Abstractedly he tendered his lonely sovereign to the driver and without even looking at it crammed the heavy weight of change into his pocket, an oversight which not only won him the awestruck admiration of the cabby, but entailed consequences (it may be) he little apprehended. It was with an absentminded nod that he acquiesced in the man's announcement that he might arrange about the boat for him. Accordingly the cabby disappeared, and Kirkwood continued to stare about him eagerly, hopefully.

He stood on the brink of the Thames estuary, there a possible five miles from shore to shore. From his feet almost a broad shingle beach sloped gently to the water.

On one hand a dilapidated picket fence inclosed the dooryard of a fisherman's cottage or better hovel if it need be accurately described at the door of which the cabby was knocking.

Some little distance offshore a fishing boat, cat rigged and not more than twenty feet over all, swung bobbing at her mooring, keen nose searching into the wind, at sight of which Kirkwood gave thanks, for his adventitious [illegible] had served him well, if that boat were to be hired by any manner of persuasion.

But it was to the farther reaches of the estuary that he gave more prolonged and most anxious heed, scanning narrowly what shipping was there to be seen. Far out a liner was riding the waves with serene contempt, making for the river's mouth and Tilbury dock. But a single sailing vessel of any notable tonnage was in sight, and when he saw her Kirkwood's heart became buoyant with hope, and he began to tremble with nervous eagerness, for he believed her to be the Alethea.

There's no mistaking a ship brigantine rigged for any other style of craft that sails the seas.

Voices approaching brought him back to shore. He turned, resuming his mask of sanity, the better to confer with the owner of the cottage and boats, a heavy, keen eyed fellow, ungracious and truculent of habit and chary of his words, as he promptly demonstrated.

"I'll hire your boat," Kirkwood told him, "to put me aboard that brigantine off to leeward. We ought to start at once."

The fisherman shifted his quid of tobacco from cheek to cheek, grunted inarticulately and swung deliberately on his heel, displaying a bull neck above a pair of heavy shoulders.

"Dirty weather," he croaked, facing back from his survey of the eastern skies before the American found out whether or not he should resent his insolence.

"How much?" Kirkwood demanded curtly, annoyed.

The man hesitated, scowling blackly at the heeling vessel momentarily increasing her distance from the shore. Then, with a crafty smile, "Two pun," he declared.

The American nodded. "Very well," he agreed simply. "Get out your boat."

The fisherman turned away to shamble noisily over the shingle, huge booted heels crunching, toward one of the dories. To this he set his shoulder, shoving it steadily down the beach until only the stern was dry.

Kirkwood looked back for the last time, up the road to Sheerness. Nothing moved upon it. He was rid of Mrs. Hallam, if face to face with a sterner problem. He had a few pence over 10 shillings in his pocket and had promised to pay the man four times as much. He would have agreed to ten times the sum demanded, for the boat he must and would have. But he had neglected to conclude his bargain, to come to an understanding as to the method of payment, and he felt more than a little dubious as to the reception the fisherman would give his proposition, sound as he (Kirkwood) knew it to be.

In the background the cabby loitered, gnawed by insatiable curiosity.

The fisherman turned, calling over his shoulder, "If ye'd catch yon vessel, come!"

With one final twinge of doubt—the task of placating this surly dog was anything but inviting—the American strode to the boat and climbed in, taking the stern seat. The fisherman shoved off.

In time the dory lay alongside the catboat, the fisherman with a gnarled hand grasping the latter's gunwale to hold the two together. With some difficulty Kirkwood transshipped himself, landing asprawl in the cockpit amid a tangle of cordage slippery with scales. The skipper followed, with clumsy expertness bringing the dory's painter with him and hitching it to a ringbolt abaft the rudder head. Then, pausing an instant to stare into the east with somber eyes, he shipped the tiller and bent to the halyards. As the sail rattled up, flapping wildly, Kirkwood marked with relief, for it meant so much time saved, that it was already close reefed.

But when at last the boom was thrashing overhead and the halyards had been made fast to their cleats the fisherman again stood erect, peering distrustfully at the distant wall of cloud.

Then, in two breaths, "Can't do it," he decided—"not at the price."

"Why?" Kirkwood stared despairingly after the brigantine, that was already drawn far ahead.

"Danger," growled the fellow—"wind."

At a loss completely, Kirkwood found no words. He dropped his head, considering.

"Not at the price," the sullen voice iterated, and he looked up to find the cunning gaze upon him.

"How much, then?"

"Five pun I'll have, no less, for riskin' my life this day."

"Impossible. I haven't got it."

In silence the man unshipped the tiller and moved toward the cleats.

"Hold on a minute."

Kirkwood unbuttoned his coat and, freeing the chain from his waistcoat buttonholes, removed his watch. As well abandon them altogether. He had designed to leave them as security for the £2 and had delayed stating the terms only for fear lest they be refused. Now, too late, as ever, he recognized his error. But surely, he thought, it should be apparent even to that low intelligence that the timepiece alone was worth more than the boat itself.

"Will you take these?" he offered. "Take and keep them. Only set me aboard that ship!"

Deliberately the fisherman weighed the watch and chain in his broad, hard palm, eyes narrowing to mere slits in his bronzed mask.

"How much?" he asked slowly.

"Eighty pounds together. The chain alone cost me twenty."

The shifty, covetous eyes ranged from the treasure in his hand to the threatening east. A puff of wind caught the sail and sent the boom athwartships like a mighty flail. Both men ducked instinctively to escape a braining.

"How do I know?" objected the skipper.

"I'm telling you. If you've eyes you can see," retorted Kirkwood savagely, seeing that he had erred in telling the truth. The amount he had named was too great to be grasped at once by this crude, cupidinous brain.

To be continued.

MANY KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Signals From Fire-Swept Pit Show That Some of the Entombed Miners are Still Living—Fresh Air Had Been Cut Off Thirty Hours When Shaft Was Opened.

Cherry, Ill, Nov. 15.—Nearly 400 men and boys, it is believed to-day, are dead or perishing in the St. Paul mine, as a result of Saturday's fire, though experts who penetrated the smoke-filled air shaft to a depth of 300 feet early last night, returned with a ray of hope for the grief-stricken relatives of the entombed men.

That the fire is extinguished is the report of mining experts sent by Gov. Deneen to investigate the calamity, and its cause. For more than 30 hours the prisoners had been cut off from fresh air before the shaft was entered last night, and undoubtedly have been subjected to smoke and gases.

That life could exist under the terrible conditions is doubted by many; but because no trace of high temperature was found in the depths of the mine to-day, friends of the miners, and even officers of the company, regained some of their failing hope.

A. J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Co., which owns the mine, received an encouraging report from John Reid, son of one of the missing miners, who said that concussions of the earth had been felt by farmers half a mile south of the mine shaft. The farmers are convinced they were the result of shots fired by the imprisoned miners.

The list of the missing miners, compiled yesterday, reached the total of 385, including the dead whose charred bodies were taken from the burning cages on Saturday. It was declared to be probable that this list might be increased.

One hundred and seventy men who entered the mine Saturday morning, have been accounted for. Among the missing are many Americans, who have lived for years in the mining fields of Illinois. Most of those entombed are foreign born. Most of the men had families.

The fire broke out late on Saturday afternoon. The only men to escape were those near the main shaft when the fire started. They declared a careless miner had thrown a torch on a bundle of hay. Two miners threw the burning mass on a cart and started toward the main shaft.

Before it was reached a small explosion occurred. Those nearest the cages hurried to them and were hoisted to the surface. After about four trips the cages ceased moving.

What disaster occurred in the minutes following the escape of the men near the shaft is unknown.

Great heroism was shown by officials of the mine and the residents of the town of Cherry. These men, who were outside the mine when the fire originated, contributed five to the list of twelve known dead.

Alexander Nerberg, a pit man, standing at the bottom of the shaft, carried the bodies of four men into the cage, the only alley of escape. As the last was carried in he fell across the body. He was dead as were all his companions, when the cage was lifted to the surface.

W. W. Taylor, general superintendent of mines of the St. Paul Company, who yesterday watched the movements to open the mine, said: "I believe that the state inspectors will say that this was the safest coal mine ever built in this country. The fire need not have been disastrous. The hay in the underground stable caught fire. The men in the stables were excited. The burning hay could have been shut off from the rest of the mine without difficulty, and the fire distinguished with little trouble."

Arrangements are under way to relieve the families of the victims. It is probable that supplies for their needs will be arranged for by the railroad company.

With winter approaching, the catastrophe has dealt every home in Cherry a terrific blow. The breadwinners in hundreds of homes are either dead or incapacitated for work.

RAINY RIVER DESPERADO ENDS LIFE IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 15.—Andras Slander, who was wanted for robbing a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Rainy River, Ont., on July 2, of $6,000 in Canadian currency, committed suicide Saturday afternoon by blowing out his brains in a house in this city where he had taken refuge after a running fight of over two miles with four policemen.

Fifty shots were fired during the running battle, in which both Slander and one of the officers were seriously wounded.

Chief of Detectives Smith had been searching for Slander since last July, when a downtown broker reported to him that a stranger whose actions had aroused his suspicions had changed a $1,000 note issued by the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Detectives surrounded Slander's house and one of them approached the front door and rang the bell. The woman came to the door, but Slander, realizing that he was cornered, leaped out of a side window with a magazine revolver in one hand and a satchel in the other.

Landing on the ground, Slander opened fire on the officers, firing six shots. He then turned and ran, with Wardenniski and his son in close pursuit, firing as they ran, while the other officers turned into side streets on opposite sides in an effort to head off the fugitive, who set them a hot pace, stopping occasionally to fire back at the officers. The battle was carried on for some distance, and Slander was pressed so close that his nerve gave way and he took refuge in the shadow of a house, fired six more shots and then turned his gun on himself.

During the running battle Detective Wardenniski was struck by bullets several times, but did not stop. After the fight had ended it was found that the bullets had passed through his clothing in several places with no more effect than slight wounds, the most serious of which was on his right hip.

May Be Niagara Robber.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 15.—Chief of Detectives Smith has partly identified Andras Slander, a fugitive, who committed suicide, when surrounded by detectives, as one of the robbers who attacked a clerk of the Canadian Express Co., at Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov 7, and stole $14,000.

Slander killed himself Saturday with a revolver after a four-mile pursuit during which many shots were exchanged with detectives. The officers were seeking to arrest Slander on the charge of robbing the Rainy River branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Rainy River, Ont.

His 19-year-old wife is under arrest.

PROBABILITIES.

JAILBREAKER LEE CAPTURED IN SEATTLE

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Superintendent W. H. Welsh of the Canadian Detective Bureau was in the city on Saturday night on his way to Seattle, Wash., to identify a man arrested in that place believed to be Edward Lee, one of the seven who broke from jail here on July 16, 1908.

The man was taken in there on Friday under the name of Sweeney as a suspicious character, and according to a wire received from Supt. Welsh's Seattle office has been identified by his pictures.

Lee is wanted in Niagara Falls for the murder of a constable who was seeking to arrest him there shortly after his escape from Toronto jail. Detective Welsh is inclined to believe the report of his arrest, and gives as confirmation of his belief the fact that Lee is known by him to have been in Vancouver on August 7 last, and that he has been looking for Lee in that locality through all the summer.

Lee, if he is taken, will be the sixth of the jailbreakers to be captured, and this will leave only one of the seven at liberty—John Copeland. Copeland is the only one of the seven of whom the police were unable to publish a picture.

To date Canada has spent $215,148,689 on railways and $95,331,742 on canals, [illegible]

A MONTREAL THEATRE IS UNDER BAN

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Theatrical circles were considerably shaken up yesterday morning by a letter read at high mass in all the Roman Catholic churches from the Archbishop of Montreal, condemning in the severest terms possible the performances at the Academy of Music, which his grace designates as a place of peril and danger.

This theatre was taken over some months ago by a company of French artists from Paris and the character of the representations have been more or less a subject of criticism. Yesterday, however, Mgr. Bruchesi asked all fathers and mothers to league together and to say, by their complete absence from this theatre, that those actors and actresses who have come over from Europe to ply their sad trade are not at home in Canada.

His grace adds that the directors of the Academy promised him at the outset that all of their pieces would be of the orthodox kind, and he claims that the public have been deceived and the Catholic community scandalized.

MME. STEINHEIL DECLARED NOT GUILTY OF MURDERS

All Paris Waits Feverishly For Verdict and Announcement of Her Acquittal of Charges is Followed by Wild Demonstrations of Joy.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Madame Margherita Steinheil was acquitted by a jury at an early hour yesterday morning of the murder of her husband, Adolph Steinheil, an artist, and her stepmother, Madame Japy.

The verdict was rendered at 12.55 a.m., after two and a half hour's deliberation, during which the jury thrice summoned the president of the court for explanations, thus proving that the original majority was for conviction. It is said the jury finally divided 9 to 3.

To some degree sentiment and a stuffy, crowded court-room favored the prisoner, and the delay caused much apprehension. With the first appearance of the jury, however, several of whom were smiling, an instinctive feeling of acquittal flashed through the court-room.

A dramatic scene followed. The red robed judges and counsel filed in and took their places. Every one was rivetted on the door through which the prisoner should enter, but she did not appear. M. Devalles, the presiding judge, turned to the jury and said "Have you reached a verdict?"

The foreman arose and replied: "On our conscience, we answer, 'No' to every question."

A salvo of "bravos" followed and a perfect bedlam broke loose. M. Aubin, counsel for Mme. Steinheil, embraced his colleagues. Men and women in the rear of the hall jumped and screamed for joy. The judge threatened to clear the court-room, and when a semblance of order was restored, he called: "Bring in the accused."

Fully two minutes passed before the black-robed figure, with a white face drooping on her breast, appeared in the doorway, supported on either side by a gendarme. The woman swayed and seemed to be fainting, but in response to a wild outburst of cheers she lifted her head and looked about, smiling faintly in acknowledgement. Then she tottered forward and sank on the floor beside the rail.

When the judge pronounced the verdict, her faint murmur of thanks was hardly heard. An instant after, M. Aubin was over the rail, lifting her in his arms. The crowd surged forward in a solid wall, making the rafters ring with cheers.

Outside the gloomy courthouse tens of thousands, who had been waiting for hours, took up the cry. Special editions of the papers spread the news like wildfire through the boulevards, where thousands more were waiting in front of the cafes, and the same scenes of rejoicing were witnessed there.

After being tenderly assisted out of the court-room, Mme. Steinheil was conducted from the building by one of the numerous subterranean passages. She was escorted back to St. Lazare prison, as the French procedure requires the formality of "lifting the bolts" before the definite release of the prisoner.

The ceremony was performed at once, and madame was whisked away in an auto.

WORK OF PLENARY COUNCIL IS DONE

Montreal, Nov. 15.—There will be no less than 115 decrees sent to Rome for the approval of the Vatican authorities, as a result of the deliberations of the recent plenary council, a good number of these being of the greatest importance to the Roman Catholic Church in the Dominion, while others are of minor importance.

These documents have already been edited and prepared in the Latin tongue, which is the language of the church, and are now being printed in a newspaper establishment in the City of Quebec, and will be sent to Rome.

Shot Wife by Accident.

Windsor, Nov. 15.—Mrs. Joseph Parent of Belle River, daughter of John Mayville of Windsor, was accidentally shot and killed Friday night by her husband. He was cleaning a shotgun. He had discharged one barrel, and thinking the gun was not loaded, snapped the other trigger. The charge of shot entered the woman's head near the left eye, causing instant death.

Kaiser Follows the Czar.

The Kaiser will visit Italy and meet King Victor Emmanuel.

YOUNG MAN ASPHYXIATED BY ACCIDENT

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 15.—Thomas R. Kelly, aged 24, son of Thomas Kelly, engineer on the Michigan Central Railway, was the victim of the first natural gas fatality since this illuminant was turned into the Windsor mains. He was overcome with the fumes of burned gas while in the bathroom of his home at 85 Janette avenue.

Young Kelly entered the room about 12 o'clock, and one hour later his dead body was found by his mother, who became anxious at the length of time her son was in the bathroom. Fumes of sulphuretted hydrogen were so strong as she opened the door that she reeled and cried for assistance. The poisonous gas came from an open sectional plate employed to heat the hot water tank. No pipes had been installed to carry off the fumes.

Kelly must have detected the danger, because he had crawled out of the bath tub and had one hand uplifted in trying to reach the door knob.

Three physicians were called and resorted to artificial respiration, but the vital spark had fled. Coroner Labelle decided an inquest unnecessary.

LIBERAL M.P. FOR NEW TARIFF

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—Knowles, Liberal member for Moose Jaw, has startled the Government with a notice of resolution calling for a reduction of the tariff duties on "such articles and commodities which are the necessities of the agricultural classes."

While it has been a matter of common knowledge that the western folk do not see eye to eye with either the Government or the Opposition on the question of the tariff, this is the first definite outbreak by a western Liberal.

It is suggested that Mr. Knowles does not mean business, and is merely temporizing with his constituents. His resolution is scanty in information as to what he wants exactly.

Stormy at Fort William.

Fort William, Nov. 15.—A storm which set in Saturday extended over the entire Lake Superior district. Saturday and yesterday the wind was blowing at 30 miles an hour. Early Saturday morning snow fell to a depth of [illegible] inches, but this quickly disappeared in the mild weather.

THE MINTOS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE FROM BOMBS

Unknown Disaffected Natives Hurl Two Infernal Machines at Carriage But They Fall in Soft Sand and Fail to Explode—Presence of Mind of Dragoon Saves Their Lives.

Ahmedabad, British India, Nov. 15.—Lord Minto, the Viceroy of India, and Lady Minto had a narrow escape Saturday from being killed by bombs.

They were driving through one of the streets, when, without warning, two bombs were thrown at their carriage.

A dragoon, who was riding alongside, spurred forward and with outstretched sabre intercepted the first bomb, hurling it some distance away into a sand heap.

The second bomb struck the viceroy's jemidar, a native lieutenant, who was holding an umbrella over Lady Minto, and fell harmlessly to the ground.

Neither bomb exploded, as the soft sand acted as a buffer.

On examination they were found to contain picric acid, a powerful explosive, better known as lyddite.

Just prior to this, as the carriage passed through one of the streets, a bomb exploded some little distance away.

Police and others, attracted by the explosion, ran up and found a man on the ground with his hand blown off. He proved to be an innocent bystander.

The bomb throwers made their escape in the excitement, and as yet no arrests have been made.

Attempts have been made in India against Lord Minto, Lord Kitchener, Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and many other officials, and for a year or more there has been fear of an uprising against British rule in India, based on these almost daily attempts on the lives of British officials.

Anarchist at Buenos Ayres.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 15.—The chief of police of Buenos Ayres, Senor Falcon, and the police secretary were assassinated yesterday while driving in Calla street.

A man, supposed to be a Russian anarchist, but not yet identified, suddenly sprang from a secluded spot where he had been in waiting and threw a bomb directly under the carriage.

The vehicle was blown to pieces and both Senor Falcon and the secretary were terribly injured. They were carried to a hospital, but died shortly afterward.

Immediately on throwing the bomb, the assassin drew a revolver and shot himself. His wound, however, is not expected to prove mortal.

FRENCH LINER IS SUNK AND HUNDRED ARE DROWNED

Singapore, Nov. 15.—The mail steamer La Seine of the Messageries maritime service, running between Java and Singapore, and on her way to this port, was in collision early yesterday morning with the steamer Onda, of the British India Line, and sank within two minutes.

Seven European passengers, including Baron and Baroness Benisský, the captain of La Seine, five European officers, and 88 others, comprising native passengers and members of the crew were drowned.

The accident occurred about four o'clock in the morning in a thick haze. The vessels were steaming at a good speed and the La Seine was cut almost in half. There was no time for panic nor for any attempt on the part of the officers of the foundering steamer to get out their boats.

The majority of those on board were caught in their berths and carried down with the vessel.

The force of the collision brought the Onda to almost a dead stop and her engines were at once slowed and boats lowered.

The rescue work proved thrilling, for not only were the rescuing parties impeded by the dark, but shoals of sharks were already attacking those clinging to pieces of wreckage in the water.

Sixty-one persons from the ill-fated steamer were finally dragged into the boats and brought by the Onda to this port. Many of them had been bitten by sharks and several are severely injured.

ROSS CONFIRMS THE REPORT OF STEEL-COAL MERGER

Montreal, Nov. 15.—James Ross, president of the Dominion Coal Co., and possessor of 50,000 out of a total of 150,000 shares, constituting the common stock of the company, has sold out his entire holdings conditionally to E. R. Wood, the head of the purchasing syndicate, at $95 per share, or about 3 points above the market quotation, thus transferring the control of the company to gentlemen favorable to the Dominion Iron & Steel Co., or at least favorable to a merger being consummated between these two great corporations.

For several weeks past this buying syndicate, represent by Col. Sir Henry Pellatt and E. R. Wood of the Queen City, and J. C. McCuaig of this city have been loading up with Dominion Steel common, and it is understood that they controlled a few days ago no less than 45,000 shares.

Mr. Ross sells 50,000 shares, and the holders of the 45,000 shares have assured Mr Wood of their willingness to throw in their lot with the new regime, and it is understood that 25,000 additional shares were financed on Saturday, twenty-five gentlemen here and in Toronto having underwritten one thousand shares each. Circulars will be sent to the holders of the remaining 30,000 shares, and if they will not consent to share the fortunes of the others, the purchasing syndicate are bound to buy them at the same price received by James Ross, viz., $95 per share.

When interviewed yesterday evening, James Ross confirmed the report that he had agreed to sell.

Mr. Ross stated that he understood the real purchaser of his shares is the Dominion Iron & Steel Co. Many difficulties had arisen in the past between the Coal Company and the Steel Company, and after full consideration he had reached the conclusion that similar difficulties could best be avoided in the future by a merger of the companies.

MR. BORDEN

Mr. Borden is a man of unsullied honour, and of great natural ability. He is a leader in the best and truest sense. That Conservatives do not always agree with him is a tribute to his leadership. It shows that he cultivates in others independence of judgment, while his being retained as leader shows that his value is recognized. His retention as leader is a tribute paid by the Conservative party to itself in that it demonstrates that it stands for the ideal leadership of an ideal man, and is yet capable of allowing him the freedom of his own opinions.

The "Canadian Navy" will never be accepted by the Canadian people. We are convinced of that. And Mr. Borden is just the man to yield to the will of the public he delights in serving.

MR. WILCOX, A FARMER

Mr. Wilcox, the new and all-conquering M. P. for North Essex, who "redeemed" the riding that had been in political darkness for thirteen long years, is a farmer. It is gratifying to find that the citizens of Windsor gave him a large majority. If the backbone of the country is agriculture, why should the country not have more farmers in Parliament to look after the "backbone," for surely no one knows more about it than the farmer himself. Mr. Wilcox's opponent was the chief whip of the Liberal Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, who resigned from that House to carry the constituency for the Laurier Naval Policy. But it didn't work. No less than three Cabinet Ministers, Hon. Geo. Graham, Hon. Chas. Murphy and Hon. L. M. King, visited the riding, but the farmer was too much for them. Here's to you, Mr. Wilcox!

WHEN EXPANSION IS WRONG

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, late president of the G. T. P., sadly remarked some time ago that owing to the scarcity of white labor and the opposition to yellow labor it was not likely that the G. T. P. would be completed as soon as promised. This is the curse of over-expansion. Why should Canada run so far ahead of her needs, in expenditure or in anything else. For Canadians to "expand" for a population that is not here looks like paying the piper for our friends the financiers to dance to. It is, however, the real basis of our craze for expenditure.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Lancaster, M.P., has moved a resolution for the abolition of the Senate.

The following is given for the benefit of those who doubt the power of the press:

"Owing to the overcrowded condition of our columns, a number of births and deaths are unavoidably postponed this week."

"There is probably no country under the sun where some excuse for dragging it into militarism could not be found."—Farmer's Advocate.

The Laurier government has paid out 16 millions in 12 years in bounties. Did anybody hear of any of this going to the farmers? If so kindly communicate with this office.

The good, old exercise of spanking is needed again as a sort of restorative these days. Some people (mostly women) are getting the feeling that "Love's sweet emotion," otherwise known as soul-mating or hysteria Americana, is an excuse for reconstructing their love affairs. They even go so far as to regard the indulgence of this hysteria as a sort of divine inspiration and an excuse for all sorts of wrong-do[illegible] course, when their [illegible] The recent case in [illegible] needed the slipper.

MANY DEER FROM NORTH COUNTRY

Seventy to Seventy [illegible] at Lindsay—Number Come [illegible] Peterboro

Lindsay, Nov. 13.—[illegible] closes on Monday next [illegible] November, and to-[illegible] trains from the North show [illegible] work done among the deer in the back woods by the various hunters, during the past two weeks. The Haliburton train from Gelert and Haliburton stations carried into town for Niagara Falls, Peterborough, Toronto, London, Millbrook, and numerous other places between 70 and 75 deer, all of which were a good size.

When loaded in the Canadian Express trucks, the pile was fully three feet in depth.

Hunters from various places followed their trophies. Among the number was Mr. J. Harbron of Kinsale post office, who it is stated, killed one of the largest bucks this season, weighing almost 325 pounds.

Mr. R. W. Benson, of Bewdley, and Jas. Scott, of Peterborough, also arrived with their spoil, four deer, from Robinson's lumber camp at Drag Lake, in Haliburton County. They state that the deer were very plentiful, having shot their four during the first few days they were there and saw several fine specimens on the trail out. Mr. Benson also stated that this morning at Haliburton station 42 deer were piled on the trucks, waiting to be brought out on this evening's train.

Broke Promise; Is Killed.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 12.—Just before he died yesterday from two bullet wounds received Thursday night, Samuel F. Morley, farm manager of a large estate, at Bloomfield, 20 miles north of Detroit, said that Bertha Lieutzau, cook at the farm, had shot him because he refused to marry her.

At the Pontiac jail Miss Lieutzau said: "Morley did me a great wrong in promising to marry me, and in refusing to do so, so I shot him. And if I were going to die in three minutes I would not ask forgiveness for what I have done. He got what was due him."

Morley came from London, Ont., where his sister and brother reside.

Conserving Resources.

Washington, Nov. 13. Without waiting for decisive legislation to learn what will eventually be done with many lands, valuable for water-power; Secretary Ballinger yesterday withdrew from disposition over eight thousand acres of such land located in the states of Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Washington and Wyoming and New Mexico.

Flax Mill Suffers by Fire.

Lucan, Nov. 13.—Fire at 3 o'clock destroyed almost the entire season's crop of flax, the property of William Ward. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The mill will shut down in thirty days for the winter, throwing a number of men out of employment.

No Franchise For Women.

London, Nov. 13.—The Earl of Crewe, Lord Privy Seal, told a deputation of Liberal women that there was no chance of the Government supporting a woman suffrage plank in the next election.

New Quebec Judge.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—Judge A. Malouin of the Arthabasca judicial district has been transferred to Quebec to fill the vacancy on the bench caused by the appointment of Sir Louis Jette, as Chief Justice of Quebec.

MAKES HAIR GROW

Wm. Madill Has an Invigorator That Makes Hair Grow in Abundance or Money Back

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of the hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this: It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root.

Parisian Sage is sold by Wm. Madill, druggist, of Peterborough, under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first-class town in Canada. A large generous bottle costs 50 cents, and the girl with Auburn hair is on every bottle.

Canada spent $1,873,868 on canals last year.

DRAWING-ROOM AT OPENING OF HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—(Special.)—The Governor-General and Countess Grey held their last drawing-room in the capital last evening. The gathering was a striking one, and vivid in its wealth of color and beauty. The many-hued and elegant toilettes and rich jewels of the ladies, bright scarlet and blue and gold of the military and naval officers, set off by the crimson and gold hangings and furnishings of the Red Chamber, made a scene which is witnessed in Canada only once a year. This time the arrangements were, if anything, even more perfect than before. The presentations began at 9 o'clock, and shortly before that hour the Vice-regal party, escorted by a detachment from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, swept up the driveway, accompanied by the band of the Governor-General's Foot Guards. Their Excellency entered the Senate chamber preceded by the Hon. Aides de Camp and the household staff, walking between the line formed by the officers of the headquarters staff and city regiments on duty on the floor of the House.

The first to be presented was Lady Evelyn Grey, and afterwards the guests at Government House, Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, of Washington, D.C., and Miss McCook, of New York. Lady Hanbury-Williams and Miss Gladys followed, and when the ladies had taken up their positions at the left of the throne other presentations began, Sir John Hanbury-Williams announcing the names in order. After the customary bow and courtesy those wishing to do so, remained in the chamber, standing on either side of the throne or in the galleries. The first to be presented after the Vice-regal party was the Prime Minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Lady Laurier being unable to be present. He was followed by the Cabinet Ministers, and their wives and daughters, those present being Sir Frederick and Lady Borden, Miss Borden, Sir Richard and Lady Cartwright, the Misses Cartwright, Hon. W. S. Fielding, the Misses Fielding, Hon. Frank and Mrs. Oliver, the Misses Oliver, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Hon. William and Mrs. Paterson, Hon. William and Mrs. Templeman, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. Charles Murphy, Miss Murphy, and Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. The Chief Justice of Canada, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, and Lady Fitzpatrick and the judges of the Supreme Court followed.

The Countess Grey wore an exquisite creation of gold tissue elaborately embroidered in floral pattern on dress and train in gold, the overdress mounted on a Princess gown of satin of the same shade. The Court train matched the gown, and with it were worn the Court veil and feathers. Her jewels were diamonds, a diamond tiara and necklace, and ornaments, and she carried a bouquet of orchids.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

A Complaint

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Will you allow me space to refer to what I consider an act of ancient barbarism, an act unworthy of manliness, and a disgrace to our fair city of churches.

A citizens' meeting was called to discuss means to attract people to our city. Now, sir, I think one of the first things to that end is to be able to show the outside world that we have a righteous, law-abiding people, who are willing to give others the privileges they ask for themselves. That we have a city where all enjoy British fair play. The act I refer to is this: Our church, as you already know, went to a large expense to secure a lecturer to deliver a free lecture on the subject of Christianity, a subject in which all should be interested. We had printed what I considered a very respectable card, and I sacrificed my time to post them where I considered they would not injure anyone, and where other cards were nailed up. Within twenty-four hours I found some of those cards torn down and thrown in the mud, others were torn to pieces. They only could be taken down by human hands, and that not of an innocent child.

Some say this is the work of hotel-keepers, or the whiskey men. In justice to all, I want to say that this is not the action of the whiskey men, neither is it the act of our respectable citizens, but is the idiosyncrasy of some church members. My respect for anything that names the name of Christ, or is trying to do good, will restrain me from making any trouble for the poor, misled culprits, providing it does not go any farther.

Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." It is easy to judge the wickedness of the perpetrators of this act, when I tell you that alongside of my card that was taken down and torn to pieces, was a dark, vicious picture of two men, each with a dagger, trying to stab each other—that was unmolested. Here we see the heart or mentality agreeing with the dark, murderous picture, no doubt the culprit imagined himself venting his spite on Christian Science by stabbing in the dark. We might ask, Why such an act? I know it is nothing that I have done, neither can it be against the lecturer, whom the evil-minded culprit knows not. Then, it is but reasonable to conclude that it must be the word Science attached to Christian that stirs the enmity of the carnal mind, as it was Jesus' declaration that He was the Son of God that enraged the carnal mind against Him.

What is Christian Science doing that our claims are unworthy of being heard? A man answered this a few days ago by saying "They let people die and they have been before the magistrates." Your humble servant had to admit that an attempt had been made to bring him "before the magistrate," but, however, for pulling down the posters of other denominations, nor in any way injuring any one, but, on the other hand, for trying, however feebly, to carry out the command of the Master and Wayshower.

Christian Science has three periodicals—a monthly, a weekly and a daily. Those who read them will find that there is no effort made to hinder the good from being reflected by any other body. On the other hand, we find our "Daily Monitor" constantly making mention of the good others are doing and trying to encourage and help them.

In the last few weeks a great deal of space has been taken up in aid of the Y.M.C.A. work. In watching the results I found that Mrs. Eddy alone subscribed $1,000, while the Monitor, through its staff and influence or readers, raised over $3,500. Is it for this kind of work that the posters for a lecture on Christian Science is for a lecture on Christian Science are being destroyed? We shall leave those who did the deed to answer.

In conclusion, I would ask the teachers of these unmanly and misguided youths to bring them out to our lecture Thursday night; it will not cost them anything, and if either teacher or pupils find in our teaching anything to justify the destroying of another's property I shall be glad to have them report through the press.

Our lecture is not to criticise the wrongs of others, nor to justify the wrongs or weaknesses of those in the ranks of Christian Science, but to explain what it is. All are welcome, critic, friend and foe, especially the poor, depraved individuals who took down our cards. I feel that they are in great need of the truth that makes free from the clutches of the common enemy of humanity.

Thanking you, I am,
Sincerely yours,
R. J. TODD.

PUBLICITY BY-LAW WILL BE VOTED ON

Goes to the People at Ottawa—A Pointer for Peterboro

The committee of the board of trade which has been working quietly on the movement for civic publicity, expects that the by-law, calling for an expenditure of $10,000 for this purpose will be re-submitted to the ratepayers of the city again this year.

The official announcement of the re-submission of the by-law will be made, it is expected, by Mayor Hopewell, at the banquet to be held the end of this month by the members of the board of trade.

Last year the board of trade pledged itself to raise $5,000 to reinforce that which would have been given for publicity purposes by the city if the by-law had passed. This year they will express the same intention, providing the city will spend the $10,000. Several informal meetings of the publicity committee of the board have been held, and a plan of campaign is being mapped out, to present the by-law in the most favorable light to the ratepayers.—Exchange.

BROCKVILLE TAKING NOTICE

Reference to Citizens' Meeting at Peterborough.

The Brockville Times says—An enthusiastic meeting of the leading business men in Peterborough, under the auspices of the Board of Trade have decided to engage at a salary an industrial commissioner, whose sole duty shall be to advertise Peterborough and attract industries to that enterprising town. That is the way to build up a town. When manufacturers and capitalists see that the citizens of a town are vigorous and enterprising they are encouraged to locate there, and to expand their business. If, on the contrary, they observe that the citizens are torpid and indifferent and lack faith in their civic future, they pass by to some more inspiring atmosphere. Which obviously leads to the thought that if Brockville bestirs itself and hustles for more business and demands cheap power with a determined voice it will get what it wants. Other towns are up and doing. Brockville, keep a-pushin' and a-shovin'!

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more; it decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments, and oftimes rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

MI-O-NA is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure or money back. The price of a large box of Mi-o-na Tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

NO NEW AMERICAN CARDINAL

Rome, Nov. 14.—It is announced that the next consistory will not be held before Easter, and it is also stated than the plan to create a new American cardinal has been abandoned, partly on account of the claims advanced by Latin-America and Canada, and partly because of the difficulty of selecting an American prelate who would be agreeable to the majority.

Personal Problems

A large number of boys attended the meeting in the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon, and the subject of "Personal Problems," dealt with by Mr. C. L. Clarke, a commercial traveller, held their attention throughout. The speaker touched on the many temptations which lay in the path of the young boy of to-day, and the proper way in which to meet them. Mr. Clarke made such a favorable impression with the boys that he may be prevailed upon to speak here again at a later date.

BUSINESS GOOD IN NEW ONTARIO

Mr. Godfrey Coughlin Home After Successful Business Trip

Mr. Godfrey J. Coughlin, of the Coughlin Monumental Works, has just returned home from a successful business trip to Northern Ontario. Among the places he visited were Cobalt, Haileybury, New Liskeard and North Bay. Mr. Coughlin states that business is flourishing in the northern part of the province, the mining fever continuing unabated. The discovery of gold at Porcupine Lake has caused a rush of miners to that locality. At Cobalt Mr. Coughlin met Mr. John O'Brien, son of Mr. Michael O'Brien, of Gilmour street, and Mr. J. B. Hay, who is now editing the Cobalt Nugget.

THE HOOK

Whoever sees Halley's comet first can have it.

A Bancroft paper suggests that hunters wear red headgear in order that they may not be mistaken for deer. Might they not be mistaken for a certain species of wood-pecker if they have red tops.

Perhaps the fire in the city buildings was caused by the hot stuff the aldermen have been throwing at each other.

MISS MacLACHLAN ARRIVES IN CITY

Will Be Greeted by Large Audience To-Night—Piper Attracts Attention.

Miss Jessie MacLachlan, the Scottish prima donna, arrived in the city at noon to-day and is staying at the Snowden House. She appears at the Grand Opera House to-night and will be assisted by the Heather Male Quartette of Toronto and Piper Pollock. The latter was driven along the principal streets of the city at noon in a hack. He was in full Highland regalia and played the pipes as he rode along. It was a novel sight for many Peterborough people and a great deal of interest was aroused. The programme will commence at 8.15 o'clock and the audience is requested to be seated by that time. There are a number of good seats left yet, but they are going rapidly. To-night's concert will be the event of the season in local musical circles. The accompanist will be Mr. James Buchanan, of Scotland, a player of rare ability.

IMMENSE GATHERINGS TO HEAR A NOTED SPEAKER

Clinton N. Howard, of Rochester, Gave Two Addresses at Grand Opera House in Interests of Local Option Campaign.

Clinton N. Howard, lecturer and reform worker, of Rochester, N.Y., was the speaker at two meetings, afternoon and evening—in the Grand Opera House yesterday. They were immense gatherings, especially the evening one, when many had to be turned away. Every seat was taken and the law will not permit people standing in the aisles on lobby during a meeting. Mr. Howard, who is a lecturer of great ability, made a splendid impression and inspired the local option workers. He makes frequent use of anecdotes to illustrate his points, and as a result this audience is kept interested all the time. His subject in the afternoon was "A Joy Ride on the Water Waggon," and his text at night was "Fear not, for behold I bring you tidings of great joy." The Salvation Army band was present in the afternoon and led the singing. The Orpheus quartette also assisted greatly in the service. Mr. Bruce Quinn presided at the piano at the evening meeting.

Mr. Howard advanced many arguments in support of local option in Peterborough. There were seventeen thousand reasons why it should be passed. Every soul in Peterborough, and there were seventeen thousand of them, was a reason why the bar should be banished. The time was not far distant, Mr. Howard said, when the whole of Canada would be "dry." The speaker referred to the success of the temperance cause in the United States and related many interesting events in connection with the fight for temperance legislation across the line. Mr. Howard pointed out that local option would improve business conditions. This had been proven in many towns and cities. A sober people meant improved conditions. This was plain to everyone who gave the matter any thought.

At the evening meeting Mr. Howard said he brought good tidings to men, women and children, for the men, women and children, for the dumb animals, for the factory and farm. It would be bad news, however, for the saloons, the gambling dens, crooked politicians and houses of questionable repute.

LITTLE DAMAGE DONE BY BLAZE AT CITY BUILDINGS

Started on Third Floor, But Effective Work by Firemen Prevented the Flames From Spreading—Inconvenience Will be Caused by the Large Amount of Water Used—Damage About $300.00.

At seven o'clock, Saturday evening, an alarm was rung in to the fire station from Box 22, and on the department responding, it was found that the fire was located in the third story of the municipal buildings and east of the large room used by the band of the 57th Regiment. There are several smaller rooms at this point and although it cannot be definitely ascertained, it is probable that the blaze first started in one of these apartments, but how it originated is hard to say at present. Owing to his thorough knowledge of the building, gained while a member of the band, Deputy Chief Grange had no trouble in locating the blaze and soon had the water playing on the flames in an effective manner. The dense smoke which poured out the windows was the only sign to the large crowd, watching on the street below that a fire was in progress, and it had the effect of making the trouble look more serious than it really was.

The walls of the offices of the city officials below, were damaged considerably by water and some inconvenience will be caused as a result of the unfortunate affair.

The damage will not likely exceed $300.

BLESSING OF THE BELL OF THE CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART

The Available Accommodation of Beautiful New Catholic Church Taken Up by Congregation — Ceremony Performed by Bishop—Rev. Dr. O'Brien's Appropriate Sermon.

Beautiful weather smiled on the occasion of the blessing of the bell of the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday afternoon. The afternoon was a delightful one and no more agreeable day could have favored the sacred and interesting function. The services in connection with the blessing of the bell opened at 3.30 o'clock and so great was the interest in the event that the church was crowded to almost uncomfortable capacity. His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, officiated and the assisting priests were Rev. W. J. McColl, Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who gave a masterly and especially appropriate sermon, and Rev. P. J. Kelly.

THE CEREMONY.

The ceremony of blessing a bell is one that is only employed at the erection of a new church or the placing of a bell in a church and for that reason is one that is not very frequently seen. It opens with the recitation of five appropriate psalms after which the bell is baptized with water blessed for the purpose. This signifies the separating of the bell from any profane usage. Next the bell is consecrated with holy oil, the oil being applied on the exterior of the bell in seven different places. Then follows prayers and psalms, the ceremony ending with the reading of the gospel.

After the ceremony the bishop tolled the bell for the first time and was followed by the assisting clergy and the members of the congregation.

PRESENCE OF SON OF GOD.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien took as the text for his sermon "How Holy are Thy Tabernacles O Lord of Hosts" from Psalms 83, verse 1. In beginning the speaker made a comparison between the Jewish temple, which contained a symbol of God's presence and the Catholic church in which the eternal Son of God dwells. And as the Christian church is much more sacred than the temples of old so also should the church be held in greater reverence than was the temple among the Jews.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE BELL — A HISTORY

Everything in the Christian church has its significance and its use and the bell which was blessed was to be a living voice, as it were, that was calling the people to the different sacred offices to be held in the church, and also for the daily ringing of the Angelus.

The speaker gave a short history of the use of bells. Even before the Christian era bells in some shape were used for announcing public functions. At the beginning of Christianity much as bells would have served for sacred functions their use was impossible on account of the enmity of the Roman Empire toward everything Christian. However, the church having been granted freedom by Constantine the Great, the use of bells for sacred purposes began.

In the 6th and 8th centuries many bells were erected. In the 12th century they were used for the taking of solemn oaths and were even carried into battle; in the 13th century the custom of erecting towers for housing them became general, and since then the use of bells has been world wide.

The forms of bells have greatly changed with the ages. From the crude sheet of metal rapped by a hammer they have developed into the magnificent chimes that are heard today. While mentioning the principal uses for the bell, the speaker dwelt at length upon the ringing of the Angelus at 6 a.m, 12 noon and 6 p. m. The reason of this daily practice is to honor the mystery of the incarnation of the Son of God. Being the fundamental mystery of the Christian religion too much praise and thanks-giving cannot be given to God for His infinite goodness to the human race as manifested in the incarnation.

In conclusion the people were urged to unite in prayer in honor of the incarnation when they hear the Angelus rung.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

A MIX-UP AT SMITH ST.

Work on the Smith street bridge has been stopped. The water is several feet higher than hitherto, and the contractor says he cannot proceed. The Quaker Oats Co. needed only an understanding with the Inverlea Park trustees and a few riparian owners to enable them to increase their head. This understanding was arrived at some little time ago, and shortly after the Smith street bridge contract was let it happened that the motor and light load necessitated the raising of the water. The water may be lowered in the summer again, as usual, but there can be no guarantee of it. The contractors evidently thought that the water would be lowered to enable them to proceed without extra expense. The water, it may be said, is not controlled by the government, but by the Peterborough Hydraulic and Quaker Oats Company. Superintendent McClellan's jurisdiction stops on the river at Nassau and continues down the canal proper. The city engineer understood that the Quaker Oats Co. would lower the water sufficiently to enable the contractor to go on with his work, but in the specification for the contract of building the bridge a clause states that "It is anticipated that the water, the normal level of which is 47.31, city datum, can be temporarily lowered five feet or more by arrangement and agreement with the Peterborough Hydraulic Co. and the Quaker Oats Co., or other parties affected, which arrangement shall be made by the contractor at his own cost, and no part of said cost or claims for damages by contractor, companies or other parties affected, on this account, shall be assumed by the city." It would appear, therefore, that the issue is between the contractors, the Messrs. Conroy and the Hydraulic or Quaker Oats Co. From the clause in the specification quoted above, it is evident that an arrangement between the contractors and these companies was, of necessity, contemplated. Has any such arrangement been made? It would appear from Mr. Larmonth's statement that no such arrangement as "anticipated" was made. The Hydraulic Co. has got to keep going at full head of water to do the work required of it, he says. The contractors thought, evidently, that they could afford to bid on the basis of ordinary low water, instead of at high water, as some of the others bid at, but it would seem that the unexpected has happened. The added expense would have meant a different bid on their part, no doubt. It is unfortunate and will be a source of loss to the Messrs. Conroy, but it would seem, from the clause in the specification, that they could have provided against it by contract or agreement in writing.

TWO BARRELS FOR CHARITY

As Result of Potato Matinee at Grand on Saturday

The potato matinee at the Grand on Saturday afternoon resulted in a splendid contribution of Irish fruit. Prior to the matinee, which was given by Tom Marks and Company, it was requested that all attending bring a potatoe with them and a contribution of two barrels of "murphies" resulted so large was the audience. One barrel will be given to the Children's Aid Society and the other to the House of Providence.

The prize of one dollar offered for the child bringing the largest potato was equally divided between Harold Bradshaw and Greta LeBar. The potato donated by Master Bradshaw, won the heavyweight championship of the afternoon, but the other prize-winner had one that gave it so close a race that an even money division was made. The biggest potato weighed two pounds seven ounces.

George Young, of Ottawa, was sentenced to seven years for attacking a girl.

For Six Months—"The Wolf" a Drama of Deep Human Interest

Sam S. and Lee Shubert's production of "The Wolf," a drama of the Hudson Bay country, is said to be one of the greatest successes of the season. It deals with a rugged manhood of that far northern country which resists and defeats the plans of an adventurer among women. The cast is made up of the pick of the dramatic profession, and the Messrs. Shubert take pleasure in offering it at the Grand next Thursday, Nov. 18th. The drama is by Eugene Walter and when first produced, ran for six months in New York. It played a return engagement this season. The plan opens tomorrow morning.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"How do I know?" the man repeated. Nevertheless he dropped watch and chain into his pocket, then, with a meaning grimace, extended again his horny, greedy palm.

"What"—

"Hand over th' two pun and we'll go."

"I'll see you hanged first!"

"Ashore ye go." He pronounced his ultimatum, motioning Kirkwood to enter the boat.

The American turned, looking for the Alethea or for the vessel that he believed bore that name. She was nearing the lightship when he found her, and as he looked a squall blurred the air between them, blotting the brigantine out with a smudge of rain. The effect was as if she had vanished, as if she were forever snatched from his grasp, and with Dorothy aboard her—heaven alone knew in what need of him!

Mute and blind with despair and wrath, he turned upon the man and caught him by the collar, forcing him out over the lip of the overhang. They were unevenly matched, Kirkwood far the slighter, but strength came to him in the crisis, physical strength and address such as he had not dreamed were at his command. And the surprise of his onslaught proved an ally of unguessed potency. Before he himself knew it he was standing on the overhang and had shifted his hold to seize the fellow about the waist; then, lifting him clear of the deck and aided by the lurch of the catboat, he cast him bodily into the dory. The man, falling, struck his head against one of the thwarts—a glancing blow that stunned him temporarily. Kirkwood himself dropped as if shot, a trailing reef point slapping his cheek until it stung as the boom thrashed overhead. It was as close a call as he had known. The knowledge sickened him a little.

Without rising he worked the painter loose and cast the dory adrift, then crawled back into the cockpit. No pang of compassion disturbed him as he abandoned the fisherman to the mercy of the sea. Though the fellow lay still, uncouthly distorted, in the bottom of the dory, he was in no danger. The wind and waves together would carry the boat ashore. For that matter, the man was even then recovering, struggling to sit up.

Crouching to avoid the boom, Kirkwood went forward to the bows and, grasping the mooring cable, drew it in, slipping back into the cockpit to get a stronger purchase with his feet. It was a struggle. The boat pulled sluggishly against the wind, the cable inching in jealously. And behind him he could hear a voice bellowing inarticulate menaces and knew that in another moment the fisherman would be at his ears.

Frantically he tugged and tore at the slimy rope, hauling with a will and a prayer. It gave more readily toward the end, but he seemed to have fought with it for ages when at last the anchor tripped and he got it in.

Immediately he leaped back to the stern, fitted in the tiller end, seizing the mainsheet, drew the boom in till the wind should catch in the canvas. In the dory the skipper, bending at his oars, was not two yards astern.

He was hard aboard when, the sail filling with a bang, Kirkwood pulled the tiller up, and the catboat slid away, a dozen feet separating them in a breath.

A yell of rage boomed down the wind, but he paid no heed. Careless alike of the dangers he had passed and those that yawned before him, he trimmed the sheet and stood away on the port tack, heading directly for the Nore lightship.

CHAPTER XVI.

LEANING against the combing, feet braced upon the slippery and treacherous deck, Kirkwood clung to tiller and mainsheet and peered ahead with anxious eyes, a pucker of daring graven deep between his brows.

A mile to westward, three or more ahead, he could see the brigantine standing close in under the Essex shore. At times she was invisible. Again he could catch merely the glint of her canvas, white against the dark gloom of the littoral, toned by a mist of flying spindrift. He strained his eyes, watching for the change which would take place in the rake of her masts and sails when she should come about.

For the longer that maneuver was deferred the better was his chance of attaining his object. It was a forlorn hope. But in time the brigantine, to escape Maplin sands, would be forced to tack and stand out past the lightship, the wind off her port bows. Then their courses would intersect. It remained to be demonstrated whether the catboat was speedy enough to arrive at this point of contact in advance of or simultaneously with the larger vessel.

He watched the catboat anxiously, quick to approve her merits as she displayed them. He had sailed small craft before—frail centerboard catboats, handy and swift, built to serve in summer winds and protected waters, never such a one as this. Yet he liked her.

Offshore, too, the wind stormed with added strength or possibly had freshened. For minutes on end the leeward gunwales would run green, and now and again the screaming, pelting squalls that scoured the estuary would heel her over until the water cascaded in over the lee combing, and the rudder, lifted clear, would hang idle until, smitten by some racing billow, the tiller would be all but torn from Kirkwood's hands. Again and again this happened, and those were times of trembling. But always the catboat righted, shaking the clinging waters from her and swinging her stem into the wind again, and there would follow an abbreviated breathing spell, during which Kirkwood was at liberty to dash the salt spray from his eyes and search the wind harried waste for the brigantine. Sometimes he found her, sometimes not.

Long after he had expected her to she went about, and they began to close in upon each other. He could see that even with shortened canvas she was staggering drunkenly under the fierce impacts of the wind. For himself, it was nip and tuck now, and no man in his normal sense would have risked a sixpence on the boat's chance to live until she crossed the brigantine's bows.

Time out of reckoning he was forced to kneel in the swimming cockpit, steering with one hand, using the bailing dish with the other and keeping his eyes religiously turned to the bellying patch of sail. It was heartbreaking toil. He began reluctantly to concede that it could not last much longer. And if he missed the brigantine he would be lost.

Long since he had become numb with cold from incessant drenchings of icy spray that piled in over the windward counter, keeping the bottom ankle deep regardless of his laborious but intermittent efforts with the bailing dish. And the two, brigantine and cockleshell, were drawing together with appalling deliberation.

But that his voice stuck in his parched throat he could have shouted in his elation when eventually he gained the point of intersection an eighth of a mile ahead of the brigantine and got sight of her windward freeboard as most slowly the catboat forged across her course.

For all that, the moment of his actual triumph was not yet. He had still to carry off successfully a scheme that for sheer audacity of conception and contempt for danger transcended all that had gone before.

Holding the catboat on for a time, he brought her about handsomely a little way beyond the brigantine's course and hung in the eye of the wind, the leach flapping and tightening with reports like rifle shots and the water sloshing about his calves—bailing dish now altogether out of mind—while he watched the oncoming vessel, his eyes glistening with anticipation.

She was footing it smartly, the brigantine, lying down to it and snoring into the wind. Beneath her stem waves broke in snow white showers, whiter than the canvas of her bulging jib—broke and, gnashing their teeth in impotent fury, swirled and eddied down her sleek dark flanks. Bobbing, courtesying, she plunged onward, shortening the interval with mighty, leaping bounds. On her bows with each instant the golden letters of her name grew larger and more legible until—Alethea—he could read it plain beyond dispute.

Joy welled in his heart. He forgot all that he had undergone in the prospect of what he proposed still to do in the name of the only woman the world held for him. Unquestioning he had come thus far in her service; unquestioning, by her side, he was prepared to go still further, though all humanity should single her out with accusing fingers.

They were watching him aboard the brigantine. He could see a line of heads above her windward rail. Perhaps she was of their number. He waved an audacious hand. Some one replied, a great shout shattering itself unintelligibly against the gale. He neither understood nor attempted to reply. His every faculty was concentrated on the supreme moment now at hand.

Calculating the instant to a nicety, he paid off the sheet and pulled up the tiller. The catboat pivoted on her heel. With a crack her sail flapped full and rigid; then, with the untempered might of the wind behind her, she shot like an arrow under the brigantine's bows, so close that the bowsprit of the latter first threatened to impale the sail; next, the bows plunging, crashed down a bare two feet behind the catboat's stern.

Working in a frenzy of haste, Kirkwood jammed the tiller hard alee, bringing the cat about, and, trimming the mainsheet as best he might, found himself racing under the brigantine's leeward quarter, water pouring in generously over the cat's.

Luffing, he edged nearer, handling his craft as though intending to ram the larger vessel, foot by foot shortening the little interval. When it was four feet he would risk the jump. He crawled out on the overhang, crouching on his toes, one hand light upon the tiller, the other touching the deck, ready—ready.

Abruptly the Alethea shut off the wind; the sail flattened and the cat dropped back. In a second the distance had doubled. In anguish Kirkwood uttered an exceeding bitter cry. Already he was falling far off her counter.

A shout reached him. He was dimly conscious of a dark object hurtling through the air. Into the cockpit, splashing, something dropped—a coil of rope. He fell forward upon it into water eighteen inches deep and for the first time realized that but for that line he had gone to his drowning in another minute. The cat was sinking.

As he scrambled to his feet, clutching the life line, a heavy wave washed over the waterlogged craft and left it all but submerged, and a smart tug on the rope added point to the advice, which, reaching his ears in a bellow like a bull's, penetrated the panic of his wits.

"Jump! Jump, you fool!"

In an instant of coherence he saw that the brigantine was luffing. None the less much of the line had already been paid out, and there was no reckoning when the end would be reached. Without time to make it fast he hitched it twice round his waist and chest, once round an arm, and, grasping it above his head to ease its constriction when the tug should come, leaped on the combing and overboard. A green roaring avalanche swept down upon him and the luckless catboat, overwhelming both simultaneously.

The agony that was his during the next few minutes can by no means be exaggerated. His senses were blotted out in blackness. Then he was breathing once more, the keen clean air stabbing his lungs, the while he swam unsupported in an ethereal void of brilliance. His mouth was full of something that burned, a liquid hot, acrid and stinging. He gulped, swallowed, slabbered, choked, coughed, attempted to sit up, was aware that he was the focal center of a ring of glaring, burning eyes, like eyes of ravening beasts, and fainted.

His next conscious impression was of standing up, supported by friendly arms on either side, while somebody was asking him if he could walk a step or two.

He was partly seated, partly held up, on the edge of the cabin skylight, an object of interest to some half dozen men, seafaring fellows all, by their habit, clustered round between him and the windward rail. Of their number one stood directly before him, dwarfing his companions as much by his air of command as by his uncommon height—tall, thin faced and sallow, with hollow, weatherworn cheeks, a mouth like a crooked gash from ear to ear and eyes like dying coals, with which he looked the rescued up and down in one grim, semi-humorous, semi-speculative glance. In hands both huge and red he fondled tenderly a squat brandy flask whose contents had apparently been employed as a first aid to the drowning.

As Kirkwood's gaze encountered his the man smiled sourly, jerking his head to one side with a singularly derisive air.

"Hi, matey!" he blustered. "'Ow goes it now? Feelin' 'appier, eigh?"

"Some, thank you — more like a drowned rat." Kirkwood eyed him sheepishly. "I suppose you're the man who threw me that line? I'll have to wait till my head clears up before I can thank you properly."

"Don't mention it." He of the lantern jaws stowed the bottle away with jealous care in one of his immense coat pockets and seized Kirkwood's hand in a grasp that made the young man wince. "You're syfe enough now. My nyme's Stryker, Capt'n Wilyum Stryker. Wot's the row? Lookin' for a friend?" he demanded suddenly as Kirkwood's attention wandered.

"Yes; your passengers. I presume they're below"—

"Passengers!"

A hush fell upon the group, during which Kirkwood sought Stryker's eye in pitiful pleading, and Stryker looked round him blankly.

"Where's Miss Calendar?" the young man demanded sharply. "I must see her at once!"

The keen and deep set eyes of the skipper clouded as they returned to Kirkwood's perturbed countenance. "Wot're you talkin' about?" he demanded brusquely.

"I must see Miss Calendar or Calendar himself or Mulready." Kirkwood paused and, getting no reply, grew restive under Stryker's inscrutable regard. "That's why I came aboard," he amended, blind to the absurdity of the statement, "to see—er—Calendar."

"Well, I'm d——d!"

Stryker managed to infuse into his tone a deal of suspicious contempt.

"Why?" insisted Kirkwood, nettled, but still uncomprehending.

"D'you mean to tell me you come off from—wherever you did come from—intendin' to board this wessel and find a party nymed Calendar?"

"Certainly I did. Why"—

"Well!" cried Mr. Stryker, rubbing his hands together with an air oppressively obsequious. "I'm sorry to hinform you you've come to the wrong shop, sir. We don't stock no Calendars. We're in the 'ardware line, we are. You might try next door, or I desay you'll find what you want at the stytioner's round the corner.

A giggle from his audience stimulated him. "If," he continued acidly, "I'd guessed you was such a fool, blimmy if I wouldn't 've let you drownd!"

Staggered, Kirwood bore his sarcastic truculence without resentment.

"Calendar," he stammered, trying to explain, "Calendar said"—

"I carn't 'elp wot Calendar said. Mebbe 'e did myke an engygement with you an' you've gone an' went an' forgot the dyte. Mebbe it's larst year's calendar you're thinkin' of. You, Johnny" (to a lout of a boy in the group of seamen)—"you run an' fetch this gentleman Whitaker's for nineteen-six. Look sharp, now!"

"But"—with an effort Kirkwood mustered up a show of dignity—"am I to understand," he said as calmly as he could, "that you deny knowing George B. Calendar and his daughter Dorothy and"—

PORT HOPE WON OUT IN LAST MINUTE OF PLAY

Defeated Local Collegiate Second Rugby Team by a 11-6 Score—Minorgan Made Fine Kicks to the Deadline—Port Hope Bucked 25 Yards for Winning Touch.

The Collegiate II. rugby team journeyed to Port Hope on Saturday, to meet the second team of the Trinity College School, and although they had the better of the argument at nearly all stages of the contest, were defeated in the last minute of play, during which time their opponents, by some fine bucking, went over the line for a touch, and made the score 11—6 in their favor. The Port Hopers had a big advantage in weight, and by using it in bucks, secured two touch downs, one of which was converted, while their visitors depended on runs and kicking to make points, and in both these departments of the game they showed much superiority. Minorgan, at centre half, excelled in kicking, and by his fine work, made five of the six points secured by this team, by booting the pigskin to the deadline. The other point was made on a rouge. Effective tackling by Ray Scott and Denison. End runs by Rankin and the great work of Capt. Perks, were features of the exhibition put up by the locals.

The score at half-time was 1—0 in favor of the visitors, and at three-quarter time 6—1 against them. On a rouge and four kicks to the deadline, the score was tied, making it 6—6, and no more scoring was done until the last minute of the game, when Port Hope made five points by getting a free kick, which was followed up and the touch was secured by some classy bucking from twenty-five yards out.

The locals' line-up was—

Flds, Perks; right, Rankin; centre, Minorgan; left, Stevenson; quarter, Wallace; scrimmage, Brooks, Laing, Lewis; outside wings, Denison, Eastwood; middle wings, Hagany, Hogan; inside wings, Ackerman, Scott.

A RING FOLLOWER WHO THINKS JEFFRIES CHANCES ARE POOR

Says it is Impossible for Him to Get Back into Old Time Form — Johnson Young Fresh and a Wonderful Fighter — A Candid Opinion.

Many pugilistic experts are just now trying to figure out whether or not Jeffries will be able to come back and beat Johnson. Some of Jeff's closest friends incline to the belief that the former boilermaker will be a mark for the negro. They say that his long absence from the ring has taken away his speed and stamina. Jeffries scouts at the idea and declares that he can whip Johnson with ease. An old New York sporting man who has known Jeff for years and who has seen him in about all of his ring battles, has this to say on the big fellow:—

"There is no man who admires Jeffries more than I do, but I feel convinced that if Jeff and Johnson get in the ring the negro will win. In the first place, Jeffries, while recognized as an unbeaten champion, is not a truly great fighter, and I'll show you the reason. When Delaney first brought him to New York I was among those who met him directly after he left the cars. It was a hot night, and Jeff had on very thin clothing. When asked to get on the scales he tipped the beam at exactly 245 pounds. He was 22 years old then and was in robust health. He was pitted against Bob Armstrong, a big negro, in a 10-round bout, at the Lenox Athletic Club, in order to show New Yorkers what he could do, and when that affair was over Jeff was fairly laughed out of town. He was as slow as cold molasses, knew nothing about ring science, and was actually outpointed by Armstrong, although the latter got the worst of the referee's decision.

"A year later Jeffries trained down to 210 pounds for the first battle with Fitzsimmons at Coney Island. It is a matter of record that Fitzsimmons received 65 per cent. of the receipts, win or lose, and that he did not train at all. The fight, to me, was a frame-up affair, for I never saw Fitzsimmons try once to land a blow on Jeff's head or jaw. Instead, Robert bored in with body blows, and was an easy mark for Jeff's heavy hooks and uppercuts. The second time they met, in California, it is an undeniable fact that Fitzsimmons was out to win. He broke Jeff's nose and hammered him on the head and jaw until Jim was literally cut to pieces. Fitz finally broke his knuckles, and after that he was punched out. But while he lasted he gave Jeff the worst beating he ever received.

"Take Jeff's fight with Sharkey at Coney Island for further proof that Jim stood flat-footed and let Sharkey do all the leading. Jeff was 30 pounds heavier than the sailor on that occasion, yet he never rushed at all. He was outpointed for 19 rounds by Sharkey, but was satisfied to counter heavily in the ribs with his right hand whenever Thomas bored in. In the long run Jeff's superior weight and strength enabled him to beat Sharkey in a terrible fight, but when the referee gave the decision to Jeffries there was a great howl, for a majority of the spectators thought that Sharkey was entitled to a draw.

"Jeff was about 40 pounds heavier than Corbett when they hooked up at Coney Island. For 20 rounds Corbett with his great leg work and science, made Jeffries look like a novice. In that length of time Jeffries could not put a glove on him, and if Corbett had stayed away to the end of the 25th round he'd have won the fight on points beyond the benefit of a doubt. But Corbett lost his head and tried to mix it up with the big fellow, who dropped him with a left hook on the point of the jaw. Jeff lacked aggressiveness in that fight and also showed that he was not a past master in the science of boxing. He simply had a great wallop and was lucky enough to land it.

"When he goes up against Johnson Jeffries will find that the negro, heavier and stronger than Corbett, Fitzsimmons, and Sharkey, is one of the most scientific men the boilermaker has ever tackled. If Johnson takes his time I believe he will wear Jim down, for he possesses a wonderful defence and is never in a hurry. As Johnson is not a rusher and wastes very few punches, how can Jeffries, with the old lack of aggressiveness, stop him quickly? I tell you that if the fight goes more than a dozen rounds Johnson will stand off and cut Jeff to pieces with his long left, and if Jeff comes boring in to close quarters and negro will knock his head off with the same terrific blow that put Ketchel out in a flash.

"Johnson is in his prime, you must remember. He has been fighting steadily ever since he became a pugilist. He may be a high liver, but he is never far out of condition. He is three years younger than Jeffries and has never been extended. Furthermore, he has shown that he knows how to box and is a cracking good hitter. Jeffries, on the other hand, has been out of the ring for five years. He retired after he whipped Munroe and gave up all kinds of exercise. I saw him in Los Angeles last winter and he was as big as a house. He was taking life easy then and indulged his palate to the limit. He had a saloon where he met convivial friends and always entertained them royally. Jeff never dreamed that he would be asked to fight again, and as a matter of fact he did not want to return to the ring at all. He has been forced into the ring by public clamor, and he will take desperate chances."

BASEBALL

More than 4,000 players in organized professional leagues.

And for every reserved player drawing salary, 10 independents getting their daily bread out of baseball.

In other words, nearly 50,000 boys and men in America drawing living salaries because they can catch, throw and hit a ball with some degree of skill.

Think of it—the national "sport" of America, employing such an army of men directly, to say nothing of the ticket sellers and ticket takers; landscape gardners and policemen, ushers, programme boys and vendors of refreshments, from the thirst-quenching pop, who draw much coin of the realm from the baseball loving public.

Some institution, that, eh?

The latest reserve lists of the two big leagues show that there are 769 players tied up with these two organizations. And to do this little bunch the 3,389 players on the reserve lists of the various minor league teams and it runs the grand total of players under the national agreement up to 4,158.

SPORTING TALK

Peterborough is in a position to extend sympathy to the Lindsay rugby team.

Both the Interprovincial and the senior O.R.F.U. championships will off in Toronto next Saturday.

Hugh McIntosh, the Australian fight promoter, has made an offer of $75,000 for the Jeffries-Johnson bout.

Now that Toronto Argonauts didn't win the championship they can secure tickets, and by closely watching the Hamilton-Ottawa game, discover the reason.

Thirty-five thousand people witnessed the Yale-Princeton game, in which the former won by 17—0.

M. Sabitino, who worked at point for the Lakefield hockey team, is in the city and will remain here for the winter. His brother Tony, who played on the forward line, also intends to come here.

All interested are reminded of the annual meeting of the Peterborough City Hockey League, which will be held in the Oriental Hotel parlors on Wednesday evening.

The rugby team which represented the Collegiate Institute in Port Hope on Saturday, against Trinity College School, challenge a team composed of the remainder of the players of the Collegiate to a game any day this week.

A hockey game that would excite much interest and be productive of much good, could be secured if the Collegiate Institutes of Peterborough and Lindsay and the Trinity College School, of Port Hope were enabled to be represented. All have good teams and satisfactory team connections could be made.

INSPECTING TELEPHONE SYSTEMS OF THIS CONTINENT

Major O'Mara, Chief Engineer of Telephone and Telegraph System of England was Here Saturday—Inspected City 'Phone Systems—Getting New Ideas.

Major O'Mara, of London, England, chief engineer of the telephone and telegraph system of London, Eng., was in the city on Saturday on a visit of inspection to the plants of the Bell and Machine telephone companies of this city. Major O'Mara is on a tour of Canada and the United States for the purpose of getting ideas from the telephone systems of Canada and the United States and introducing them into England. The method of operation in the countries of this continent are considerably in advance of those employed in the old country.

Mr. E. W. Doan, the local manager of the Bell Telephone Co., took the major to see the lift lock which he inspected with a great deal of pleasure, being a man with a wide education along mechanical and engineering lines.

He only remained in the city on Saturday, going from here to Brantford. After his inspection in Canada he will return to the States for some time. He inspected the United States system before coming to Canada.

RUGBY

Hamilton Tigers had their hands full all the time to win from the Argos on Saturday. The score was 14—4, and the Tigers never went over their opponents touch line, as the losers were always watchful and played a great game. The tackling was fast and clean, but both sides lost the ball frequently by offsides. Hamilton and Ottawa are now tied for the championship and the final game will be played next Saturday.

PARKDALE 40—PETERBOROUGH 9

Peterborough secured the first point and led at the quarter, when Campbell ran 60 yards for a touch, but during the remainder of the contest Parkdale had it on the Petes and won out easily. Parkdale and T.A.A.C. will play off for the championship next Saturday.

ST. MICHAEL'S 23—LINDSAY 3.

Capt. Simpsons vision of another championship for Lindsay faded away by St. Michael's College fourteen taking Saturday's game by a 23—3 score. The winners played superior football and won on their merits.

Somebody Lied.

Said Tyrus Cobb: "I wish to state
There's no ball player half so great
As "Honus" Wagner; he's the king
And daddy of them all—I sing
His praises and take off my hat
To "Honus" and his mighty bat."

Said "Honus" Wagner: "Hear my vow!
I want to tell you here and now—
For twenty years I'm on the job,
But never saw a man like Cobb;
In deference I raise my lid
To Tyrus Cobb, the candy kid."

For tickle me, I'll tickle you;
What isn't false must needs be true.
Far be it from me to impeach
The word of "Ty," the Georgia peach,"
Or good old "Honus," true and tried;
But, just the same, SOMEBODY lied.

EUROPE STARTLED BY AIR FLIGHTS

Berlin and, indeed, Germany as a whole, passed through a period of indescribable excitement and enthusiasm aroused by the remarkable journey, in August, of Zeppelin III., the latest creation of the world-renowned aeronaut. Simultaneously all Europe has been filled with serious, not to say anxious, thought.

The "Zeppelin III" started on its daring voyage on Friday, August 27th, at 4.30 a.m., with the young Count, Chief Engineer Duerr, Engineer Stahl, two air captains and three mechanics on board; the old Count Zeppelin was to join his airship at Bitterfeld where the refilling was contemplated.

On Sunday at 12.50 p.m. it arrived above the grounds of Tempelhof, Berlin.

Count Zeppelin had promised to describe some loops over the city so that the airship might be visible to anyone desirous of seeing it. Two hours were spent in flying to and fro over practically all the parts of Berlin and its suburbs, while everywhere in the streets the public waited to greet the aeronaut; on all the monuments and even on the roofs could be seen masses of spectators anxious to see the baloon passing. The final landing was affected on the shooting grounds of Tegel, near Berlin, where the Emperor, accompanied by his family and suite, was waiting to welcome and congratulate the daring explorer of the air.

In spite of all the accidents that happened on its course and the unavoidable delay the journey of the airship from the Swiss frontier to the German capital had been triumphant indeed. The whole city, which was full of strangers, offered an unusual sight. The doings of the Count were the subject of all the conversations and the feverish excitement was only insufficiently appeased by special editions published at short intervals by the Berlin dailies and distributed, free of charge, in the streets; while papers in other European capitals set Europe to thinking.—From "Air-ship Flight That Startled Europe," in December Technical World Magazine.

SIMULTANEOUS IDEA IN EVANGELISM DEMONSTRATED TO BE A SUPERIOR METHOD

Impression of the Convenor of the Committee on Evangelistic Services, Which Have Been Held in Eleven Congregations—What Has Been Accomplished.

The convenor of the Committee on Evangelistic services has been asked to give his impression of the meetings which have been held in eleven congregations throughout the Presbytery of Peterborough, and which have just closed. Reports from every congregation have not yet reached the convenor. Then of course it is a mere truism in all kinds of spiritual effort that results cannot always be tabulated. Indeed, the Presbyterian Evangelistic Committee, discourages the habit of counting heads at such meetings and estimating the value of evangelistic effort by the number who have signed decision cards. The results of the meetings, eternity alone will reveal.

The word revival can only be properly applied to those who are Christians. A revival is the quickening of believers into newness of life. It is the fanning into a flame of the flax which has been smoking only. The reports would all indicate that a genuine revival in this sense of the word has taken place. Christian people are taking a new delight in the preaching of the Cross. They are finding a new joy in prayer. They are experiencing a new passion for souls. All this is sure to result in a continued ingathering of the lost during the weeks and months that are to come. There have been a great number of decisions for Christ on the part of the unsaved, particularly in St. Paul's, Peterborough. But we are sure the number will greatly increase during the coming weeks and months, as pastors and their helpers continue the work begun.

The meetings in Springville (Dr. Marsh, pastor), as conducted by Rev. Mr. Craig of Quebec, have resulted in great good. Some are taking an interest in church work who have not done so for years. The exact number who have expressed a desire to live for the higher things has not been reported; but there were many who expressed such a desire. The work in this charge is in a flourishing condition. The gifts for missions in many cases are five times what they formerly were. "A religion that reaches the pocket is genuine,"—is an old saying, but it is a true one.

Rev. D. D. MacDonald is minister at Keene. He was assisted in this effort by Rev. H. J. Prichard of Galt. This congregation is one of the most conservative in the Church and has not been favorable in the past to such effort. Whatever prejudice has existed against it has been completely broken down, and there is nothing but praise for the meetings and the methods employed. One old lady remarked that it was a pity that the meetings could not go on all winter. The report of Thursday night says: "The meeting was in many ways the most remarkable of the whole campaign. The congregation was moved in a most wonderful way, many hard hearts were melted, wills were broken, and souls quickened. There were several conversions. One young lady who had faced the problem for a whole week finally surrendered this afternoon. A mother, though a member of the Church, said she saw Christ as her Saviour for the first time, and a man who had driven six miles said he had found the Saviour to-night.

The meetings in Campbellford, which commenced a week later than elsewhere are a united effort of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. The missioner is Rev. Alex. MacGillivray, of Toronto. Already a deep interest is being felt and the spirit of brotherly fellowship which has been brought about is a good thing not only for the churches, but for the community.

The special feature of the services in Omemee has been an earnest effort to reach the boys and girls with the message of the Gospel. Indeed in no field has the work for the young been neglected. Ministers and others are sufficiently well acquainted with the investigations of experts in the study of child life to know that if the life is not given a bent Godward in the tender years of youth, the chances that it will ever yield to good influences, grow less with the passing years.

Speaking of the work in Hastings the pastor says:—"The services have been a rich blessing to the entire community. It now remains for pastor and Christian workers to follow up the advantages gained." The missioner here was the Rev. A. W. Winchester, of Toronto, and his preaching was eloquent, heart searching and powerful. The interest grew night by night until the meeting became the one topic of conversation in the homes stores and other places of business. There have been many conversions here also.

Writing from Millbrook the pastor states: "Never in the history of his pastorate of fifteen years has such intense interest been manifest in the message of the Gospel as has been apparent during the meetings. One hears everywhere expressions of appreciation of the missioner, Rev. J. A. Brown, of Fergus, and many a man and woman, boy and girl, will in days to come, look back upon this week as the beginning of better things for them, and thank God that He put it into the hearts of the men of our Presbytery to plan and carry out this campaign.

The Rev. Mr. McIntosh, of Elora, has been in charge of the work at Lakefield. One evidence of the deep impression which the meetings are making upon the entire community, was seen in the action of a prominent business man who has not been able to attend the meetings often in sending a cheque to the pastor of thirty dollars, to be devoted to the work as an expression of his belief in such effort and of his thankfulness to God for it.

Your readers are already familiar with the work as carried on in the three city congregations. It is too soon to write the history of the movement, but in looking over the reports a few things may be noted.

1. The simultaneous idea in evangelism has been demonstrated to be far superior to any other method. The fact that the evangelists are prominent ministers in the Presbyterian Church, and that this movement has on it the imprimatur of the whole Church, at once disarms prejudice and leads congregations to at once throw themselves into the movement heart and soul, and not sit back in a critical spirit as is so often the case when the professional evangelist is the preacher.

2. These meetings have been a rebuke to the materialistic tendencies of our age. The fact that large congregations have assembled in eleven different centres of our Presbytery to worship God night after night for two weeks, laying aside social engagements, business engagements, and interests that are in themselves legitimate, is an eloquent testimony to the value that men set on the things of the Spirit and to the power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to interest the individual.

2. The other result of this movement might be mentioned. It has strengthened the faith of all who have come under its influence in the Bible, as the Word of God, in the Saviourhood of Jesus Christ, and in the Gospel of Christ, as a remedy sufficiently adequate, not only for the world's sin, but the world's woes. Once let the authority of Jesus Christ, in the realm of conscience, be questioned, and in the influence of the Church is immediately weakened. The tendency in many places to-day is to the old Israelitish position when "Every man did that which was right in his own eyes." Revivals are the best corrective for such a tendency. The preaching of Christ brings men to the bar of judgment. It compels men to test their lives by Christ's life. And, so because Christ has been held up not only as a Saviour from sin, but the Ideal of life, the movement is sure to be lasting in its effects on the life of the community. A Gospel that emphasizes the inseparableness of religion and ethics, that rebukes Pharisaic formalism, which proclaims the impossibility of being Christians without bringing forth the fruits of holy living, is a good thing to have preached once a week; but when such a Gospel has been preached in eleven centres every night for two weeks, influences will have been set at work which only eternity will reveal.

LYING ACROSS DEER TRACK

Sad Death of Hunter in the Woods in Haliburton County

Lindsay, Nov. 12.—Lying across the deer trail, at Pattie's Lake, in Haliburton county, in an unconscious condition suffering from the effects of a serious attack of paralysis, was the condition in which Mr. George Barnhart, of Humberton, was found at five o'clock on the evening of Wednesday. After arriving at camp a few miles further in the bush, he passed quietly away without regaining consciousness.

The deceased had left the camp during the afternoon with several other members of the party to work up a portion of the swamp lying south of their camp, and a few miles off the lake shore. The members were posted at various points, while the hounds were set to work. Mr. Barnhart was given his position on the open trail with rifle in hand, as he was considered one of the best shots in the camp, and on that trail the deer were likely to pass. After being separated from one another for some time, the party started for camp by the trail, expecting to pick up the unfortunate hunter on the way, but he was found across the trail with gun in hand, already loaded and cocked.

The party, which was composed of eleven members, passed through town on their annual hunting trip on Thursday of last week, arriving at camp the following evening, Friday. No hunting was done until Monday, when all started out. Mr. Barnhart having charge of five men, who followed the lake shore, while Mr. Dickson took the bush behind the camp. The companies followed this plan each day until Wednesday, when the deceased took his men to a small swampy portion of the bush lying south of the camp, where the unfortunate occurrence took place.

Mr. Barnhart was a blacksmith by trade at Humberton, a small village east of Port Colborne. He is survived by a wife and large family. His age is not exactly known, but it is thought by Mr. Dickson to be between 65 and 70 years.

YORK COUNTY LOAN CHEQUES

Cheques Received as Payment of First Dividend, To Those Parties Who Left Their Books With the Bank of Ottawa

The Bank of Ottawa have now received the cheques in payment of the first dividend to those parties who left their books with that bank. There are over one thousand cheques and a large number of the claims have been transferred to third parties, which entails a lot of work for the bank officials. They hope, however, to have matters in such a position that they will be able to give these cheques out to the public on Tuesday. In reference to the amount of dividend represented by the cheques, the liquidators have published a statement in the newspapers as to how the amounts were arrived at, which no doubt everybody has read. It will be impossible for the bank to explain to each depositor just how the amount represented by each cheque was arrived at, and the public should take this into consideration and not take up the time of the bank officials by asking for special explanations in regard to their individual claims. A copy of the statement made by the liquidators is hung up in a prominent place in the bank and can be read by any person who desires.

VOL. LIX., No. 115. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1909 TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

GOMPERS, MITCHELL AND MORRISON MUST GO TO PRISON ON SATURDAY

They Must be in Washington on Saturday Morning to Surrender to the Court and go to Penitentiary for Contempt of Court.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—A small piece of yellow paper, handed by a telegraph messenger to President Sam Gompers, just as the latter was raising his gavel to adjourn the American Federation of Labor's Convention yesterday afternoon, turned a listless, apathetic gathering into a tense, united mass, and provided the most spectacular ending to any meeting ever held in Massey Hall.

The telegram was from the Federation's attorneys in Washington, who through the day had been arguing before the District Court of Appeals in an endeavor to get a stay of proceedings, so that President Gompers, Vice-President John Mitchell, and Secretary Frank Morrison might appeal to the Federal Court from the sentences of imprisonment passed on them by the District Court of Columbia. It read: "Darlington agreed to fifteen days' extension, but court refused any extension. The mandate of the court goes down on Saturday morning."

This means that on Saturday morning the three officers of the Federation must surrender to the court and commence their sentences or forfeit their bail of $12,000. The sentence on Gompers is twelve months, Mitchell nine months, and Morrison six months.

The reading of the telegram drew the convention up in an instant. It was only Gompers' quizzical look on face and hearty laughter as he caught sight of Morrison's serious aspect only prevented a demonstration. Instead the convention joined in the laughter, and then applauded "old Sam" for his grit. But the earnest faces and the tense conversations of the men who crowded round the three convicted leaders spoke of the feelings the telegram had aroused.

Must Go to Jail.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 16.—The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia yesterday, denied an application made by counsel for Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, sentenced to jail for contempt, for a stay in the issuance of the mandate to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia until Jan. 2, 1910. Unless notice of an appeal is given before next Friday night, the mandate will be handed down next Saturday.

Attorney J. H. Ralston urged the engagement of his associate, Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, as a reason for the desired postponement.

Attorney J. J. Darlington, for the Bucks' Stove & Range Co., whose injunction suit resulted in the contempt sentence, opposed the length of stay asked. He stated that counsel had more than seven months to determine their action in event of adverse decision.

He pointed out that the advices which reach him shew that the labor people had made no attempt to obey the injunction prohibiting the enforcement of a boycott of the Bucks' Company, and were still violating it.

PREMIER LAURIER SAYS THAT LOCAL NAVY IS SOLUTION

In Epoch-Making Debate in House of Commons, Premier Declares That a United Empire Demands That Action be Taken at Once.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Yesterday may be said to mark an epoch in Canadian history. While the naval defence resolution of last session committed Parliament to the principle of participation with Great Britain in the duty of defence of the Empire, yesterday saw the principle thoroughly established, and ready for embodiment.

It seems certain that both sides of Parliament will come to an agreement upon a national naval defence policy, and that the definite part of the scheme will be the establishment of the beginning of a Canadian navy, but there was also the strongly expressed desire that if Great Britain required immediate assistance, there should be a generous grant of money from the Canadian exchequer, pending the day when Canada can put a fleet upon the waters.

The speech-making was notable, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's deliverance was rare in the annals of Canadian oratory, His patriotism was fervent and he vouched for the chivalry of Quebec.

W. F. Maclean (S. York) dealt with many of the technical points in this momentous question.

These remarkable speeches were delivered during the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Mr. Ecrement of Berthier proposed the reply to the address in French. After confessing how difficult and delicate was the question of naval defence, he said: "Are we going to refuse to obey the call to the young nations to assert their existence? Surely not, and this is the proud national sentiment which animated our statesmen in putting aside the proposals of those who would prefer a direct contribution to the Imperial marine and to adopt a purely Canadian policy."

Mr. Kyte of Richmond, N.S., seconded the address. Harking back to the naval defence resolution, which he had subscribed to last year, he said he was then somewhat in a haze as to what the exact policy should be, but he found that Lord Charles Beresford had pronounced that the best way for the Dominions to take part in Imperial defence was to make plans for defending themselves. He was therefore pleased to see that the Government had made a practical move. A cash contribution savored of feudalism.

Mr. Borden said he did not propose to discuss naval defence until the Government had signified its policy. Some Liberal journalists had said that he was entirely in favor of the Government proposals. If they argued that he approved of the statements of certain Cabinet Ministers, they were entirely wrong. He neither approved or disapproved. Let the Government bring down its message.

Mr. Borden concluded with a reference to the appointment of Hon. Mackenzie King as Minister of Labor. The Premier had gone outside the House for his Minister.

The Premier observed that Mr. Borden did not discuss the question of naval defence. There was no secrecy regarding their proposals, as Mr. Monk had stated, and the papers would be brought down on Wednesday of this week. He noticed on the Opposition side they were not a happy family, but that the demon of discord was among them. The policy of the resolution of last year was clear-cut. Parliament stood committed to the policy of organizing a Canadian naval service to assist in maintaining the supremacy of Great Britain. The ink of the resolution passed last session, Sir Wilfrid said, had hardly become dry when there were certain whisperings, which soon became murmurings, in the Opposition rank by members who thought it had not gone far enough. Up to the present time, however, the leaders of the Opposition had stood manfully by their guns.

"Australia," said Sir Wilfrid, "has come to what I call the Canadian plan of having a fleet of her own."

Sir Wilfrid then turned his attention to those who do not favor action of any sort. In describing them he would borrow a word from the American's language. They were the "stand pat party and the chief of that party was the member for Jacques Cartier, F. D. Monk.

Mr. Monk asked if Sir Wilfrid thought it quite fair to discuss the naval question in the House while still keeping the papers dealing with the matter from the House.

Sir Wilfrid said he was not discussing papers not yet brought down, but the resolution passed by Parliament.

"I remember a time," said Sir Wilfrid, "when we had no railways, when we had no public schools. But at the present time we have railways and we have school systems. And if now we have to organise a naval force, it is because we are growing as a nation. It is the penalty of becoming a nation."

"But I am happy to say that, insofar as I can see at all events—and in this matter I express my own opinion—in the present instance there is no clashing of interests between Canada and the Mother Country. Whatever is done in this matter for the benefit of the Mother Country will likewise benefit Canada. Let me say also that if we have duties to perform as Canadians, we have also duties to perform as British subjects. We have rights and privileges and responsibilities as Canadians. We have also rights and privileges and responsibilities as British subjects. But my hon. friend in discussing this subject ignored altogether this side of it. He discussed it from the Canadian standpoint alone. He should have gone farther and discussed from the point of view of our status as British subjects."

"I have to make this remark to the member for Jacques Cartier, that wherever there are rights and privileges, likewise duties and responsibilities, and so long as we enjoy the rights and privileges of British citizenship, so long we must, we shall, we will assume and accept all the responsibilities that appertain to that position. These are sentiments with which we should approach the question. I say 'we.' What do I mean? I mean Canadians of all origins, of all races and of all nationalities, and Canadians from the east and from the west. I mean Canadians—above all—of the Province of Quebec, who claim the honor of being descended from a race which has always stood foremost in chivalry, in honor, and in ideality."

W. F. Maclean (S. York) followed, with an argument for direct contribution, and after him Hon. George E. Foster, who cautioned the Government regarding the French treaty until they had seen what course regarding Canada the United States would adopt. In referring to the naval policy, he suggested that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was endeavoring to create a rupture in the Conservative party.

Other speakers were Alex. Haggart, Winnipeg; Dr. T. S. Sproule and E. N. Lewis (West Huron).

THE MINE IS ABLAZE AGAIN

All Hope of Saving Survivors is at an End—Buried Under Tons of Rock.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 16.—The three hundred or more miners who are entombed in the St. Paul coal mine by last Saturday's fire are dead. Some of the bodies lie buried beneath thousands of tons of earth which caved in upon them, and it is doubtful whether many of the bodies can ever be recovered.

This was the opinion expressed last night when rescue work was temporarily abandoned. Fans employed in an effort to carry fresh air and life down to the imprisoned men served only to enliven the embers which sprang into flame. Soon the heat and smoke became so dense that it was necessary again to seal the mouth of the hoisting shaft.

Rescuers descended four times into the hoisting shaft yesterday; on one occasion, 300 feet to its bottom. Then groping their way with electric lamps and kept alive by oxygen carried with them, they penetrated 150 feet into the bottom of the gallery. But none of the miners, dead or alive, were found.

As a result of the disaster there are in this town of only a few hundred inhabitants at least 1,000 orphans and 200 widows. The Knights of Pythias Lodge, the most important organization in town, had a membership of 75 last week. To-day there are only six members; the rest are in the mine.

The United Mine Workers executive have ordered $5,000 to be contributed to the relief fund at once.

(LATER.)

Special to the Review.

Cherry, Ills., Nov. 16.—With fire still raging in the St. Paul mine, the tomb of 310 men, every shaft sealed to smothewr the flames, the attention of the rescurers and officials was to-day turned to the living widows and orphans. Their plight is desperate. Some of the women stricken by the shock are not expected to recover. Physicians and nurses are needed. A reaction from the dazed horror of the first days of grief swept Cherry to-day, and the population is on the verge of an outbreak. Every trustworthy man has been sworn in as a special deputy sheriffs. Riots are feared.

THIS FATHER IS INHUMAN

Prince Arthur, Sask., Nov. 16.—Charged with neglecting and refusing to supply medical attention to his 13-year-old daughter, Florence, Frank Cherry, one of the wealthiest farmers in the district, has been arrested by his own son.

Three weeks ago the girl had her leg broken in a runaway accident and since that time the bone has been protruding several inches. The son sent for a doctor, and it is said the father refused to allow the physician to dress the wound.

King Manuel at Windsor.

London, Nov. 16.—King Manuel of Portugal, who is paying his first visit to England since his accession to the throne, arrived in Portsmouth on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert yesterday. He was met by the Prince of Wales, representing King Edward, and welcomed by an imposing naval display. Soon after his arrival the party proceeded by train to Windsor. REPORT OF THE WATERWAYS COMMISSION

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—The annual report of the Waterways Commission will propose that instead of the suggested division of 40,000 cubic feet per second at Niagara Falls, the agreement shall be so modified as to allow of an equal division of 20,000 cubic feet to each side.

New charts to define the boundary of the waters on the St. Lawrence, Detroit and St. Clair Rivers are recommended. The report will recommend that the Cedar Rapids Co. on the Soulanges Canal shall have the right to divert 56,000 cubic feet from the St. Lawrence. A scheme is under consideration to regulate the level of Lake Erie by a series of weirs and sluices. The commission will advise that Canada consent to the dredging by the United States at Amherstburg, because of the benefit to navigation.

It is also understood that the investigations of the commission have shown that a larger portion of the water of the horseshoe falls than was previously supposed goes to the American side.

THE DEATH OF A REIL HENCHMAN

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Ambroso Lepine, one of the leading figures in the rebellion of 1869, died Saturday, on his son's farm near St. Norbert. Lepine was born in the vicinity of St. Norbert in 1844, and was a personal friend of Louis Riel. When the rebellion broke out Lepine was Riel's right-hand man, and it was he who captured Thomas Scott, who was afterwards murdered outside the pallisade of old Fort Garry. At the same time Scott was taken Lepine made prisoners of J. H. Ashdown, ex-Mayor of Winnipeg; Malcolm McLeod, George Parker, Alex. Parker, W. A. Farmer and several other old-timers who are still alive.

At the close of the rebellion a reward was offered for the capture of Lepine and a price put on his head, but he managed to get away to Montana before being taken by the authorities. After living in exile in that state for a number of years he secured a pardon through the influence of the late Archbishop Tache. He then returned to St. Norbert and has lived here in retirement with his family ever since. Lepine was a French half-breed, and was one of those who believe that Louis Riel is ranching in Wyoming, and will one day return to Manitoba to lead his followers as he did in 1869 and 1885.

At the trial judgment was given for plaintiff for $20.80 for damages and an injunction restraining further manufacture by defendants during currency of patent, with costs. THE NAVY QUESTION

Mr. W. J. Neilson, of 276 Lisgar st., Toronto, writes us for some pointers for a debate on the Navy Question. We can think of nothing in favor of the mooted policy. An independent Canadian navy is the beginning of independence. This is admitted. It is the beginning of expense and graft, to no end. That ought to be enough to condemn it to immediate death. The secrecy of the proceedings of the Naval conference at London was well taken. It will take a deal of mystery to work off Sir Wilfrid's naval policy.

Meanwhile contractors continue to fatten and the farmer to starve.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The mild weather has made the "spoils of the chase" worthy of their name.

Prof. McCurdy's severe arraignment of the Canadian navy idea has been followed by Prof. J. G. Hume's attack on the Laurier policy.

The Auditor-General has already begun the battle with graft on the government section of the G.T.P. It's going to be an awful job for Canada.

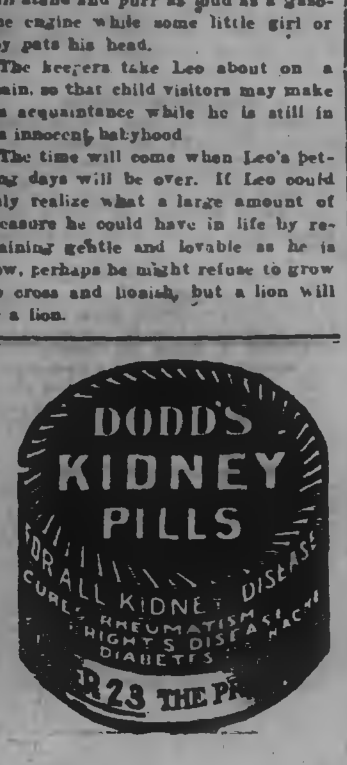
Senator Edwards and Senator Belcourt head rival Liberal factions on the navy question, while other Liberals are following the lead of dissentient Conservatives. The navy question is likely to prove a bone of contention.

A little baby lion is the most popular in the London Zoo these days. It's only six months old, and the zoo officials say it is the most sweet-tempered and delightful lion cub they have ever had.

Its name is Leo, and there is nothing that Leo likes better than to be petted by the children. The awkward little baby lion, whose paws and legs are almost as large as his baby body, will stand and purr as loud as a gasoline engine while some little girl or boy pats his head.

The keepers take Leo about on a chain, so that child visitors may make his acquaintance while he is still in his innocent babyhood

The time will come when Leo's petting days will be over. If Leo could only realize what a large amount of pleasure he could have in life by remaining gentle and lovable as he is now, perhaps he might refuse to grow up cross and lionish, but a lion will be a lion.



A GREAT LABOR MEETING

From the Globe.

> "The time has come when the saloon and the labor movement must be divorced."

This quotation from the address by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, was used with telling significance at the mass meeting of workingmen in Massey Hall on Sunday afternoon, when prominent labor leaders met to deliver addresses upon "The Saloon and the Labor Movement."

It was an unusual meeting. Unusual for its numbers, for four thousand men were there; unusual in the nature of the audience, and especially unusual in the nature of its platform. Not one of the prominent speakers was a temperance agitator, in the ordinary sense. All of them were men who have achieved distinction in the labor movement. Even the chairman, Rev. Chas. T. Stelzle, head of the Department of Labor in the Presbyterian Church, had to confess that he could not remember having made a temperance speech before.

SOME OF THE SPEAKERS.

There was John Mitchell, who leaped into fame as the leader of the United Mine Workers in their great strike seven years ago; Tom L. Lewis, the man who succeeded Mitchell when the latter resigned his place of leadership; John B. Lennon, treasurer of the A.F. of L., who, in his twenty years of office, has handled over $2,000,000 of the Federation's funds, and our own James Simpson. All of them, speaking from the standpoint of labor representatives, gave testimony that the saloon is the worst enemy the trades union movement has to contend against.

FATHER WAS A BREWER

Rev. Chas. Stelzle, who acted as chairman, gave the meeting its first thrill when he calmly announced in opening that he was well qualified to speak about the liquor traffic. His father had been a brewer, and his brothers were saloonkeepers, he said, and he had no sympathy with those men and those journals who pictured saloonkeepers as low-browed brutes. They were a very human class and have usually wholesome aspirations like any other class of men. Though not a prohibitionist, he would be glad if he could put the liquor traffic out of business. Local option was but a practical application of the principle of the referendum, which was one of the democratic principles for which labor was contending. The labor man who protest against local option stultifies himself. The speaker argued that it was nonsense for any man to talk about his liberty to do as he liked. A man could not even spend his money as he liked. The community insisted that a man must first provide for his wife and family.

MUST DIVORCE SALOON AND LABOR.

"The time has now come when the saloon and the labor movement must be divorced," he said, and added, "That this is the official statement of the American Federation of Labor." He quoted from three reports of President Gompers, urging unions to build labor temples, and to avoid meeting where liquor was obtainable. The day was fast coming when every labor leader would have to be a total abstainer. Even the Bartenders' Union realized the value of temperance and had started a total abstinence society. The English workingmen insisted that all their Parliamentary representatives must be abstainers. They wanted them to stand in their places in the House with clear brains, and some day every labor organisation in America would make the same demand of their leaders

JOHN MITCHELL'S ADDRESS.

"Poverty has driven many a strong man to drink, and drink has driven many a strong man to poverty," said John Mitchell, in arguing that the liquor traffic was the enemy of trades unionism. "I am not at all impressed with the argument that if you close down the liquor traffic you bring about a calamity. Rather the contrary. There is a readjustment of society. The man who does not study the labor movement does not distinguish between idleness and leisure. The idle man wants to work. Leisure is the time spent by a man away from his work at his home or in recreation. One is a voluntary act; the other is not. The idle man is the one who is open to temptations to drink, not the man who is occupied with recreation.

GOOD CONDITIONS LESSEN DRINKING

"We men of the mining industries have demonstrated that higher wages and shorter hours conduce to temperance in everything that the word implies. A man who comes from his work fagged in brain and body is much more likely to seek stimulants than the man who leaves off work still feeling strong in mind and body. The latter wants to spend his time and money with his wife and family. I am willing to assert that when all men work but eight hours a day and receive for it a fair wage there will be less liquor drunk in the world than there is to-day. I say this, realizing that nothing has done more to bring misery upon innocent women and children than the money spent in drink.

A WORKINGMAN'S DUTY

"No man has a right to spend a cent upon himself until he has first provided for his family. The average workingman does not yet earn enough to give his family all the comforts they deserve. He has no money to spend on drink without robbing his family. I believe that in the proportion that the labor movement grows so will the temperance movement grow. The labor movement was not formed merely for the purpose of getting more wages and shorter hours. If that was all I would not consider it worth while to devote my life to it. The purpose of the labor movement is to secure a better standard of living and to make the lives of men, women and children happier and brighter."

LOWERS STANDARD OF LIVING

Mr. John B. Lennon asked: "What is the effect of the liquor traffic on the standard of living of the people? Is there any influence gone out from the saloon that has helped to make men and women better?" And answered; "The labor movement is essentially a moral movement. It stands for equal opportunity for men and women, though it believes that it should be made more easily possible for women to become homemakers." Who could deny that the liquor traffic was driving women to work in factories, in workshops and at washtubs who ought not to be there? The trades union movement was opposed to child labor, yet who could deny that the liquor traffic was driving into industrial life boys and girls who should be in the school or on the playgrounds? The liquor traffic tended to decrease wages never to increase them. The use of alcohol made workmen less skillful and drove men to lower scales of employment and reward. Every cent spent in the liquor business was wasted. It brought no social benefit and no moral uplift.

MR. LENNON DEFIES CRITICS

"I have been criticised for my fight against the saloon," said Mr. Lennon, "but I give notice here and now that I will fight the traffic as long as there is a saloon left. There are too many people in this world who are afraid to tackle the saloon. Too many men and women are going down the stream to degradation for me to keep silent. To the trades unionist there is no redeeming feature in the saloon. Go anywhere where its influence is felt and you see the demoralisation it brings. We are fighting for social well-being, civic benefits, and moral uplift. Never a foul plot is organised to injure public rights and social well-being but the saloon is used for the job. They never use the trade unions or the Ministerial Association, which is only a trade union under another name. The saloon is the enemy of the people for whom we work."

WHAT THE MINE WORKERS THINK

"If you want to know where the miners of America stand upon the temperance question I'll tell you," said President Tom L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers. "In our constitution we have a clause which forbids any member to sell intoxicants even at a picnic. That's what we think of the liquor traffic.

"Some people say that the saloon is a necessary evil. I don't believe in that kind of doctrine. I don't believe that legislation alone will eradicate the traffic. Nothing but the spread of education will accomplish that. We have laws against crime, but they do not prevent the criminal. When we raise the standard of living and education we will do a great deal to kill the traffic. We believe that the trades unions are doing more for the cause of temperance than any other institution in the world, and we can produce the facts. The Christian churches are established for the purpose of replacing paganism with Christianity; the trades union movement is organised to educate the people, to drive out ignorance and elevate the toilers of our land. Because the liquor traffic tends to enslave the people, to make them satisfied with improper conditions and keeps them ignorant, the leaders of the trades union movement are called on to fight the saloon."

NO BAR IN LABOR TEMPLE

Mr. Jas. Simpson, who followed, said that the labor leaders of Toronto were alive to the menace which the saloon was to the progress of the workingman. When the Toronto Labor Temple was founded a clause was put in its constitution prohibiting intoxicating liquor from the premises.

During the afternoon the Doric Male Quartette, Mr. Donald McGregor and the Alexander Chorus rendered selections which were much appreciated.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, receipts for the week ending Nov 13 were 3425 cattle, 2525 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 675 calves, while the supply for local consumption this morning was 1400 cattle, 1700 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 250 calves. The cattle supply this morning was much smaller than a week ago, with a continued slow demand, as butchers generally have laid in larger supplies than usual on account of the low prices ruling and stocks of dressed beef in cold storage are fairly large, while the weather is unfavorable for keeping stock. This had a tendency to check any advance in prices, except for a few really choice steers, which sold at 5c to 5¼c. The bulk of the trading was done at 4¼c to 4¾c, good, at 4c to 4¼c; fair, at 3½c to 3¾c; medium, at 3c to 3¼c; good bulls, at 3¼c to 3¾c; canning bulls, at 2¼c to 2c, and cows, at 1¾c to 1¾c per lb.

Cable advices from Liverpool were steady, with prices unchanged from a week ago, but trade very slow; in spite of good weather conditions

Supplies of sheep and lambs were fair and good for cold storage purposes, and prices show no change. Sheep brought 3¾c to 3¾c and lambs 5¼c to 5¾c per lb. The trade in calves was fairly active and sales were made at from $3 to $12 each.

WHY CANADA WAS INDUCED TO BEGIN THE BUILDING OF A BIG AND EXPENSIVE NAVY

The following remarks by the famous J. J. Hill ought to appeal to the Canadian people as the most sane, sensible and well-reasoned deliverance perhaps yet published on the present attempt to foist further extravagant expenditure upon the Canadian taxpayer and toiler:—

"If I could have my way, I should build a couple of war-ships a year less. Perhaps one would do. I would take that $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year and start at least 1,000 agricultural schools in the United States at $5,000 a year each, in the shape of model farms. This model farm would be simply a tract of land conforming in size, soil treatment, crop selection and rotation, and methods of cultivation to modern agricultural methods. Its purpose should be to furnish to all its neighborhood a working model for common instruction. Cultivating perhaps, from forty to fifty acres, it could exhibit on that area the advantages of thorough tillage which the small farm makes possible, of seed specially chosen and tested by experiment at agricultural college farms; of proper fertilization, stock-raising, alternation of crops, and the whole scientific and improved system of cultivation, seeding, harvesting, and marketing. The farmers of a county could see, must see as they passed its borders how their daily labors might bring increased and improved results. The example could not fail to impress itself upon an industry becoming each year more conscious of its defects and its needs. As fast as it was followed, it would improve farm conditions, make this a form of enterprise more attractive to the young and the intelligent, and add enormously to the volume of farm products which constitutes our enduring national wealth.

"Results reached by this arrangement would have the conclusiveness of a demonstration in science. Every crop that could be or ought to be raised should be experimented with, not at some distant spot seldom visited, but right at home on the farm. I would bring the model farm into every agricultural county; and if any farmer was in doubt, he could visit it, see with his own eyes and find out what he ought to have done and what he could do next time. It would do for the farming population what the technical school does for the intending artisan, and the schools of special training for those who enter the profession. Side by side with the common school it would work for intelligence for progress, for the welfare of the country in a moral as well as a material aspect."

THE PLAY OR THE PLAYER?

Another death is reported as a result of injuries received during the progress of a football game, and this, with former fatalities, has given rise to much discussion, and the gridiron game is being criticized for the brutality which is displayed. Some are of the opinion that the playing rules should be changed, while others go further and loudly cry for the abolishment of the game altogether, declaring that it is not good, clean sport but rather a contest for barbarians who delight in pulling each other to pieces! But is it? Compare it with the baseball game and statistics will show you that more players have been killed on the diamond than on the gridiron, to say nothing of the large number who have been crippled for life. Yet hundreds of thousands patronize this game every year, and if somebody is killed or badly injured by the bullet-like speed of the ball, it is only remarked on, as an unfortunate accident. It is the same in regard to many other games, where it is very easy to "lay out" an opponent—if a player so desires and this is where the root of the whole trouble originates. If the players who are battling for the supremacy, display the proper spirit the attacks on the football game would cease, but this will never come to pass until the spectators to whom much of the blame for rough work should be attached show a better feeling or adopt a different attitude than prevails to-day.

Labor Men Stand Ready.

Philadelphia, Nov 16.—Plans for a general strike by wage-workers throughout the country for a period of two weeks, beginning on the day the officers of the American Federation of Labor are imprisoned for contempt of court were inaugurated here yesterday at a meeting of the Central Labor Union.

The "black sheep of the flock" is proverbial. Every breeder knows that the black lamb is very liable to appear in every spring's lamb crop. He is not sorry if the little black fellow does not appear—in fact, he is rather glad, for the black one is a blot on the uniformity which every good breeder is proud to show in his bunch of lambs. Then, too, the wool buyer often insists upon knocking off something on the black fleece. The fact is, however that black wool sells at a premium right now. The rancher who has enough black fleeces to fill a sack always sorts them and gets the advantage of the higher price for them.

E. R. Wood Gives Interview on Big Steel-Coal Consolidation

Mr. E. R. Wood, the former Peterboroughman, who, by his successful consolidation of Dominion Steel and Dominion Coal has made himself a leading, if not an unique figure in Canadian finance, disposed this morning of a suspicion that any but Canadian interests were concerned.

DETERMINE RELATIVE BASIS.

"What is left for us to do now," said Mr. Wood this morning, "is to proceed to discover how many want to sell and how many want to keep their shares. After that a joint committee of the two companies will meet to determine what is a fair relative basis on which to bring these two companies together, based on the value of their assets and earning power. Everybody in both companies feels that it is greatly to the advantage of both companies to bring the consolidation about because it does away with the possibility of ever repeating the old trouble between them.

CONTRACT FOR 99 YEARS.

"The contract between them is for ninety-nine years, but the question of the price to be paid for coal is revisable every five years.

"There are two matters that must be settled now. One is the disputed account of the Steel Company's claim under the old litigation, about $1,200,000. Then there is the settlement of the coal under the contract for the next five years. The former litigation does not settle that. Two firms of chartered accountants, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., of New York, for the coal company, and Price, Waterhouse Co. for the steel company, will take these matters in hand.

PRACTICAL WISDOM.

"The practical wisdom of bringing about this consolidation is seen right there. These matters will be settled, whereas, without it, there would be a possibility of 24 months more of litigation.

PREPARE TO KEEP SHARES.

"Any people to whom I have spoken about their coal holdings say they prefer to keep their shares, knowing that the terms finally will be fair as to be settled by the joint committee, one from the Steel and one from the Coal Company. Of course it is optional with each shareholder whether he comes into the consolidation or not—you can't force them. You remember that $2,750,000 was paid on account by the Coal to the Steel Company following the judgment of the courts of the Steel claim. There is still $1,200,000 outstanding."

NO ONE BUT CANUCKS.

"Are there any but Canadian interests behind the consolidation?"

"No, none at all. You may say the directors of both companies, with Sir Henry Pellatt, Senator Cox and Mr. Aitken are the ones that did the financing, so to term it."

A SCIENTIFIC WONDER

The Secret of a Famous Healing Balm

The re-discovery of a secret that has lain hidden in the dust of 20 centuries is an event full of fascinating interest, and the story of Zam-Buk, the world-famed first-aid and skin-cure will always enlist attention. Zam-Buk is the virtual descendant of those wonderful and mysterious herbal balms by the use of which the manly athletes of ancient Greece and the stalwart gladiators of Rome ensured the healthiness and ready-healing of their skin.

Many are the attempts that were made to produce a perfect balm for the skin, but only in Zam-Buk has the ideal been realised. Since its discovery Zam-Buk has been welcomed in mansion and cottage, and the peoples of two hemispheres realised that they have been placed in possession of an absolutely unique cure for skin complaints.

The reasons for this triumph of science are simple and few. Taking a lesson from the Ancients, the proprietors of Zam-Buk first of all wisely decided that the ideal balm must be purely herbal and contain not the slightest trace of rancid animal fats or poisonous minerals. Thus Zam-Buk is made solely from rich and pure essences obtained from certain rare medicinal herbs. These juices and extracts are prepared and refined by ingenious scientific processes and then so skilfully blended that a unique, effective, and yet perfectly natural preparation for dispelling skin-disease is secured.

Zam-Buk has an affinity for the human skin such as no ordinary ointment or liniment can possibly possess. Besides soothing pain and allaying irritation, it possesses unique antiseptic and germicidal qualities which virtually chase disease germs out of their hiding-places in the skin tissues; at the same time it purifies the pores and invigorates the natural functions of the skin in a way that no other preparation can.

Zam-Buk solves in a perfect manner the problem of always having handy at home or at one's work an ever-ready and reliable first-aid for cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, lacerations, scratches, etc. Zam-Buk is without equal for eczema, ulcers, piles, bad leg, ringworm, scalp sores, festering sores, sprains, stiffness, poisoned wounds of all kinds, face sores, chafing, chapped hands, cold-sores, frost-bites, sore feet, diseased ankles, and all itching, irritation, and inflamation.

Zam-Buk is a daily need in every household and is sold by all druggists and stores at 50 cents a box. Refuse harmful and dangerous substitutes sometimes "pushed" as being "just as good."

SCHOOL INSPECTOR SENDS IN HIS RESIGNATION

Lindsay, Nov. 15.—The resignation of Mr. J. H. Knight, who for the past thirty-eight years has been inspector of schools for East Victoria, was received by the county clerk to-day.

Mr. Knight has been in poor health for some time past, and as result has been prevented from fulfilling the duties of his office which he has capably performed for a great many years.

LARGE INCREASE IN CRIME

Ottawa, November 15.—Statistics of the penitentiaries of the Dominion for the year ending March 21, 1909, are included in the blue book of the Department of Justice, just issued. The inspectors report an average daily penitentiary "population" during the year of 1625, an increase of 14.6 per cent. over 1908. The British Columbia penitentiary shows the greatest increase, 34 per cent.; St. Vincent de Paul comes next with an increase of 27 per cent., and Manitoba third with 20 per cent. The increase in Kingston was about 17 per cent. It is noted that a larger proportion of convicts is received from the urban than from the rural districts.

At the close of the year there were 570 convicts in Kingston, 510 in St. Vincent de Paul, 240 in Dorchester, N.B., 144 in Manitoba, 204 in British Columbia, and 91 in Alberta, a total of 1765. Of them, 1096 were Canadian born, 199 English, 54 Scotch, 54 Irish and 23 "other British countries." Of 409 convicts of foreign birth, 181 were United States citizens and 71 Italians. There were 66 life convicts in the penitentiaries, half of whom are in Kingston. Ten per cent. of the convicts are under 20 years of age, 15 per cent. are unable to read or write, 17 per cent. have been total abstainers, and 40 per cent. have been intemperate.

THIS ATHLETE OF FIFTY-TWO YEARS

Says He Owes His Wonderful Energy to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Was Tortured With Rheumatism and a Cripple Till the Great Kidney Remedy Cured Him

Six Nations, Ont., Nov. 15.—(Special)—Fifty-two years of age, but still young enough to captain the lacrosse team, John Silversmith, of this place, can truly be looked on as a wonderful athlete. One would naturally think he was all his life a healthy man. But it was far otherwise, and he unhesitatingly states that his wonderful energy and vitality are due to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I suffered from Rheumatism for over seven years," Mr. Silversmith says in telling his story, "and at finally made a complete cripple of me. My back was bent nearly double, and when I tried to walk I had to use crutches. Latterly I could not get around at all and I suffered excruciating pain.

"Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills gave me relief; sixteen boxes cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Rheumatism because Rheumatism is cured by disordered Kidneys and Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure disordered Kidneys.

KNOW LATEST DANCE? IT IS THE AERONETTE

Paris, Nov. 15.—If you would be in the fashion and set the hearts of up-to-date young men aflame with your accomplishments in the art of tripping it on light fantastic tribees, you will at all costs have to learn how to tread the mystic maze and glide swiftly through the giddy convulsions of the new dance called the "aeronette." They say it is divine in as far as it has come down to earth from the skies, the airflyers having suggested this newest form of social gyrating to the daughters of men. And the lords of the Academy of Dancing of Paris have accorded the new art the sigillum of their approval. They wish to be up to date and follow the movement. With aeroplanes now an accomplished fact, we must have the aeroplane galop, and the aeroplane two-step. The figures will be highly fanciful, we are assured: 1. The pairs will move, as in all round dances, in two sharply accentuated measures, to imitate the rolling of the aeroplane. 2. The aeroplane leaves the surface of the ground, to imitate which the dancers raise their elbows as if they were flying. 3. The aeroplane glides through space, whereupon the arms are slightly swung up and down, to indicate the swinging motion of the flying machine steadying itself in the upper atmosphere. 4. The aeroplane lands, and the dancers, after skipping along with one foot before the other, suddenly come to a stop in that position and bow their heads slightly.

SENTENCED TO BE SHOT

Sad Fate of an Unfortunate Whops Old and Deaf-Has Been Living on Charity

The case of a homeless dog, which is old and deaf, and of little use in this world, occupied the attention of the Police Court this morning, and it was decided that the unfortunate animal should be shot.

A witness named Campbell stated that he had found the dog and had taken it to his home, where it was made as comfortable as possible. He didn't wish to keep the dog as it was of no use.

Another witness said the dog had been staying at his house, but when he moved awway recently it haad not been taken. He did not know who the owner was and had been unable to secure any information by advertising.

It was at first understood by the Court to be a case of "cruelty to animals" but the explanation of the two witnesses was satisfactory, and the dog is doomed to die.

Dillon Must Hang.

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—John Dillon, alias James Smith, will be hanged Friday next at Montreal.

On April 6, 1908, Dillon, who was book agent in Montreal, barricaded himself in a house, opened fire on constables who attempted his capture, and killed Constable Shea. He himself was wounded.

A petition for commutation of sentence of death on the plea of insanity has been refused by the Governor-in-Council.

Shot For a Moose.

Kenora, Nov. 15.—While out moose hunting near here, Duncan French, a farmer, was mistaken for a moose by C. E. Hanon, and shot through the breast. The bullet came from a 32 rifle, and tore a terrible wound through French's breast and lung. Recovery is considered hopeless. The two men were in a thick bush at the time and were only ninety feet apart.

Daring Safe Cracking.

New York, Nov. 15.—Within range of the brilliant lights of Broadway, expert cracksmen blew open the safe of a shoe company's store some time early yesterday, and got away with $4,000 in cash.

In the store itself the lights were all on, one brilliant cluster directly over the safe, which was within four feet of the street window.

Indian Business Settled.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 15.—Promptitude in despatching police reinforcements, together with misapprehension on the part of the numbers of the newcomers, has temporarily, at least, ended the tense situation at Hazelton.

The ringleaders among the Kispiox chiefs were tried Saturday for rioting and appropriating Government supplies and sentenced to from one to three months, with hard labor. They are to be sent down the river in canoes at once. Other serious charges were diplomatically abandoned. Efforts will be made to apprehend the agitators now exciting the villages and preaching rebellion.

Hunting Fatality.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 15.—Yesterday, near Goldstream, Edward Allen, a young druggist, was shot in the head while hunting, the charge blinding him and entering the brain. The injury is fatal. There is no clue as yet to the man who fired.

Gale In Germnay.

Berlin, Germany, Nov. 15.—Thirty persons were seriously hurt Saturday by a storm which swept over the city. Telegraph and telephone wires were broken, hundreds of trees were uprooted, and much damage done by flood.

Congestion at Soo Locks.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 15.—By the time the Poe Lock at the American canal is in commission again in about a week's time, the congestion at the Canadian Lock will be unprecedented. There are fifty-five boats now at the head of the Canadian Lock waiting their turn to lock through. Boats are suffering a delay of from 15 to 20 hours, awaiting their locking.

New Railway for Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Nov. 15.—A. S. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, is quoted as saying that an extension to Winnipeg from Fargo, N.D., will be begun next spring, cutting midway between the Casselton branch and the main line into Grand Forks, from there west to Larimore and from there direct north to Winnipeg.

Women and Children Leave.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 15.—Telegrams from Hazelton to Premier McBride say that women and children are being sent down the Skeena to Prince Rupert.

The Indians volunteer the assurance that outgoing canoes will not be molested.

Leaves No Streaks

With ordinary soap you wash—then spend nine-tenths of your time rubbing and polishing—that is if you are extra particular and can take the time.

When you wash your windows, for instance, little streaks of "dirt" seem so hard to get off—it's really the soap—not the dirt—that's the trouble. With Taylor's Borax Soap you wash and rinse, dry once and your glassware sparkles like crystal.

It's all in the borax—the way Taylor blends it in

Taylor's Borax Soap

The soap removes the grease—the borax removes the soap—and there you are!

It's fine for woolens, too. It positively will not shrink them. It brings them out of the wash as soft and fresh as new. Thousands of Canadian women are using Taylor's Borax Soap today. Try a cake at once and know the reasons why.

Good Glasses are worth all you pay for them.

The constant increase in eye defects is partly due to improperly fitted glasses. There is no guess work with us, we give your eyes a thorough examination, and advise glasses only when absolutely necessary.

We are not transient, but permanent residents of the city, and all our glasses are guaranteed. We do not make it a practice of remaining for a few days in a place, and then leaving for parts unknown.

We have never sought to delude the unwary by advertising cut-rates on glasses. Those who do business in this way, either deceive the public, or sooner or later come to grief themselves. Any business to be a lasting success, must be conducted at a fair rate of profit; expert service and enduring articles cannot be furnished at or below cost. Intelligent people appreciate these facts, and this is one of the principal reasons why we have been so successful in the Optical business.

IN WRONG LINE

A newspaper man and his wife went to the Drawing Room on Saturday night, and having been given the privilege of the private entrance, were supposed to make their bows after the general public and before the wives and daughters of the officers of the Ottawa garrison. But something went wrong in the plan and the journalist found himself in the middle of the line of military ladies. The joke was too good a one to be passed unnoticed and one Deputy Minister, who is not only somewhat of a wag but a former military man also, greeted the scribe with the remark, as he passed along, "Whose officer's wife are you?" It is not often that a newspaper man blushes, but he did then and he wished that he was in some other place much more congenial at that particular minute. However, the constitution was not shattered, and that was a good thing.—Ottawa Free Press.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

TO THE BOARD OF TRADE

The Board of Trade meets to-morrow night to pass a resolution petitioning the Ottawa Government to continue the work of conserving the waters in the Trent system. Year by year work has been done to the extent of building a dam or two in the upper waters, and if this work is continued, in five or six years more we shall have a perfectly controlled water-system and a large number of water-powers created at the different points in the system where the dams are built, for local use there. This conservation of the waters means, therefore, an immense deal to the future prosperity of this whole district, and should not be neglected or half-starved, while immense sums are being expended on all through routes from the inevitable west. So far $106,000 has been expended on dam work. That sum is a mere drop in the bucket of the expenditures elsewhere and the Board of Trade ought to have no difficulty in securing the co-operation of the municipal councils wherever these water-powers will arise, in its present efforts. The matter is of much greater importance than it is usually understood to be, and the Board is to be congratulated on taking hold of it with vigor and promptitude. At the present time there are but few centres of population north or north-east and north-west of Peterborough. These dams will mean many more of such and will at slight expense tend greatly to the development of the whole district. The small sum required for the whole work makes us wonder that it has not been done before. It only shows that instead of complaining we ought to set ourselves to work in the public interest more than we do. The opportunities are manifold. Wholesale expenditures are not nearly so important as those in detail. The latter should precede the former, and had these centres of population been created in the way indicated the railways would have been falling over each other by this time to secure the business. Supt. McClellan is doing all he can to help on this work, and it is to him that much of the success of it is due.

Private interests are well and capably served. It is seldom that public interests are so well served. Perhaps this is not to be wondered at. In the case of Peterborough and district the fault lies with the public. It is quite apparent that it is twenty years behind the times in respect of its own interests. This whole Trent system, to the north especially should have been by this time a busy hive, instead of a waste of wilderness, and it is only by slow and hesitating steps that we are, even now, proceeding to the accomplishment of the work. It is so, also, with the Power question. It must strike any thinking man as strange that with all our local energy and opportunity we seem unable to succeed in doing anything of a practical and comprehensive character for our good city's future.

CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE

"A Canadian Navy under Canadian control," is the phrase which Sir Wilfrid Laurier uses to disguise his anti-imperial policy. How could the several states of the U. S. ever have become blended into an imperial federation if each state had insisted on the control of its own navy and its own army? This policy may please the main support of the Laurier administration but it will satisfy no believer in the future of a British United Empire.

The expense, too, is enormous. In fact the policy is but the beginning of a huge speculation in graft.

The speech delivered by the Premier yesterday in parliament was intended to be epoch-making and it is so. It is the last word of the Liberal party. It is the result of balancing the probabilities and possibilities of Sir Wilfrid's future political status. It is the usual jugglery of words backed up by the supposed recommendations of a secret naval conference.

We suspect that what the Admiralty acquiesced in at that conference and what it really wanted are two different things. Sir Wilfrid, as the representative of Canada, insisted in season and out upon what he called "Canadian Autonomy." It is only too likely that the British Admiralty considered that a bad bargain was better than none.

Is this policy of isolation, then, all that we have got to present as the outcome of our boasted loyalty to the empire?

CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGE WILL CEASE TILL SPRING

On account of the work of construction being so greatly hampered by high water, it will be discontinued in a few days, Mr. Ed. Conroy, the contractor, states. At present the water is six feet above the foundation, so it is impossible to go on with the work.

MR. LASTAR'S OPINION ABOUT LOCAL OPTION

The following communication has been handed to the Review by the writer, whose name is appended. His views are set forth in what he has written, and he wishes it printed, independent of any local organization, either for or against local option.

To the Editor of the Review:

Sir,—Will you allow me space to refer to what I consider, as a citizen of the city, who is taking an interest in the growth and welfare of the city, a very important question. I think it is my duty, if I can help on y a small part by giving my advice and experience in this local option campaign that is going on now in Peterborough. In the first place, I am not going to defend drunkenness, nor encourage people to drink, nor even to say that the use of liquor by men who cannot control themselves, is beneficial to them; neither will I deny that liquor has brought misery and distress in many unfortunate families—even as far as crime. I am in sympathy with those parties who are trying to limit misery, and try and help them by inducing them not to drink, but I am certainly opposed to the way those parties are trying to limit the drinking question, by voting for local option in Peterborough. I want every reader to consider the reasons without prejudice. I am not a preacher, nor a hotel man, who is making a living by preaching for nor fighting against the question. I am an ordinary man, who would like to help and advise my neighbor, to the best of my ability, free of any charge or thanks, if I can do so. Taking the circumstances and time, we are living in here in Peterborough, this will not bring any benefit to the public generally. If we could bring a by-law to pass in the Dominion Government to prohibit the manufacture of alcohol, I am with you. To save the misery of only one man will satisfy me to wipe liquor from the face of the earth. But that is a thing that is impossible, as a great part of alcohol is used for medicinal purposes and is a great revenue to the Dominion Government. And as long as alcohol will be manufactured there will be drunkenness, and you cannot limit the drunkenness by prohibition. You can limit drunkenness, but not by force and compulsion, but only in a peaceful way, by educating the people and teaching the ignorant. At the present time in Peterborough we have no miners nor negroes who are a danger to the public when they are intoxicated. But, to tell you the truth, after traveling through Europe, Asia, Africa and America, I have not seen a more peaceful and law-abiding people than we have here in Peterborough, taking into consideration the size of the city. During my time of traveling I have mixed with all classes. With the most miserable and poor creatures, and also with the higher classes. I was not traveling just for pleasure over the world, but to make a living. And to make a living in a foreign country you have to understand the language, and, not having any bank account, you naturally would not get into the society of millionaires, and from what I learned then, prohibition would do no good for Peterborough, and would be a great loss financially. It would bring a certain amount of perjuries and would demoralize more people and bring more temptation to drink and crime than we have at the present. There have been brought and are still bringing in here certain preachers who want to make a name for themselves, or to hold their jobs, as they otherwise might not have done; by women who would like to go to heaven, and do not know the right address, who, with the assistance, and under the disguise of the church, blindfold the people. They bring all kinds of professional preachers and speakers, who under the protection of the church, make all kinds of statements—not in many cases absolutely false—to serve their purposes. They are appealing to the people in the names of innocent babies, and in the names of their wives and children, to prohibit the sale of liquor in the open bar. They do not say anything about having liquor in the house by the wholesale, but close the bars, the temptation of the public.

First, now let us see. We will take up the question from the moral side, and later from the financial standpoint. They are accusing the open bar of all the crimes. First, in tempting little children by serving any one in the open bar. In the last seven years since I have been in Peterborough have the children learned their bad manners and abuse and bad language over the bars? I say "No." And can any one conscienciously say that they have seen boys drinking over the bar? Such a thing has not been in an open bar. But you would ask. "But there are places where children—and especially boys—from 13 to 16 years are learning bad habits that are ending in crime. Yes, there are places; and I have referred the matter to many clergymen both in Peterboro, and out, and also to some prominent church men, and to men who are high in the council, and who are doing the people's business. I asked them if they had ever gone to the pool-rooms, where boys from 13 years and up are running about, and some standing, looking on and learning how to gamble, if they had ever listened to the language that is used in some instances. A sailor would blush to hear the words used by those little fellows. You would say that is only innocent game, they do not play for money. Yes, as far as the proprietor is concerned, there is no gambling. But the boys by themselves are playing for gain or loss, on the quiet. Some who are not playing are betting on the others. Some are winning and some are losing; and once a boy sees others win some money, he is trying to get means to win what he has lost. Some in an honest way, and some under the guise of a good friend, and some get it from the parents under some good excuse. If that does not help them they are trying to steal it from their parents or from some employer. Their minds are no more at their lessons, nor at their work, but they count the minutes when their work is finished, when they can run back to the pool tables. Is not that the place for educating crime and misery? And would anybody think for one minute, that boys who are acquainted with the rules and regulations of the gambling tables, and from what they have learned from one another. Will they not find a means of getting liquor. Why prohibition would be just what they want. They would not be able to get intoxicating drinks from the present bars, under the supervision of the authorities; but they certainly would find a blind pig, who will serve them with all kinds of liquors, starting with alcohol and finishing with opium and poison. Can anyone deny those facts? Can any of the prohibition speakers and famous speakers refer at any time to these facts? Have you ever seen a drunkard, no matter how drunk he is, bring his child to a saloon in Peterboro, or those babies for whose sake they are appealing to the people to vote for prohibition, giving him liquor and learning him to be a drunkard? I say, and you have to agree with me and say "No." But I have seen, and many others have also seen, who has visited a pool-room, that a father will bring his child, not thinking any harm, and let him stay there for hours, until he is through with his game, and the child begins to see and hear what he has never seen nor heard before. Those are the places where crimes begin in England and Canada, and also in Peterboro.

Is not this one of the 17,000 reasons the open bar, under the control of the authorities, and under the able license inspector and police, that we have here in Peterboro, should be open?

KNOX CHURCH YOUNG PEOPLE

Devotional evening was held last night by the Young People's Society of Knox church and Mr. A. C. Davenport, president of the society, presided over the meeting.

Miss Ella Warren spoke on the 121 Psalm, "Our help cometh from God."

The mountains with their loftiness opened the heart of man to higher thoughts. Christ prayed on the mountain tops. The two weeks' mission had given to us new power and new visions.

Mr. Wm. Lorimer made an earnest appeal, referring to the mission just finished. He spoke of the power of of Christ, the power of Christianity upon the nations, and how we can be made to be instruments in God's hands

Rev. H. J. Keith being called upon referred to the mountain top, experiences of men, and of the messages received during the past two weeks. A good gathering with the spirit of service was manifested. Next Monday being literary, Mr. Gordon Hall will be in charge.—Com.

CONSERVATIVE CLUB CONTEST

A euchre contest will be held Thursday evening in the club rooms, beginning at eight o'clock. Two handsome prizes will be given.

Heavy Freight Traffic

There is a big demand for freight cars at Midland, owing to the large amount of grain which has been carried there. Freight traffic is very brisk on this section of the Grand Trunk Railway and will continue so for some time yet.

Will Stop Work

Work for the present season will be stopped on the new All Saints' church within a few days. The windows are now being arched. It is the intention of the committee in charge to rush the work in the spring.

Few Permits

There has been a marked falling off in the number of building permits issued at the city hall during the past three weeks. This is not unusual, however, as the building trade always becomes slack in the fall.

LOVERS OF ART WILL HAVE TREAT IN LECTURE TO BE GIVEN IN CITY

The Womens Art Association of Peterborough have completed arrangements for an illustrated art lecture to be given in the Collegiate Institute hall on the evening of Friday, November 26th, by Fraulein Antoine Stolle. She is an artist who received her diploma from the Royal Art Academy of Berlin, and who subsequently spent much time in study in Italy, Paris and London, has gained a reputation in this country by her exceedingly interesting and instructive talks upon art and the use of lantern slides which reproduce noted pictures by great painters in their original colors.

She was a pupil of famous authorities on art, Kugler, Lubke, Hermann Brimm and Wolfflin, present professor at the University of Berlin.

When she announced to Hermann Grimm her determination to reproduce in color, for use in the stereopticon, the best examples of the old masters, he strongly advised against it, saying that success in this direction was wholly impossible. But when, after another year spent in experimenting with colors and methods, Fraulein Stolle accomplished her purpose and presented herself again to Grimm with a few painted slides, he gave her a most enthusiastic welcome at the University and declared that she had advanced the progress of the study of art for two centuries.

The slides shown were selections from the Dresden Gallery, among them being Rubens' "Portrait of an Old Bishop," remarkable as a study of old age.

Grimm declared that these slides invaluable and especially so for their faithful reproduction of the flesh tones.

While at her work in the Art Galleries in Vienna, Fraulein Stolle was closely observed by Director Aug. Schaeffer of the Royal Art Museum, who showed the greatest appreciation of the result obtained and insisted on giving the artist his written testimony as to the faithfulness of her reproductions in color.

As the result of an introduction by him to Dr. Brozina, president of the oldest and largest institution for the education of the people in Vienna, "The Volksbildungs Verein," the latter invited Fraulein Stolle to lecture before this institution and offered her two of his own dates for this purpose. For such a conservative country as Austria this was a remarkable bonor to be offered to a woman.

A similar testimonial as to the value of Fraulein Stolle's work, was also given by the Director of the Dresden Gallery.

Both in Berlin and Vienna high prices were offered for single slides but Fraulein Stolle has refused all offers, and has never parted with any of her slides, using them solely as material to illustrate her own lectures.

These slides will bear the greatest enlargement without showing coarseness of grain or losing delicacy of sentiment. The closest observer will not detect the slightest inaccuracy, but will discover even the strokes of the brush of the original artist. Thus are reproduced in absolute faithfulness of color, all the most famous master pieces in the great galleries of Europe. Nothing is lacking or left to the imagination, every peculiarity of drawing, every delicacy of tint, every individuality of style of the original master-hand is revealed. The distinctive color scheme of each artist is faithfully represented, so faithfully in fact, that the peculiarities of coloring in flesh tints, as well as in draperies, are instantly recognisable by anyone who has seen the original work. The brilliant combinations of color which makes the work of Durer distinctive, the wonderful power and vividness of Rembrandt, the deep, rich flesh tints of Rubens, appear on the screen with a degree of accuracy which keeps the spectator in a constant state of mingled delight and surprise.

Among her many press notices Fraulein Stolle has the following:

There are few women in more original fields of work than Fraulein Stolle Her artistic study of foreign art galleries has given her a breadth of knowledge and standpoint in art matters that makes her picture-critiques authoritative. the exquisite reproductions of the famous pictures of European galleries which she has prepared in slides with infinite fidelity to the originals, bring to her audience the cream of the art works in old world galleries, and make the eye familiar with the best to be found in the art centres of Dresden, Florence, Milan, Venice, Berlin, Rome and Paris.—Albany Evening Journal.

Fraulein Stolle is a most interesting talker. She has a wealth of knowledge on her subject and shows every attribute and instinct of the true artist.—The Salt Lake Tribune.

Do You Need Shaking?

Like a Stove Choked with Ashes.

You have probably noticed how much more briskly the fire burns when freshly built or shaken. You doubtless remember too, how much more briskly you used to get around when you were in your 'teens or twenties.

The cases are parallel. You are like the fire that is choked with ashes.

The cells which compose the body are constantly dying and being renewed. Then there is the indigestible part of the food to be removed. This cleansing of the body is the duty of the bowels, kidneys and skin. When any of these organs fail to do their work properly, the system becomes clogged and the fire of life burns low.

There is an increasing tendency towards constipation, kidney trouble and poisoned blood as one grows older. In most cases, the need is felt of something to regulate these vital organs.

"Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine, does this perfectly. It acts directly on the liver, increasing the flow of bile and causes the bowels to move regularly and naturally. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest of kidney regulators, overcoming the tendency to congestion of the kidneys and strengthening these organs. "Fruit-a-tives also stimulates the skin to renewed action.

By their combined action on bowels, kidneys and skin, "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the system free of all poisons and renews the vigor of youth.

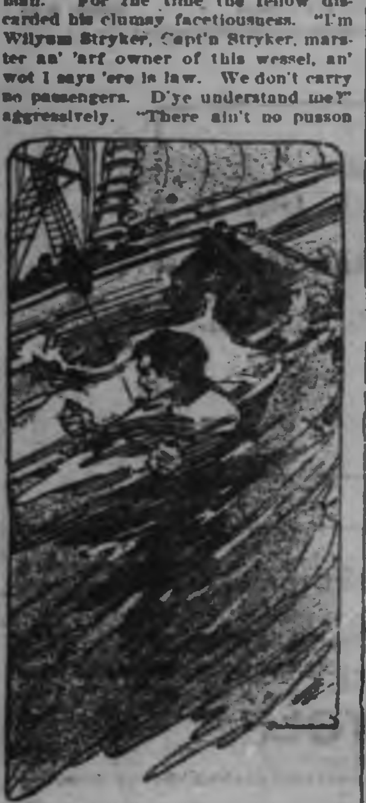
"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"I don't 'ave to. Listen to me, young man." For the time the fellow discarded his clumsy facetiousness. "I'm Wilyum Stryker, Capt'n Stryker, marster an' 'arf owner of this wessel, an' wot I says 'ere is law. We don't carry no passengers. D'ye understand me?" aggressively. "There ain't no pusson nymed Calendar aboard the Allytheer, an' never was, an' never will be!"



A green roaring avalanche swept down upon him.

"What name did you say?" Kirkwood inquired.

"This ship? The Allytheer, registered from Liverpool, bound from London to Hantwerp, in cargo. Anythink else?"

Kirkwood shook his head, turning to scan the seascape with a gloomy gaze. As he did so and remarked how close upon the Sheppey headland the brigantine had drawn the order was given to go about. For the moment he was left alone, wretchedly wet, shivering, wan and shrunken visibly with the knowledge that he had dared greatly for nothing. But for the necessity of keeping up before Stryker and his crew the young man felt that he could gladly have broken down and wept for sheer vexation and disappointment.

Some little while later Stryker again approached him, perhaps swayed by an unaccustomed impulse of compassion, which, however, he artfully concealed. Blandly ironic, returning to his impersonation of the shopkeeper, "Nothink else we can show you, sir?" he inquired.

"I presume you couldn't put me ashore," Kirkwood replied ingenuously.

In supreme disgust the captain showed him his back. "'Ere, you," he called to one of the crew, "tyke this awye! Tyke 'im below an' put 'im to bed; give 'im a drink an' dry 'is clo's. Mebbe 'e'll be better when 'e wykes up. 'E don't talk sense now, that's sure. If you arsk me, I sye 'e's balmy an' no 'ope for 'im."

CHAPTER XVII.

CONTRADICTORY to the hopeful prognosis of Captain Stryker, his unaccredited passenger was not better when, after a period of oblivious rest indefinite in duration, he awoke. His subsequent assumption of listless resignation, of pacific acquiescence in the dictates of his destiny, was purely deceptive—thin ice of despair over profound depths of exasperated rebellion.

Overhead on the deck a heavy thumping of hurrying feet awoke him to keener perceptiveness.

Judging from the incessant rolling and pitching of the brigantine, the crashing thunder of seas upon her sides, the eldritch shrieking of the gale, as well as from the chorused groans and plaints of each individual bolt and timber in the frail fabric that housed his fortunes, the wind had strengthened materially during his hours of forgetfulness, however many the latter might have been.

A wild night, certainly. Probably by that time the little vessel was in the middle of the North sea, bound for Antwerp.

The first color of resentment ebbing from his thoughts left him rather interested than excited by the prospect. He found that he was neither pleased nor displeased. He presumed that it would be no more difficult to raise money on personal belongings in Antwerp than anywhere else. It has been observed that the first flower of civilization is the rum blossom, the next the conventionalized fleur-de-lis of the money lender. There would be pawn shops, then, in Antwerp, and Kirkwood was confident that the sale or pledge of his signet ring, scarfpin matchbox and cigar case would provide him with money enough for a return to London by third class, at the worst. There—well, all events were on the knees of the gods. He'd squirm out of his troubles somehow. As for the other matter, the Calendar affair, he presumed he was well rid of it—with a sigh of regret. It had been a most enticing mystery, you know, and the woman in the case was extraordinary, to say the least.

The memory of Dorothy Calendar made him sigh again. And he sat up, bumped his head, groped round until his hand fell upon a doorknob, opened the door and looked out into the blowzy emptiness of the ship's cabin proper, whose gloomy confines were made visible only by the rays of a dingy and smoky lamp swinging violently in gimbals from a deck beam.

Kirkwood's clothing, now rough dried and warped wretchedly out of shape, had been thrown carelessly on a transom near the door. He got up, collected them and, returning to his berth, dressed at leisure, thinking heavily, disgruntled—in a humor as evil as the after taste of bad brandy in his mouth. He had slept away some eighteen or twenty hours. He felt stronger now and bright enough—and enormously hungry into the bargain.

Abstractedly, heedless of the fact that his tobacco would be water soaked and ruined, he fumbled in his pockets for pipe and pouch, thinking to soothe the pangs of hunger against breakfast time. His pockets were empty—every one of them. He assimilated this discovery in patience and cast an eye about the room, to locate, if possible, the missing property. But naught of his was visible. So he rose and began a more painstaking search.

The cabin was at once tiny, low ceiled and depressingly gloomy. Its furniture consisted entirely in a chair or two, supplementing the transoms and lockers as resting places, and a center table covered with a cloth of turkey red, whose original aggressiveness had been darkly moderated by libations of liquids, principally black coffee and burnt offerings of grease and tobacco ash. Eight bells sounded, and, from the commotion overhead, the watch changed. A little later the companionway door slammed open and shut, and Captain Stryker fell down, rather than descended, the steps.

Without attention to the American he rolled into the mate's room and roused that personage. Kirkwood heard that the name of the second in command was 'Obbs, as well as that he occupied the starboard stateroom aft. After a brief exchange of comment and instruction Mr. 'Obbs appeared in the shape of a walking pillar of oilskins, capped by a sou'wester, and went on deck. Stryker, following him out of the stateroom, shed his own oilers in a clammy heap upon the floor, opened a locker, from which he brought forth a bottle and a dirty glass, and, turning toward the table, for the first time became sensible of Kirkwood's presence.

"Ow, there you are, eigh, little bright eyes!" he exclaimed, with surprised animation.

"Good morning, Captain Stryker," said Kirkwood, rising. "I want to tell you"—

But Stryker waved one great red paw impatiently, with the effect of sweeping aside and casting into the discard Kirkwood's intended speech of thanks. Nor would he hear him further.

"Did you 'ave a nice little nap?" he interrupted. "Come up bright an' smilin', eigh? Now I guess"—the emphasis made it clear that the captain believed himself to be employing an Americanism, and so successful was he in his own esteem that he could not resist the temptation to improve upon the imitation—"na-ow I guess yeou're abaout right ready, ben't ye, to hev a drink, sonny?"

"No, thank you," said Kirkwood, smiling tolerantly. "I've got any amount of appetite."

"'Are you, now?" Stryker dropped his mimicry and glanced at the clock. "Breakfast," he announced, "will be served in the myne dinin' saloon at eyght a. m. Passingers is requested not to be lyte at tyble."

Depositing the bottle on the said table, the captain searched until he found another glass for Kirkwood and sat down.

"Do you good," he insinuated, pushing the bottle gently over.

"No, thank you," reiterated Kirkwood shortly, a little annoyed.

Stryker seized his own glass, poured out a strong man's dose of the fiery concoction, gulped it down and sighed. Then, with a glance at the American's woebegone countenance, he filled his pipe.

The fumes of burning shag sharpened the tooth of desire. Kirkwood stood it as long as he could, then surrendered with an "If you've got any more of that tobacco, captain, I'd be glad of a pipe."

An intensely contemplative expression crept into the captain's small blue eyes.

"I only got one other pyper of this 'ere 'baccy," he announced at length, "an' I carn't get no more till I gets 'ome. I simply couldn't part with it hunder 'arf a quid."

Kirkwood settled back with a hopeless lift of his shoulders. Abstractedly Stryker puffed the smoke his way until he could endure the deprivation no longer.

"I had about 10 shillings in my pocket when I came aboard, captain, and a few other articles."

"Ow, yes; so you 'ad, now you mention it."

Stryker rose, ambled into his room and returned with Kirkwood's possessions and a fresh paper of shag. While the young man was hastily filling, lighting and inhaling the first strangling but delectable whiff the captain solemnly counted into his own palm all the loose change except three large pennies. The latter he shoved over to Kirkwood in company with a miscellaneous assortment of articles, which the American picked up piece by piece and began to bestow about his clothing. When through he sat back, troubled and disgusted. Stryker met his regard blandly.

"Anything I can do?" he inquired, in suave concern.

To be continued.

SPORTING NEWS

LINDSAY TO HAVE JUNIOR TEAM; NO INTERMEDIATES THIS YEAR

Its junior hockey for Lindsay this winter. That is if the amendment making the junior age limit nineteen years is carried. The intermediate championship will not be defended by a team from this town this coming winter.

An informal meeting was held on the rugby grounds on Saturday. Some of the men who have been backing the game for the past few years talked the matter over, and agreed that Lindsay could not round up a fast intermediate team this year. The younger material will be in the limelight, and it is thought that a speedy and representative seven could be gathered from the boys under nineteen in Lindsay.

A representative from here will attend the O.H.A. annual meeting which will be held in Toronto shortly and will favor the lowering of the junior age limit.

As the mover of the amendment stated the present age limit of twenty years permits boys grown almost to manhood to play. The teams winning the junior championship in the past few years have been equal in weight, and sometimes in strength, to the intermediate champions, and even the seniors.

Anyway, Lindsay will have a junior team.—Lindsay Warder.

AN OTTAWA MINISTER HANDS OUT SOME STRONG TALK

In Giving His Idea of Sport and So-called Sport—A Fighter is An Animal—Murder on the Football Field—Sporting Slang From Pulpit.

The [illegible] malice aforethought with which the Ottawas football team bearded the Hamilton Tigers in their lair on the occasion of the recent game in Hamilton has received a lot of attention from the newspapers of Toronto and Montreal and Hamilton and last night there was a new aspect lent to the criticisms of the local team when Rev. A. A. Cameron of the First Baptist church read to his congregation comments from the papers of outside cities on the game.

"What I am to say I do not mean for the amateur teams, but for the professional players," said Rev. Dr. Cameron, in opening his address on sport last evening. "I myself am convinced that when all athletics in our country are under the control of a Christian organization like the Young Men's Christian Association it will be for the welfare of all athletics.

"Every young man to-day feels that he must be in athletics if he is to amount to anything among young men, and the drift of sport to-day is not for the benefit of young men's morals, ideals and ideas of British fair play."

The preacher spurned the idea of turning a man's body into a fighting machine when that body was made in the image of God. He told his hearers that a man sank to the level of the animal when he started on the fighting game and then he was not so dangerous as a big black bear, for a bear could run faster, could hit harder and could be more vicious than any man could be.

Then the preacher went after the rough play. Brutality, he said, had become so common of late that the press of the country has had to withdraw much of the support which in the past it lent to sport. He told of the case which came up in Cornwall some two years ago where a man was killed in the course of the game.

The same law should hold when a man assaults with intent to do bodily harm on the football field as holds when he assaults on the street, Mr. Cameron claimed. "Murder while under the influence of liquor is called murder, but murder on the football field is called rough sport," he added, after he had read various newspaper accounts of cases where death resulted from rough play. "It is now in order to send doctors, nurses, ambulances and hospital tents to the scene of the games," he continued, after dwelling further on the ever-increasing roughness in sport.

However, the climax to the preacher's remarks was reached when he read item after item clipped from the sporting pages of the various newspapers and all of these were from the papers which were less likely to see any good in the actions of the Ottawa team. When it came to the allegations about the violence which the Ottawa men showed toward Simpson of the Tiger line, Mr. Cameron's remarks were listened to with the greatest of attention. Whether the audience took all for granted that was told in these outside comments it is hard to say, but it certainly interested them to hear the very latest sporting slang read in a clerical voice and tone from a city pulpit.

In his final advice to the men who took interest in sporting affairs, Dr. Cameron urged that recreation should be taken in amateur associations only and that they should look on sport as a secondary thing and not the main thing in life.

Says The Telegram: "Parkdale Canoe Club defeated Peterborough at Diamond Park on Saturday by the score of 40 to 9. THE LOAFER.

Tom Browne, the English Artist, and One of His Models.

Tom Browne, the English black and white artist, told the following story of one of his models: I used to have as a model a long, thin youth who was a golf caddie on Blackheath. I made a water color study of him and put in a street corner background. Before sending it to the frame maker's I wrote on the back in pencil a suggestion for a possible future title, "A Loafer." The frame maker after framing the sketch put it in his window until such time as he could send it up to me, with a card on the picture bearing the title, "A Loafer—By Tom Browne."

One morning the caddie came to the side door and asked to speak to me.

"There's a picture of me in a shop winder darn in Greenwich."

"Really?"

"Yus, an' all me pals 'ave seen it." (With a sudden fury.) "I ain't no loafer, I ain't. I'm a respectable caddie, I ham, and you've got to take it bout of the winder."

I assured him that I knew nothing of the matter and was very sorry.

"That be blowed for a tile," he retorted. "I'll mike yer pye damerges for this. I've been to my solicitor, and 'e sez 'e can mike yer."

In the end I fixed it up by a little tip, an old coat and a drop of something. Of course I had the picture taken out of the window. The caddie has not sat for me since.

THE NARCISSUS.

Old Legends About This Beautiful and Ancient Flower.

The beautiful narcissus is a very ancient flower, and poets of all times have sung about it. It bloomed even as long ago as when gods and goddesses were supposed to live on the earth. The old Grecian legends say it was the flower the maiden Proserpine was gathering when Pluto took her away to his dark home under the ground.

Another legend tells about a beautiful youth named Narcissus. His father was a river god named Cephissus and his mother a nymph called Liriope. The wonderful beauty of the youth caused many to love him, but he was cold and indifferent to all.

A poor little nymph called Echo loved him so dearly that she pined away and died because he would not care for her.

At last Nemesis, the goddess of retribution, decided to punish him for his hard heart.

She caused him to fall in love with his own image as he looked into a stream, and as he could never reach this beautiful reflection he gradually perished with hopeless love.

His body was changed into the beautiful flowers which have ever since borne his name.—Pearson's Weekly.

Laughing Disclosures.

Concerning the laughter of the Frenchman, it should be noted that our neighbors have worked out a system of character reading by the vowel in which one laughs. Laugh in A (our English "Ha, ha!"), and, according to Larousse, you reveal yourself as frank, inconstant and fond of noise and movement. Laughter in E ("Heh, heh!" would be the English rendering) is for phlegmatic and melancholy. Children and simple persons laugh in a French I ("He, he!"), showing themselves devoted, but timid and irresolute, and it is observed that blonds laugh "He, he!" "Ho, ho, ho!" is not the laugh of an ogre, but of one who is generous in sentiment and bold in action, though of a woman who laughs like that one should beware. But both men and women who laugh in U should be shunned like the plague, since they have given fair warnings that they are misers, hypocrites or misanthropes.—London Chronicle.

To Rule a Husband.

To rule your husband, my dear lady, do exactly as you please, but always pretend that you do as he pleases. That is where your ability comes in. Men are ruled, as children are, by the prospect of a reward. The reward of your husband is your amiability, your sweetness, your devotion and your beauty, of which you should take a constant care. Love has to be fed constantly. Always let him suppose that it is for him that you wish to remain beautiful. The woman who believes that she is asserting her independence every time she puts on a hat particularly displeasing to her husband is as clever and as intelligent as the Irishman who buys a return ticket at a railroad office and on entering the car remarks to the passengers: "I have played a good joke on the company. I have bought a return ticket, but I don't mean to come back."—Max O'Rell in "Her Royal Highness, Woman."

Dollars and Sense

Love Rose Superior to Scruples About Her Wealth

By JOANNA SINGLE

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Frederic King met his friend at the door and relieved that perspiring partner of his heavy suit cases.

"Poor Porty!" he soothed whimsically. "I marked you from the window and saw that the usual thing ailed you. I send you to work on a case, and you return with 'girl' writ large on your plump, fair countenance. Was it so bad as all that? I know what she did to you, for you're easy, poor boy, but who was she this time?" He pushed forward the biggest chair and thrust a cigar between Porter's willing teeth. The two men smoked.

"Never mind, son; you always recover. Some worthy tobacco, a little time and another girl, and history will repeat itself. How about the case?"

"Depositions all straight and fine; good stuff," Porter answered briefly as he wistfully scrutinized his partner's fine, high bred face. "Confound you and your commiseration, King! I need the commiseration, however; that's sure. But I just live to see you meet your Waterloo. You're vulnerable somewhere. And you have not met Rose Law yet. Fate is bringing her here tomorrow to spend the summer with her aunt, Mrs. Morton. I observe your finish. It's been due you these three years."

"No, not till I have something better than a pumpkin shell to keep the lady in, Porty. Dismiss me. But tell me what she's like. I'll have to hear your ravings sooner or later. I see she did a thorough job with you. Proceed."

Porter nodded an affirmation. He launched into his subject with a whole heart. The lady's list of charms and their effect was long. King was patient. Finally, as all things have an end, Porter paused for breath, which he needed, being short and fat.

"Is that all? Finish at this sitting. I'm not always complacent with the maunderings of a lunatic. What else? I can't think of another single charm myself."

"Two more. She's rolling in dollars—her grandmother's. And—I'm no dog in the manger—any one could see she is just the girl for you, little and fair and"—

"Shut up, Porty!" he commanded inelegantly. "I hate that sort of thing even from you. I'm not in the market. And, you know, I'd hang myself before I'd destroy my self respect by marrying a rich girl. The dollars in themselves put her out of my class; that's all."

But it was not all, for Rose Law came, was seen and conquered. Porty had not exaggerated. And Frederic King, with the quick knowledge of the man who has not desensitised his heart by constant exposure, knew his queen at sight. The Waterloo had come.

That summer a silent battle was fought. Choosing the discretionary part of valor, King carefully treated Rose Law, accustomed to adoration, as he did every woman—with gay, perfect, impersonal courtesy. It was hard, especially as society, like nature, knows a pair when she sees it. She was always his partner at dinners and dances, at picnics and frolics, till in sheer self defense he began to devote himself to little Sallie Grey, who had always openly flouted him. Then this refuge was taken from him—a flash, too warm, in the child's eyes bade him protect her from herself.

Rising to his lead, Rose played a perfect support. Then she became leading lady in his own play of friendly indifference. They were friends, while the world wondered, for to women like Rose men are lovers first. Afterward they choose between friendship and the outer darkness. The girl's vanity was hurt, her pride wounded. She was first amazed, then angry. Then her heart was touched. She began to suffer. Real love never plays with its object. Her skill deserted her. She became a silent, sensitive thing, registering each day some new impression of Frederic King's fine face and voice, his little tricks of mind and body, his strength and ability, his lovableness.

She became very miserable, waking at night to see no good, no charm, in herself, to suffer what she had made others suffer. She had not known that love awakened and denied really hurts. She regretted her cruelties and became so unwontedly gentle that before she knew it she had three more hearts laid at her small feet. She wondered what others saw in her when she was powerless to draw the one.

As for King, the thought of the girl gave him no peace. He tried vainly to fight her out of his consciousness. He did not know that she cared for him, but he had an overwhelming impulse to ask her if she could and would care every time he came before her. He would hate her "wretched money" and devised wild plans by which she might lose every cent, so that he might storm her heart, toil for her and finally win for her her every wish. His common sense fled. The fortune became a nightmare and life an emptiness.

One night he went early from the Mortons', knowing that when the party should go out on the moonlit lawns he should seek her and say that which he intended never to say. He no longer trusted himself. He sat in the dark consuming cigarettes and hating himself for doing it. It was not his way to ruin his health intentionally. Then Porter came puffing in and flung himself into a chair. He knew he was not wanted and did not care. He began to talk.

"King, you precious donkey, I've cooked your goose."

"And mixed your metaphors shamelessly. Get out and let me alone."

"You precious idiot," persisted Porter, "don't stick your stubborn head into the sand and imagine the world is blind. You're selfish past words. You think only of yourself and don't mind whom you hurt. Of course nobody cares if you want to suffer, but how about—her? You chase after her, your eyes like the moon following the sun, in this fool friendship game which deceives no one. What business have you to punish an innocent girl because her grandmother willed her a fortune? How could she know your confounded pride would shy at it? You needn't try to shut me up; I'm talking for once! I can't see why a man can coolly take a woman's beauty and youth, every quality of heart and mind, all the real things she has to give, and use them like water or daylight and then balk at the paltry money she is not to blame for having and which is less to her than—well, infinitely less than a single kiss! What if she has dollars? You have sense—or used to have."

"I still have enough to hate your cheap puns, Porter. Get out of here!"

"I won't! Take that from me and wait till I finish. And you've set the old pussies whispering about her. Have you heard the news? No? Well, her cousin told me tonight that she, Rose Law, has made over every cent of her money to an orphan asylum and is leaving early tomorrow morning for New York to take a course in nursing. They all think she's crazy, and she is. Girls are like that—in stories and out of them. When they think love has failed them they want to be good to a suffering world. She is going to have the papers, the deed of gift, made when she gets there. Now, I'm an orphan. You might have given the vile stuff to me if you would not let the child have it to play with herself, while you made her happy in your own independent, imbecile way. I'm sick of you. It's too late for you to do anything, so I'll use the phone in the outer office and go."

As in a daze, not hearing the words, King was conscious of Porter's phoning, then of his putting his head in at the door again.

"I told you I cooked your goose, King. I began, as I left Morton's, by telling Miss Law that you were suddenly called away on business, but were coming back as soon as possible to bid her goodby and asked me to beg her to wait for you in the garden since she was there when I saw her. It will be a romantic setting."

King was too furious to speak. He thought it a very bad joke in the worst possible of Porter's always questionable taste. But it dawned on him that it was no joke, and he rose angrily. Porter continued: "My voice, you know, is strangely like yours. I just called her up by phone and said you would be there in a moment. She said it was too late, and I told her you would see her or rouse the house and that you would tell her what you had to say if the assembled family had to hear it too. She said she would be in the garden. It's not much past 10 and not far. Hurry!"

He fled before King could drive him out.

Willing to slay Porter, hoping, then fearing, that he joked or lied, he set off on the chance of finding her in the garden. But he was certain of one thing, two things—his own heart and the great soft moon. He had no belief that she could care. But he saw himself with Porter's eyes, which were, after all, clear and honest.

And he found her in the garden, by happy chance, however, as Porter was ever gifted with a fine imagination. He came on her suddenly, and she turned in a terror real enough till she saw who it was. She trembled.

"It's warm in the house, and I couldn't sleep. It's lovely here."

"It's lovely wherever you are and misery where you are not. Oh, Rose! Oh, Rose! Could you love me a little? You will not go away, will you?"

He held his arms out for her, and she did not deny the call.

Mountains Made of Skeletons.

Many of the most imposing mountain ranges of the globe are largely made up of limestones composed almost entirely of the hard parts of animals which once lived in the sea, the most important of these rock building forms being of a very small size. The solid earth is, in fact, a colossal graveyard, and many of its most imposing elevations are stupendous tombstones.

The chalk making up the white cliffs to which England owes her name of Albion (Latin, albus, white) is chiefly composed of microscopic shells closely resembling those now found at the bottom of the sea. Hills and mountain ranges largely made of this chalk extend from Britain and France round the shores of the Mediterranean and away into Asia and are largely represented in other parts of the world. Even more remarkable is the limestone of which the pyramids are built.

This is chiefly made up of coin shaped shells (nummulites), partly responsible, no doubt, for eastern legends of magic money. The limestone containing them attains a thickness of several thousand feet and is the material of which many mountain ranges are largely built. Beginning on the west, we have the Pyrenees and Alps, followed by the Carpathians, Caucasus, mountains of Asia Minor, north Africa and Baluchistan and, lastly, the Suleiman mountains, Himalayas and ranges in China and Japan.

Match-Making Barber.

The ship's barber of the Orient liner Orsova is a man with a curious record. "I have," he said recently, "made sixty-seven round trips to Australia, and I can hardly recall a voyage upon which some young man, who has met his 'fate' in the ship, has not come to me to buy the ring with which to plight his troth. I do not keep wedding rings in stock, but I often get them made for passengers. A boilerfitter will make a plain gold ring out of an ordinary sovereign as fine as any ring can be bought at a jeweller's shop, and at a cost of only two shillings. Many couples who get engaged on the voyage like to have these rings as a memento and a novelty. I often tell the couples who come to me that I can provide them with everything except a parson. I should say I have helped in at least one hundred engagements."

BIG CAPTURE OF NETS MADE IN WELLER'S BAY

Belleville, Nov. 15.—A tremendous capture of nets and other illegal paraphernalia was made in Weller's Bay on Friday last, by Capt. Flemming, of the Government steamer Navarch, and the crew of that vessel. The capture consisted of between 30,000 and 35,000 yards of gill nets, two shotguns and a "sunken" boat, the use of the latter being, we are told, very much against the law. In part of the nets a lot of dead ducks were found. Over 200 decoy ducks were also captured. It is said the owners of the illegal material are known, and they will be prosecuted. The "sunken boat" case is a particularly grave affair. Somebody may go "over the road" for that, it is said, if the charge against him can be proven.

JESSIE MacLACHLAN CONCERT

As was predicted, the Jessie MacLachlan concert in the Grand Opera House last night was the event of the season in musical circles in Peterborough. The programme provided by the Scottish prima donna, the Heather Male Quartette, of Toronto, and Piper Pollock, was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience, and encores were demanded for nearly every number. These were generously given.

Miss MacLachlan sang in splendid voice and demonstrated that she well deserves the title of the "world's greatest ballad singer." Her rendition of "Wi' a Hundred Pipers" roused her audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and when she sang "Auld Robin Gray" the silence in the house was so marked that one could have heard a pin drop. A novel feature of the programme was Miss MacLachlan's singing of two Gaelic numbers. Very few in the audience were in a position to say whether or not they were well sung, but that they were appreciated was evidenced by the generous measure of applause. Her other numbers included "The Rowan Tree," "Whistle and I'll Come Tae Ye, My Lad," and the old Jacobite song, "Cam' Ye By Athol." For one of her encores she sang "The Last Rose of Summer" with beautiful effect.

The Heather Male Quartette was enthusiastically received and made a splendid impression. Their opening number was "Scots Wha Hae," sung without accompaniment. The trio, "Willie Brewed a Peck o' Malt" was one of the best numbers on the programme and well deserved the encore it received. The quartette also sang "The Auld Hoose," and "O, Canada" in masterly style. The quartette is composed of Messrs. Hogg, Davidson, Gillespie and MacEachern. Solos were given by Messrs. Hogg, MacEachern and Gillespie, and all had to respond to encores. Mr. Hogg's solo "Mary of Argyle" was exceptionally well rendered.

Piper Pollock showed himself a master of the Scottish national instrument in the opening number of the programme.

The accompanist was Mr. James Buchanan and his work added much to the success of the concert.

The programme closed with "God Save the King," and it was pleasing to note that the audience remained until it had been sung. Usually there is a rush for the door while the National Anthem is being sung.

OBJECTION TO AN OBJECTION

Peterborough, Nov. 13th, 1909.
Editor Review;

Dear Sir,—In a letter written in Monday's Review by some local man by the name of R. J. Todd he protests vehemently against some Christian Science posters being torn down and destroyed. I agree with him that the act was infamous and against all traditions of British fair play but at the same time I think he has overstepped the mark in calling attention to the theatrical poster in which "two men, each with a dagger are trying to stab each other."

Mr. Todd will find that if he looks through illustrated volumes of many of Shakespeare's plays, pictures of the same character and meaning will be found. Without meaning to be the least sacreligious Mr. Todd will find in illustrations in stories of the Bible for children the picture of Cain with club raised over the head of his brother Abel and also pictures of war and bloodshed. Who will dispute the purpose of these illustrations. In the books as in the play in question the evil characters are the ones decried. I have had the pleasure of seeing the play in question, "The Wolf," and it is at once stirring, human and tender. Probably Mr. Todd could learn something by witnessing it himself and anyway he would show a truer spirit of Christian tolerance by being a little more considerate in his statements.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Big Wood Supply

Judging from the immense quantity of wood which is to be seen in the different wood yards of the city there should be no difficulty in keeping the house warm this fall and winter—if you have the greenbacks.

THE CONTADINO IN ITALY.

His Most Eventful Hours Are Spent at the Market Place.

The typical mountain peasant of Italy, the contadino, goes to market once a week, usually on Monday, during the late spring, summer and fall months. In the winter he is snowbound for weeks at a time. At the market place are spent the most eventful hours of his life. In the open space reserved for this purpose those having fruits, vegetables, poultry, butter, cheese and eggs for sale gather with their baskets in hand. Early in the morning they arrive sometimes on foot and sometimes on horse or burros. Very often one of the women of the family will come, hatless, but with a yellow or green scarf thrown over her shoulders and bearing, in addition to the ordinary produce, a basket of wild strawberries or raspberries for sale.

In Italy there is not a settlement, no matter how small, that does not contain a principal piazza, or open square. On market days this piazza is filled with rough tables covered with cloth. Dry goods, shoes, hats, cooking utensils, trinkets and in fact almost every imaginable necessity or luxury of the contadino are sold at these tables. Here the contadino does his bargaining. To a peasant there would be no pleasure in buying an article at a fixed price. He would not be happy if he could not boast to his friends of the sharp bargains he had made. Even in cities like Florence, many of the shopkeepers have two establishments, one with fixed prices for the foreign customers and that of Italians of the better classes, and another where the contadino may go and argue for half an hour over 3 cents.

At times, a large number of cattle are brought to be sold on market days. The cows or oxen are made to show their paces like race horses and are examined minutely by the prospective purchasers. If sellers and buyers, after much talk, finally agree upon a price, they make a contract by shaking hands, all four at the same time. Sometimes three parties to a bargain may be agreed and one not; he therefore refuses to shake hands. The landlord always enters into these business matters to see that they are arranged equally. The contadino is the employe of the owner of the land surrounding his cottage, and pays no rent. He receives half of the proceeds from the grain he raises for the landlord, for the grapes, sheep and goats, and for the butter and cheese he makes.

A Traveling Hotel.

Blenheim Palace, like Strathfieldsaye House, the Duke of Wellington's seat, is held directly from the crown, and every year feudal rent, in the form of a miniature flag, has to be sent to the King. The successive flags are to be seen at Windsor Castle.

The first Duke of Marlborough was the victor of Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenard, and Malplaquet, and one of the finest soldiers that England has ever had.

In 1896 the present duke married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, the daughter of the American millionaire. He owns about 19,685 acres, but the $2,500,000 mansion in Mayfair was part of Mr. Vanderbilt's wedding present to his daughter.

About eight years ago the duke and duchess had a large political party from different parts of the country at Blenheim, and for two hundred guests from Yorkshire and the Midlands a special train of nine corridor dining-cars was provided. It measured 170 yards long, and weighed 270 tons. It was quite a traveling hotel.

Presentiment Verified.

A remarkable story of a presentiment and its verification comes from Farnham, England. Mr. H. Harland, of Aldershot, whilst out driving in the adjoining district of Farnborough, was seized with the feeling that something serious had happened to one of his children, who was staying with its grandfather at Farnham. He immediately telephoned to the grandfather, and was informed that nothing had occurred. Mr. Harland, however, was unable to get rid of the impression, and he telephoned to his wife, who cycled off at once to Farnham. On the way she overtook a party who were taking her child to the grandfather's house from Moor Park, where it had fallen into a deep stream and had a narrow escape.

When Men Powdered Their Faces.

The use of powders for the hair and face, which began in the sixteenth century, infected the men. Henry III. had the habit of parading the streets of Paris, his face covered with white and red paste, like a faded coquette, and his hair filled with violet powder and scented with musk. Powders were made of all colors, and the infatuation was such that servant girls were afraid to be seen in public with their hair of the natural color and, not being able to buy that used by their employers, employed sawdust as a substitute.

Drip Coffee For the Nervous.

Cold drip coffee agrees best with nervous, dyspeptic people. It contains little caffeine to cause wakefulness, nervousness and insomnia and has little tannin to stop digestion and cause dyspepsia. Besides, it has all the aroma and flavor of best coffee. It is made by a slow dripping of cold distilled water through a dripper full of the finest powdered coffee. It is made highly concentrated and keeps well in a cold place. A few spoonfuls are put into a cup and boiling water added to suit the taste.—Exchange.

Siamese Beliefs.

One of the strangest beliefs of the Siamese is that they must under no circumstances take life, and the Buddhist priest goes so far as to strain insects out of his water not because he thinks them nasty, but because it would be wrong to kill them. Another is not to bathe after dark lest he should crush insects while drying himself. Yet he does not mind eating meat which others have killed, and he has no objection to taking fish out of the sea and leaving them to die.

Bracebridge has let the contracts for its electric development work at Wilson's Falls.

Being Rapidly Distributed

Many of the historic posts of the Hudson's Bay Company in Alberta and British Columbia will be distributed next year through the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is even now conquering the passage of the Rocky Mountains and the Coast Range!

One of the most notable of these old posts and which was used as a base for the supply of the posts in the Interior of British Columbia is Jasper House, situated on the Athabasca River and about 200 miles long the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific west of Edmonton.

Jasper House was built about 1800 and the records of the Hudson's Bay Company show that it was established in the forest on the shore of a small lake surrounded by high rocks, except on the lake side.

In 1817 the factor in charge was Jaser Hawes. It is his Christian name which gives the name to this post, which, however, in the early years of its establishment was popularly called the "Rocky Mountain House," although the post of that name was afterwards officially established at the junction of the North Saskatchewan River and the Clearwater River in Alberta.

Jasper Hawes was celebrated for the the great shock of yellow hair that he wore and the Indian and Half Breed hunters referred to him as "Tete Jaune," thus Yellowhead Pass, at the portal of which Jasper House is located, and beyond the Yellowhead, Tete Jaune Cache where the parting of the ways came for many a party of Coureurs des bois of the Hudson's Bay Company, covering the rich fur country of the interior of British Columbia. Even as the buffalo trails which deeply indented the prairie in every direction a few years since are being rapidly obliterated by the march of settlement and the building of railways, so will the landmarks of early Canadian frontier history be only a cold record in the files of the fur trading companies.

Storm signals are flying on the lakes and snow is predicted.

ANOTHER BIG MERGER IS COMPLETED

New York, N.Y., Nov. 17.—The control of the Western Union Telegraph Co. passed yesterday to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and a long step was taken toward the merging of the telephone and telegraph companies into a corporation with a capitalization of nearly $1,000,000,000.

Theodore Vail, president of the telephone company, said: "There is much to be gained by the joint construction and maintenance of plant, and by its common use to the greatest possible extent, but the greatest advantage will follow the placing of the millions of telephone subscribers in close and reliable connection with the receiving and despatching offices of the telegraph companies."

Official denial was given of reports that President Cowry, and Assistant General Manager Barclay would resign from the Western Union. It was reported that William H. Baker, formerly vice-president and general-manager of the Postal Telegraph Co., would become general manager of the Western Union.

COBOURG TO VOTE ON LOCAL OPTION

Cobourg, Nov. 17.—The local option bylaw has been given its first reading by the Town Council and will be voted upon in January. Since the petition was first submitted by the Cobourg Citizens' League, 47 of those who had originally signed asked to have their names withdrawn. Monday night 11 of these requested that their names be re-signed, bringing the total number within the percentage required to demand a vote.

HARRY THAW IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 17.—Harry K. Thaw was brought to New York yesterday to testify for his mother in resisting a suit for $7,000 for services rendered brought by Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, an alienist. At noon Thaw protested so vigorously with Dr. Baker of the asylum that he be permitted to lunch at a certain well-known restaurant that a large crowd gathered.

AN ACTION AGAINST MADAME STEINHEIL

Paris, Nov. 17.—Frederick H. Burlingham, the American newspaper man, at one time accused by Mme. Steinheil of complicity in murder, yesterday brought suit for $4,000 damages for alleged false accusation. Remy Couillard, the servant, who was also accused of the crimes by his mistress, threatens to institute a libel suit against her.

GALT COUNCIL'S NICE PROBLEM

Galt, Nov. 17.—Ald. Webster startled the Council when he announced that all elections for several years past had been illegal. He produced the municipal act to show it was contrary to that measure to have more than 400 voters in a polling subdivision, or to unite more than two Parliamentary divisions. In ward one, there were 662 voters, in ward two, 806, in ward three 516, in ward four 280, and in ward five 683.

The mayor ventured the opinion that the irregularity might be serious in regard to money bylaws passed. Steps will be taken immediately to authorize the use of twelve polling subdivisons, as under Parliamentary elections procedure, the Attorney-General's Department must be appealed to.

CLAIMS YOUTH WAS INSANE

Windsor, Nov. 17.—Richard Kraft, a Berlin youth, charged with attempted murder on May 6, was placed on trial yesterday afternoon before Justice Magee at Sandwich. He is accused of shooting Sergt Reid, Officer Lister and Janitor Qualby, who related the circumstances. Kraft had been arrested for theft of a bicycle, and fired at the men in escaping from the police station. Lister is not entirely recovered.

Mrs. Kraft, mother of the prisoner, gave evidence through an interpreter from Detroit. An effort was made to show that the prisoner is subject to epilepsy, and counsel for accused will attempt to show temporary insanity. This will be opposed by Drs. R. Bruce Smith, and H.R. Casgrain, jail physician, who assert Kraft is sane.

AUSTRALIA WANTS COAL FROM CANADA

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 17.—Cable advices have been received by the captain of the Makura, from Sydney, Australia, instructing the carriage of all the bunker coal that can be carried on the return voyage, owing to the coal strike in Australia. The message stated that the price of coal had risen from six shillings a ton to sixty shillings.

TORONTO HAS STATUE OF JOHN SANFIELD MACDONALD

Ontario's First Premier's Memory is Perpetuated by a Ten Thousand Dollar Bronze Monument—Large Gathering of Prominent Canadians Present.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—Despite the tempestuous weather, a large and representative gathering attended the unveiling of the monument erected by the Government of Ontario to the first Premier of the province, Hon John Sandfield Macdonald.

The speeches took place in the Legislative Chamber. At their conclusion the Lieutenant-Governor declared the statue unveiled. At the same time the flags in which it had been draped were removed, disclosing the handsome $10,000 bronze statue on its pedestal of red granite backed by a semi-circular bench of the same material.

Among those present at the ceremony were: Mme. Langlois of Quebec, the sole surviving daughter of the late Premier; Alex. S. Langlois of Cornwall, and Eugene Langlois of Montreal, grandsons, and the thirteen surviving civil servants appointed by him, F. G. Glackmeyer, A. H. Sydere, Col. J. H. Delamere, Col. A. Brown G. B. Kirkpatrick, Edward Jenkinson, F. C. Ussher, J. P. Edwards, Dr Hodgins, C. H. Sproule, Messrs. Kent Ross and Alley.

Representatives of the eastern part of the province, from which Hon. J Sandfield Macdonald came, were: Sir James P. Whitney, Hon. Col. Mathieson, Senator Edwards, Senator Derbyshire, D. B. Maclennan (Cornwall) [illegible] (Cornwall), James [illegible] John A. McDougall (Cornwall), James Leitch, J. A. Macintosh (formerly of Vankleek Hill), and Wm. Gibbens editor of The Cornwall Standard.

Nearly all the Cabinet Ministers were present, with quite a sprinkling of members of the Legislature and Dominion Parliament and others.

Sir James Whitney opened the proceedings by sketching the life of Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald.

Although opposed to the scheme of confederation as planned, said Sir James, the task of organizing and bringing into force the Provincial Government was performed with credit to himself and to the advantage of the people.

Mr. Macdonald was a man of great force of character and individuality. Party limitations and conditions galled him, and, as a rule, he went his own way and voted as he thought proper.

Hon. Alex. MacKay, leader of the Opposition, who followed, paid an eloquent tribute to the "force of character and tenacity of purpose" of the late Premier. He was "an independent man, outspoken in thought, unimpeachable in character."

T. D. McLennan, the business partner of Hon. J. S. Macdonald, returned thanks to the Government on behalf of his friends and surviving relatives.

BUDGET WILL BE REJECTED

Lansdowne Says People Must Pass on it First.

London, Nov. 17.—In the House of Lords yesterday, Lord Lansdowne leader of the Opposition, gave the formal and expected notice of his intention to move for the rejection of the budget bill when it comes up next Monday. His motion, he said, would be expressed thus: "I move that this House is not justified in giving its consent to this bill, until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country."

Lord Lansdowne's motion undoubtedly assures a general election in January.

The terms of Lord Lansdowne's motion were communicated to Premier Asquith and discussed by the Cabinet council. The Unionists anticipate that 300 peers will support Lord Lansdowne, while the supporters of the Government number only 40.

On the rejection of the budget bill it is expected that the Premier will move in the House of Commons a resolution strongly condemning the peers' action, affirming the sole right of the House of Commons to deal with matters of taxation and declaring the peers' attempt to force a dissolution to be unconstitutional.

Masked Highwayman Near Kingston.

Kingston, Nov. 17.—A masked man, at the point of a revolver, held up the three women occupants of the toll-house on the Bath road early Monday evening, and after firing two shots into the floor as a further means of intimidation, secured the dollar or so that was in the toll box.

GOVERNMENT CAN PREVENT INCREASE IN CEMENT PRICES

If it Goes up, as Result of Merger, Says Mr. Fielding, Customs Duties May be Abolished or Prosecution May Result—Lancaster After Railways.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The Commons spent a quiet afternoon yesterday, the only matters of importance being the introduction of bills to amend the Railway Act by Mr. Lancaster and a statement regarding the cement merger by the Minister of Fnance. There was evidence in Mr. Fielding's reply to the question put by Mr. Bradbury that Government action of some kind will be taken.

When Sir Wilfrid moved the adjournment of the House, Mr. Monk protested that the Government should be ready to proceed with its business, and he declared himself dissatisfied with the reply that there was no Government business to go on with.

Some interesting information was given at question time.

Bradbury (Selkirk) having requested information regarding the Government's attitude towards the cement merger, Mr. Fielding said that the Government had been made aware of it through notices in the public press. The allegation made that, as a result of the merger, the price of cement had gone up, was disputed. There were two ways of dealing with it. One was the abolition of the customs duties, and the Government proposed during the session to make the law dealing with this more effective. The other method was by prosecution under the criminal code, a matter which was in the hands of the Attorneys-General of the provinces.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told Col. Worthington (Sherbrooke) that the Government did not consider that information being sought for by the Department of Militia regarding United States training on warships on the great lakes should be made public pending diplomatic action. However the question of the tonnage and armament of these vessels had relation to the Rush-Bagot agreement of 1817. The question of the admission of the vessels had been decided by the Governor-in-Council.

Mr. Paquet discovered that the board of management of the International Railway were paid $6,000 each, except M. J. Butler, Deputy Minister of Railways, who received nothing for his services.

G. A. Lancaster (Lincoln) introduced three bills to amend the Railway Act, proposing that the time of appeal from a judgment of the board of railway commissioners shall be limited to thirty days, and that it should be left to the judgment of the board whether an appeal should be allowed or not. He also wants it made clear that the Railway Board shall have the power of discretion to order the protection of level crossings by railways at the latter's expense.

THE EXTRA EXPENDITURE NOT LARGE

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—A statement of Governor-General's warrants issued since the last session of Parliament on account of the current fiscal year was presented to Parliament. The total is $176,000 and the amount of the expenditure was only $38,971. The principal item is for the repairs to the Sault Ste. Marie Canal rendered necessary by the breaking of the gates last August. The amount of the warrant was $125,000 and the expenditure under it to date has been $37,771. For the representation of Canada at the International Exhibition at Brussels next year $25,000 was provided and for temporary customs provisions at Quebec following the destruction of the custom house by fire, $10,000.

INTERCOLONIAL HAS ITS FRIENDS

Moncton, N.B., Nov. 17.—The recent attack on the Intercolonial Railway made by Lord Northcliffe has caused many patrons of the I.C.R. to rally to its defence in a spirited manner that is causing the management a good deal of satisfaction. Letters from prominent business men who have traveled extensively are being received daily, these being expressions of appreciation of the train service generally and particularly of that given between Montreal, St. John and Halifax by the Maritime Express. These letters are from men who traveled on nearly every railway on the continent of America, and who consequently have a keen appreciation of the comforts that tend to reduce the weariness of travel. Their opinions are, therefore, likely to be made widely accepted than those of Lord Northcliffe.

WANT CHARTER FOR ANOTHER RAILROAD

Montreal, Nov. 17.—An application will be made to Parliament for a charter to construct a railway, extending from 100 to 200 miles from a port on the north shore of Lake Winnipeg, to connect with the proposed railway from the Pass to either Fort Churchill or to Nelson, somewhat to the south. New York, Nov. 15.—After three months of successful flying in Germany, much of the time with members of the Emperor's household as spectators, Mr. Orville Wright returned home on the Adriatic, of the White Star line, accompanied by his sister, Miss Katherine Wright.

At the pier they were met by their brother, Mr. Wilbur Wright, and Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt F. Bishop. Later the brothers and sister had a little family reunion at the Park Avenue Hotel, where several matters were discussed which would prove very interesting to the aero-nautical world if told in detail.

The brothers will remain in New York for a day or two, when they will go to their home in Dayton, Ohio, and devote their time to the manufacture of aeroplanes and experimental work. Within the next few weeks announcements of extensive business plans in which the Wrights are concerned are likely to be made.

FEARED DISGRACE OF WIFE'S SUICIDE

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Dr. Haldane Cleminson, who is on trial for the murder of his wife, held the court-room spellbound yesterday while he testified in his own defence.

"About 5 a.m.," he said, "I awoke. I had a feeling of nausea. I touched my wife with my foot. She was cold and did not answer. I saw a six ounce bottle on a chair beside the bed, also a cloth."

Cleminson said he telephoned for a doctor and then returned to the bedroom. He thought his wife had committed suicide, and to hide the shame, thought of making it look to be the deed of a burglar.

"I scattered everything in the house in disorder and hid somethings that I wanted to make believe were stolen," he said. "I scattered burnt matches about the floors."

SAYS IT WAS FAKE PISTOL

Toronto, Nov. 17.—"A single and a married woman can play hell with a married man." Thus did T. C. Robinette, K.C., plead for W. Robertson, who was charged in yesterday morning's Police Court with pointing a revolver and threatening to kill Miss F. A. Warnica. He declared that it was only a fake pistol that had been used, and produced a massage instrument as the one used. Robertson was fined $10 and costs.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 17, 1909.

A SCANDAL

A printed sheet is being sent by a coterie of Grit machine men at Ottawa to the interested press of the Liberal persuasion (purporting to give the truth about events transpiring at Ottawa. It is a party sheet and is issued for the purpose of furnishing the "desired" information to the innocent rural press.

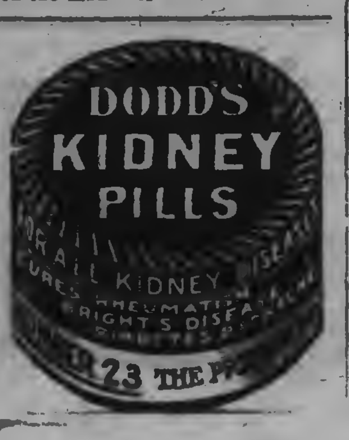
The last issue of this sheet contains in large type the statement Mr. ment that Mr. Borden made a false charge respecting corruption on the G.T.P. with regard to classification, etc., and that he had to withdraw it. The "sheet" is intended to discredit Mr. Borden and to poison the mind of the people of the more remote districts against him so that the Tammany organisation now doing business under the good old name of Liberal may retain their power over the national treasury. The first of the conflicts with "these powers" at Ottawa with their own auditor-general has just begun. The classification and all fair allowances showed the claim of the contractors on some parts of the government section of the G.T.P. to have been cooked up to three times the price allotted for the very sort of rock-cutting and other similar work done. The country is thus to be robbed of millions by contractors, and those standing in with them at Ottawa while the popular vote is to be held down by charges against Mr. Borden of wilful misstatement respecting it.

THE TRUSTY WATCHDOG

The last number of Puck contains a shrewd and suggestive picture of Uncle Sam talking to his watchdog, Mr. Taft. The old man is sitting charactristically on the back of a bench with Taft as a bulldog at his feet looking inquiringly up at him. The old man says:—"You're big enough and strong enough to make an almighty good watchdog, but you've got to break yourself of that darned habit of making friends with anything and everything." In other words Uncle Sam demands that Mr. Taft try less to be "almighty popular" and more to be "almighty-square." The crooked reward their instruments with continued talk of "How popular he is! He'd just take the people like wildfire," &c., and heretofore "the people" haven't seen through "this line of conversation," but the Americans at least decline to be fooled longer and have awakened to the fact that while it is very pleasant to have one's ribs tickled, it is safer to rely upon the man who declines to do the tickling while picking the tickled one's pocket. The cartoon is a large lesson in a small nutshell.

They say in the old countries that we are so "darned sharp" over here that we fool ourselves, and it began to look like it. The overthrow of Tammany, however, is so complete as generally to be regarded as final. It has become the fashion now to avoid Tammany's nomination.

We are in the hands of a Tammany in Canada to-day, however, that is exploiting vast public works for their own and not the public benefit. The C.N.R. asked for no bonus and got no favours although it is the greatest network of through transcontinental lines in America. But the G.T.P. had to have all it could think of, although it did not nearly serve so great and general a purpose. Why?



THE PITH OF IT

It is doubtful if the true situation of Canada at the present time could be more correctly described than in the following words;

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was out of sorts this afternoon. He was greatly disturbed by the dissatisfaction among his followers with the proposed naval programme of the Government. He went out of his way to assure the members of the House that the navy when built should be purely Canadian and should take no part in assisting the Mother Country in any emergency except as directed by the Canadian Parliament. The Government thought it so important to make this view prominent that it put forward Mr. Eerement (Lib., Que.), to move the address in reply to the speech from the throne, which was the order of the day. He spoke in French and was emphatic in declaring that the navy should be a national navy as apart from an Imperial one, while Mr. W. Kyte (Lib., N.S.), who seconded the address, discussed the matter in such a way as to lead to to the enquiry from Mr. R. L. Borden whether or no he considered Canada to be still a part of the British Empire.—Mail and Empire.

Sir Wilfrid has got to please his mainstay, Quebec, and to do so it is necessary to deny all idea of empire while he keeps shouting that the French are "British subjects."

A Canadian navy refusing to take part in a war against the empire is too absurd for words and yet it is the foundation upon which this so-called Canadian navy is to be built. Surely it is much better to have no navy at all. It is vastly less expensive and less disloyal.

AN INDEPENDENT CANADA

Let us take a look at Canada ten years hence if the Laurier policy of autonomy or separation is adopted by parliament. There will not be one single point of union left between the old lands and Canada then. The last particle of union will have been dissolved.

With the separate treaty-making power insisted on by Sir Wilfrid Laurier the wholly Canadian control of a Canadian navy has become a matter of course.

Left upon her own resources she will develop socially, racially, religiously, morally and politically as those will determine who have molded her policy for the last twelve years. With a complete autonomy Great Britain would have no more to say in Canadian affairs than South Africa would. The result is obvious. We can fancy already that we hear the threats of those who demand our independence making life more like a continued state of civil war than otherwise. The future is dark except to them.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The attempt to hand over the Trenton power privileges to a company was overwhelmingly defeated.

This bloomin' country seems to be getting into the hands of the cold-steal—oh! Excuse me! — coal-steel, men.

Now listen to the "Loyalists" attack Hon. G. P. Graham for having been "false to the Imperial idea."—Ottawa Free Press (Liberal).

And thus the Liberal press is already beginning to scoff at the "Imperial Ideal."

Most people regard Mrs. Annie Besant as a sort of faddist but in India she is regarded as such a powerful preacher of Hindoo obscurantism that the Indian press is up in arms against her as aiming at the enslavement of India.

OF INTEREST

What is Truth?

What is truth? Ask the Truth office Men and women in all ages have asked Pilate's question, "What is truth?" and, like Pilate, have turned away because they were unable or unwilling to accept the answer to their question. Mortals are not always as desirous of knowing the truth as they think they are. The honest, earnest search for truth requires moral courage surpassing that possessed by many. The unwillingness to acknowledge himself in the wrong is one of the weaknesses of mortal man that does much to retard his progress. A few desire the truth for truth's sake and are ever ready to make any sacrifice to gain it, but there are many who are disinclined to acknowledge the worth of any teaching unless it is in strict accord with their preconceived opinions.

Truth is one and unchangeable. Every idea or statement of Truth must of necessity harmonize with every other idea or statement. Above and beyond all creeds, beliefs, opinions, supposition or convictions is Truth undisturbed or affected by mortal thought. No matter how firmly one believes a thing to be true, if it is not true his belief cannot make it so. Truth is absolute and final. Human opinion can neither make nor unmake it. Truth must be understood before its benefits can be fully realised. Mortals sometimes fancy that a belief, if it is honest, is sufficient; but this is not so and experience is teaching that nothing less than the understanding of Truth brings the promised freedom.

No doubt all are convinced that Truth will ultimately prevail, and that its final triumph will bring blessings without number to all mankind. The discords and failures of life are the result of error and these bitter experiences are preparing humanity for the recognition and acceptance of Truth. If human progress is slow and at times seems almost imperceptible, it is largely because mortals are unwilling to see and acknowledge the error of their ways. It is strange that there should be this reluctance, since it is admitted that all error must be recognized and forsaken in order to achieve complete reality. To gain the truth means everything to humanity and all should be united in this good work, even though their endeavors do seem to be along different lines.

The way to harmony is not through differences of opinion, neither is it to be found in unity of false beliefs. It is possible that no two persons have exactly the same concept of any one thing. The present finite attainments of the human mind cause mortals to view all things from slightly differing standpoints. There may be and are countless beliefs regarding Truth, but there can be but one understanding of it. In the understanding of Truth and nowhere else can true harmony enduring unity be found. Mortals have sought to establish unity of thought and action by formulating beliefs to which certain persons could assent. Such a course can succeed only for a time. The remedy is not to be found in unity of beliefs or opinions but in the understanding of Truth. There is growth in understanding and progress is the law of God, for the unfolding of true ideas is always in perfect agreement with those revealed before. There is no conflict between higher mathematics and the simplest statements of the basic law of numbers, and so when the first idea of absolute Truth is discerned there is that much gained that can never be lost or superseded. All that the future has in store will be found to agree with the first simple statement of reality.

The wise man learns from observation and experience. He is ever ready to recognize the good others are doing. Instead of thinking he has gained the whole of Truth, he realizes he has just begun to understand it. His present concept of Truth is imperfect and he is so busily engaged in righting the wrongs of his own thought that he has little time and still less inclination to dwell upon the imperfections of others. The might and majesty of a truly Christian character is a potent influence. Brotherly love and true charity stem the tide of sectarian bitterness and reveal the saving power of Truth. These Christian graces bring a truer concept of the one God who is Truth.

Since all who are progressing are being fitted daily into higher, and consequently more correct conceptions of reality, would it not be well for each honest seeker to say to every other in the words of Abram to Lot, "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, . . . for we be brethren?" Thus each could go his own way, working from his own standpoint of experience and observation, fully realizing that in the future all will be united in the understanding of God, man and the universe.

Christian Science is the Science of real being. The student of this Science early learns that his conception of reality is far from absolute and he realizes the great need of charity for all who are honestly working for humanity's good. While he recognizes the great good he derives from Christian Science and gladly bears witness to it whenever opportunity affords, he is considerate of the views of others and grants them the privilege he claims for himself, namely, the right to worship God according to his understanding of the Supreme Being and the right to rely on Him in all times of need.

The Department of Justice is making enquiries about William Martinucci, who is said to have been sent down from Hamilton for two years, but the local authorities do not know anything about him.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—The railways reported 136 carloads of live stock at the City Market since our last report, consisting of 2135 cattle, 1020 hogs, 1337 sheep and lambs, and 68 calves.

Exporters.

The World made diligent enquiry but failed to hear of any export cattle being sold on this market, excepting a few bulls; notwithstanding the fact that one evening paper stated that there were several loads of exceptionally fat shipping cattle offered at $5.75, and sold at $5.50. No such cattle were on sale, and no such prices were paid on this market.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Co., including the northwesters, 1100 cattle, which would be more than two-thirds of the fat cattle counted above. Mr Rowntree reports the following prices: Steers and heifers, $4.20 to $5.25; cows, $1.50 to $4.60; bulls, $2.80 to $4.

"It will be seen that no such price as $5.75 was paid for any picked butcher cattle on either of the markets." About $5.25 was the highest price reported for any butchers cattle, excepting one lone animal at $5.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

H Murby reported light receipts of stockers and feeders, especially feeders of good quality. Mr. Murby bought two loads, and reports prices unchanged as follows: Best steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $4 to $4.50, steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.50 to $3.80; good stockers, 500 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.75 to $3.25, common stockers, $2 to $2.25.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a strong market for cows of good to choice quality. Those delivered to-day were generally of medium quality. Prices were unchanged, selling from $38 to $65 each. Napoleon Deziel, the leading cow dealer of Montreal, was on the market.

Veal Calves.

Good veals calves are in demand and sold at high prices, especially those fed by the mother cow. John H. Wickson bought one of the latter kind at $7.25 per cwt. The prices for the general run were $3 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Some 1337 sheep and lambs sold at follows: Export ewes, $3.75 to $3.90; culls and rams, $2.75 to $3; lambs, $5.60 to $5.75. Selected lots of choice ewes and wethers sold up to $6. J. H. Wickson got 10 of the latter class at $6 per cwt. We give this latter quotation to show where the $6 price comes in, and to show that it is no criterion to go by in selling the general run of lambs.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quotes the market easy at these quotations: Selects fed and watered, $7.65; and $7.40 f.o.b. cars at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 16.—Cattle—Firm: prime steers, $6.75 to $7.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

HABEAS CORPUS SECURED BY MR. RUDDY K.C.

Chief Justice Falconbridge granted a writ of habeas corpus, returnable on Friday, in the case of Angus Macdonald, sentenced by Police Magistrate D. W. Dumble, of Peterborough, to a term of two years, less one day, in the Central Prison, on a charge of theft and assault. The ground of application for the habeas corpus is that the warrant of commitment does not allege that Macdonald was convicted. He was remanded for three days and it was contended on his behalf that that period should be counted in the term of his sentence. It is also alleged that there is a question whether there is any such person as the "keeper" of the Central Prison, to whom the warrant is directed, the statutory name of the chief officer there being "Warden."

DEATH OF MR. WM. J. ELLIOTT.

On Friday night last word was received that Mr. W. J. Elliott, who was hunting with a party at Sandy Lake, was seriously ill with inflammation of the bowels. His brothers, Messrs Harry and Matthew, immediately set out to remove the sick man to his home, but when they arrived at the hunter's camp they were made acquainted with the sad news that their brother had about a half hour previously passed into the great beyond.

The remains were removed to the deceased's late home in Dummer, from where the funeral took place on Monday afternoon. A large number of sympathising and sorrowing friends followed the remains to their last resting place in the Norwood cemetery.

The late Mr. Elliott had always been an enthusiastic hunter and fisher, and for the past thirty years has seldom missed spending the open season for deer hunting in the woods. When he went away this year he felt in his usual state of health and was thoroughly enjoying the outing when the hand of sickness laid him low. Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, was immediately sent for, but could do nothing for the suffering man. Deceased leaves a wife and one son, and a daughter to mourn his loss.

Messrs. S. Hendren, Fred Pearce and M. Knox returned on Saturday evening from the woods, where they have spent two weeks hunting. They captured three fine deer.

Mr. J. Lonergan is visiting in Peterborough.

Mr. J. Ryan and family, who are residing on Queen street, are preparing to remove to Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Nicoll have moved into the brick house on Queen street formerly occupied by Mr. A. Blow.

We are pleased to say that Mrs. T. Finlay, who has been seriously ill, and was taken to a hospital in Toronto last week, is reported to be somewhat better.

Miss Una Duffield, who has spent several weeks in Toronto, returned to her home here on Saturday night.

Preparations are being made for the "Hot Chicken Pie Supper," and entertainment in the Methodist church on Monday evening, Nov. 22nd.

Evangelistic services commenced in the Presbyterian church on Sunday last. Rev. Mr. Mitchell is conducting them. All the Protestant churches of Norwood are joining heartily in the meetings. A sunbeam choir, consisting of the children of the different churches, helps with the singing on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of the week.

HON. G. P. GRAHAM SHOULD BE CALLED UPON TO RESIGN

While criticism of British policy is permissible and invited and while it is, of course, an admitted fact that the mother country has committed errors of policy, and perhaps even of right as have other nations, it is not permissible for a Minister of the Crown in Canada to flout his sovereign's representatives. Mr. Graham quite evidently has done so. The evidence quoted below is from a source friendly to him. La Patrie is a Liberal journal.

What can be said of such an utterance but that the author of it should cease to misrepresent loyal Canadian sentiment and be called upon to resign.

The Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, was reported in the Montreal Gazette by its Parliamentary reporter as having said that it would not be long before Britain would cease to send her representatives to Canada. Mr. Graham denied this. Now comes along "La Patrie" with a different version, but the same sentiment and on its own editorial responsibility. It says: "Our excellent Minister of Railways scandalised several of his loyal listeners the other day at the Windsor Hotel. Speaking before the Insurance Institute he did not hide this fact, that, personally, he was opposed to sending to England any contribution either in ships or money. Canada, he said, is now old enough to manage her own affairs without assistance, and England can cease sending any more representatives to us. This was a pretty straight invitation to Lords Roberts and Beresford to stay at home."

La Patrie has no adverse comment to make. The sentiment pleases it no doubt. But the sentiment does not please other provinces and Mr. Graham should be required to hand in his resignation.

ELEVATOR DROPPED AND WORKMAN WAS INJURED

Arthur Ladouceur, a carpenter, whose home is in Montreal, but who for the past four weeks has been employed, with other workmen, in erecting the power house at the new water works dam, met with an accident yesterday afternoon about four o'clock in which he had his right leg broken at a point just above the ankle.

Along with six other men, he was descending from the top of the building in an elevator, which is used for hauling up materials. During the descent the speed of the elevator is controlled by means of a brake, operated by the engineer, but at this particular time the friction was not sufficient, owing to its wet state, as a result of the rain during the day. This caused the elevator to drop rather quickly, and Ladouceur received the above-mentioned injury, while the other men escaped. Mr. Castleman, under whose supervision the building is being constructed, stated to the Review last night that previous to the accident he had descended on the elevator and noticed that the brake was not working properly. The engineer was notified by him to this effect, and told to use resin to make the friction effective, but he neglected to do this.

Dr. Frederick and the Dan Spence Ambulance were summoned and the injured man was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, where he received medical attention.

SUCCESSFUL PRODUCTION OF A CLEVER FARCE COMEDY

"All Charlie's Fault" Given by Amateur Players at St Peter's Hall Last Night — Conservatory Orchestra and Special Vocal Numbers— Play will be Repeated To-Night.

A comedy of many humorous qualities that were brought out to splendid advantage by a clever amateur cast was presented at St. Peter's Hall last night in aid of the library fund of St. Peter's school. The play was the bright and well written farce by Anthony Wells; "All Charlie's Fault." The piece is farcical in the broadest sense of the word and its mirth provoking possibilities hinges on a case of triple mistaken identity in which a genuine musical dignitary for whose reception elaborate preparations are being made in the home of General Blake, a retired merchant, is submitted to decidedly humiliating treatment on the misunderstanding of the socially ambitious general, who takes the musician for an irresponsible impostor on account of an article he had read in a paper telling of the escape from a lunatic asylum of one of the inmates who imagined he was the celebrated professor. When he announces himself as the professor his claim is not taken seriously, as the general's son Charlie has had Harry Doddsworth, his chum, pose as the professor and also employed Messenger Boy 999, to do the same thing. They are made up after the same manner and replace each other on the stage at opportune moments to the general's confusion and to the merriment of the audience. For this highly humorous complication Charlie, inclined to practical joking, is wholly responsible and after the plot has been unravelled when concealment is made impossible by the infuriated professor who has been locked up in a room owing to the general mistaking him for the lunatic, giving the general cause to suspect that he is the real professor after all. The play is brought to a conclusion by the originator of the deception coming forward, taking the responsibility for the mixup and thus admitting it was "all Charlie's fault." It will be seen from this partial summary of the plot that there is plenty of room for ludicrous comedy situations and these opportunities were taken full advantage of by the company in a very creditable and highly amusing manner.

The farce is written in two acts, the setting for both being the drawing room of the Blake mansion and the stage was appropriately dressed for the scene. The locale is New York city and the action all takes place in one day.

In regard to the merit of the cast it would be a difficult matter to individualize, as all acted up to the demands of their parts and the different roles were most acceptably taken.

The cast was as follows:

Sweetens the Stomach and, best of all, it makes you yourself feel sweet.
Abbey's Effervescent Salt
SOLD EVERYWHERE. 27

General Blake, a retired merchant, James J. Doris.

Charley, his son, James O'Brien.

Harry Doddsworth, his friend, Herb. Callaghan.

Professor Krieger, a professor of music, Leo Derocher.

No. 999, W.U.T.Co, a messenger boy, Egbert Kelly.

Chips, a colored waiter, Stanley Lewis.

Miss Margaret Blake, Miss Derocher; Miss Eleanor Blake, Miss G. Clancy, General's daughters.

Kitty, in the General's employ, Miss Carrie White.

There was a large and much interested audience in attendance and the applause and laughter showed a distinct appreciation of the play and the entertaining efforts of the company presenting it.

Before the curtain went up on the first act an orchestra of twelve players from the Conservatory Orchestra under Mr. Glidden's directory, played a couple of selections that were cordially received. The opening number was the beautiful concert march "Farewell of the Gladiators" and the second one was Paul Linckes captivating and popular intermezzo "The Glow Worm." This was encored enthusiastically and was repeated by the orchestra.

Between the acts Miss Lavina Hallihan gave in a delightfully sung number of tender appeal "Heart of My Heart," and as a recall, sang Bernard Daly's "Coo' song. Mr. Harry Quinlan sang "The Deep Blue Sea" in good voice and with excellent expression and for an encore a popular arrangement of that captivating melody "Killarney."

"All Charlie's Fault" with the special musical features will be repeated again this evening and with the advantage of one public performance should be presented even more skilfully than it was last night.

When Men Powdered Their Faces.

The use of powders for the hair and face, which began in the sixteenth century, infected the men. Henry III. had the habit of parading the streets of Paris, his face covered with white and red paste, like a faded coquette, and his hair filled with violet powder and scented with musk. Powders were made of all colors, and the infatuation was such that servant girls were afraid to be seen in public with their hair of the natural color and, not being able to buy that used by their employers, employed sawdust as a substitute.

CATARRH CURED

No Cure, No Pay, is a Most Generous Offer

To get an antiseptic strong enough to reach the membrane at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

The inflamed condition will go, too, and the suffering, hawking and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease.

Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate when Wm. Madill has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if, after a fair trial, Hyomei does not cure catarrh.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs a dollar, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip.

THE PLAYTIME OF LIFE.

Let the Boy Have Plenty of Time For Recreation.

Boyhood is the playtime of life. It is the business of a boy to play and that with all the zest which he may put into his work in after years in order that his mind and body may develop the vigor pertaining to man's estate. To this end sports are universally encouraged and boys are offered every opportunity to indulge in play, while child labor laws become more searching and rigid with every passing year. In addition to health and strength, confidence is also developed by the boy who learns to play his part and maintain his caste among other boys. This confidence, coming to the boy almost as an incident, he carries with him through life, and it aids him more than any other one thing to hold up his head among men.

Is your boy timid? Is it difficult to persuade him to make his way among boys? Is he slow to make friends? A little investigation will probably develop that the timid boy has been allowed to play only on rare occasions with other boys. His playtime may not be restricted, but his companionship with other boys has been too closely guarded. Thus handicapped a boy, or girl either for that matter, goes into the world of people carrying a distressing weight of doubt in himself.

Only play will develop this priceless self confidence. The boy who has learned the hard lessons of life when he should have been playing many times does accomplish much in life, but the chances are against him, and he usually makes his way craftily, mistrusting those with whom he is thrown and refusing to credit them with honest motives rather than boldly taking his place among them and relying for his chances of success upon a wholesome confidence in himself.

The lessons learned in boyhood are never forgotten and become an integral part of the life of the man.

Too frequently are childhood's bypaths hung thickly with warning signs. A rollicking boy is told that he is going to be bad. What more natural than that he should be, with such suggestion ringing in his ears?

Tiny children are warned of bears and bugaboos that will catch them, and later danger signals telling about germs and microbes and multitudinous evils are strung along their happy pathway.

Possibly the rod may not be altogether spared, but after all it is the loving hand that leads more quickly than the rod can drive, and it is the boy or girl who is wholesomely loved, not coddled and secluded, through childhood who faces the world later with the best fighting chance.
